Poetry.

WHAT IS LIFE.

BY E. C. STEDMAN.

'What is life?' I asked a maiden,
Soft of eye and amber tressed,
Singing ballads, parlor-laden
To the airs she loved the best.
Hid she 'mouth her measure;' blushing
Redder than the sun above;
Silent, for her thoughts were rushing
Towards the gentle sun of 'Love!'

'What is life?' I asked a stripling;
And he turned with eyes alight,
Where the ocean, ever rippling,
Weaked on him a way from sight;
Pointed to proud vessels sailing,
Treasure-laden toward the west;
Listened to the sea-bird's hailing,
And she answered 'Fame!'

'What is life?' An old man fat'ning,
Glanced, and with a wiser air;
Where the dear o'er grasses glist'ning
Shone in the sweet morning air;
Glanced on quiet graves beyond him,
Sadly on the chair unfilled;
Knew I shoo his grief had bonded him
For a moment sad and chilled,
Rising then and smiling, even,
Folded his hands in prayer,
Turned his aged eyes to heaven—
'Life?' he answered—'mine is there!'

Selections.

A WOMAN HATER.

An advertisement appeared in a daily paper for a milliner and shop girl, at Madame Lavalle's, No. 121 Pearl Street.

A pair of slender hands turned the paper over, a pair of brown eyes wandered up and down the long column of "Wants" until they rested upon this.

The very place, mamma, said Viola Barnett. And forthwith the little hat and neat mantle were donned, and soon she was walking in the direction of Pearl Street.

I dare say that there have been a great many before me, she thought. But, surely there is no harm in trying, when mamma and I need money so much; and its coming all depends upon me.

It did not take long to bring her to 121, Pearl Street, and she paused before the glass door to collect herself. There was but one lady within, and she felt much relieved, for she expected to see a crowd of eager applicants, among whom her chance would be but slight; and, to find it all quiet, and no one to fear save the aforesaid lady engaged in looking over some books in the rear, was a pleasant unexpected.

She entered, and the lady came forward. She was not very young, perhaps thirty, with a pretty, kindly face; and when Viola made known her errand, she gave a little laugh, and said, Dear me! I am delighted! Such a string of applicants as I have had, and all of them sour-looking old maids.—We should not have five customers in a week. What a sweet face you have!—Have you ever had any experience?

Yes, I have worked in the establishment of Miss Latouche for over a year.

Ah! her name is well known, and her work much admired. I am sure you will suit me. Wh a will you begin?

Now, if you wish. I am anxious to begin as soon as you can find work for me.

Dh begin at once; and to give me a specimen of your work, take this hat and trim it. You must know, my dear Miss—Burnett.

Ah yes, Miss Burnett, that I have a brother, who is, in fact, the owner of this establishment, and it is to him you must look for directions; for to tell the truth, I am soon to be married!

Viola nodded, and allowed the little Frenchwoman to go on.

I am a widow and have lived two long years in a state of single wretchedness, and have now resolved to agess marry. This fact, you must understand, brings you directly under the attention of Mr. Paul Lavalle, who, by the way, I must inform you, is a thorough woman-hater.

Is he old? asked Viola.

No; he is young; but he so utterly despises women that I believe he would discharge you, were you to ask a question beyond your business. He is polite, for all that, and may offer you the attention due to a lady; but I beg you to refuse every offer; for, if you do not, you will not long remain here.

The request was a strang one, but, nevertheless, easily granted; and she readily promised to do all that was in her power to retain her situation.

It was late in the afternoon before the gentleman arrived, and Viola only caught a glimpse of a tall, handsome man; then bent her eyes resolutely upon her work.

My brother, Miss Burnett!

Miss Burnett raised her beautiful eyes for a moment, and then went on with her work.

Do you fancy this work, Miss Burnett? he asked.

Yes sir.

I am glad, for Adele is very hard to please. Do you think you will be content to remain?

Yes, sir.

The gentleman turned away, evidently thinging it useless to try to engage her in conversation, and she went soberly on with her work.

It rained when the hour came for Viola's return home, and she stood a moment at the door, looking out into the dark wet streets.

Miss Burnett, said Mr. Lavalle, allow me to see you home under my umbrella.

Viola was surprised. Not only because he was a rich man and she a poor milliner and she wondered at his offer.

No, thank you, she replied; I can go alone.

He had not time to repeat the offer before she was out and half-way down the street.

It was darker than she had supposed and the rain fell in torrents; but she drew her mantle tightly around her and with bowed head she walked swiftly along.—Before she reached the end of the street, there came the sound of sharp, quick steps upon the pavement, and Paul Lavalle came up beside her.

Of course you think me very bold, but I prefer to run the risk of incurring your displeasure, rather than see you endanger your health by exposing yourself on such a night as this.

He drew her head within his arm, and together they went on to Mrs. Burnett's door. Viola allowed him to carry on the conversation, answering only when directly questioned, and then in monosyllables. She could not help thinking, however, what a pleasant, agreeable gentleman he was and had repeated her promise to madame; he also managed to keep it, and bade him a formal good night with a cool little speech of thanks for his kindness.

She had no desire to loose her situation, but she was almost inclined to disbelieve madame's story. Well, it might be true; and if so, woman-haters were certainly very agreeable creatures.

The work became a pleasure since daily the establishment was brightened with the unseen presence; but Viola never forgot madame's warning. It was all in vain that bouquets and flowers, and printed [illegible] were left at her door, addressed to her pleasantress; and once when he chanced to clasp her white hand in the midst of a confused tangle of ribbons, she never spoke or smiled; and he would not have known that she observed the action, but for a dash of blood which swept across her round cheeks.

There were many more rainy nights and many times the umbrella was brought forth; and under its cover Viola trudged home beside Paul Lavalle. She thought him a strange man, and felt that madame had never clearly understood him. He seemed very unlike her notion of a woman-hater.—

One day he dropped a note into her lap, saying, Here is a letter for you Miss Burnett. You will send a reply before I come again,—and he went away, leaving her to stare wonderfully at the little note.

After a while she opened it, and read—

"VIOLA,—

You are a strange being, and I cannot understand you. But I understand my own heart, and it bids me say I love you. Will you give me the blessed right to call you mine, my wife? I told you I must know your reply before I come again, and so it must be. Viola, my darling I await your answer.

PAUL LAVALLE."

A joyous light broke over her face, and with ecstasy of happy tears, she wrote beneath, "I will be your wife."

Why are you so bright, Viola? asked madame, who had entered.

Your brother, madame, has asked me to be his wife

And you told him.—

Yes.

My sweet Viola! I knew that my plan would succeed. I had worked for months to bring the change in Paul's fortunes, but had been thus far unsuccessful. He declared that all women were husband-haters, and that he would never marry one of them.—I know it is an instant that you would please him, and so I treasured up the whole story.

You will wonder at my anxiety, but will cease to do so when I tell you that I cannot marry until he is settled in life. But bless your heart, I am delighted.

Paul came in, as less than an hour and told her the same story; and together they walked to Viola's home, and her mother joined in their happiness. If he ever was a woman-hater, he laid it aside when he married, and became a model husband.

IRRITABILITY.

Irritability is more than a most unlovely state, a sin of the flesh. It is not like envy, malice, spite, revenge, a voice which we may suppose to belong equally to an embodied and a disembodied spirit. In fact it comes nearer to physical depravity than anything I know of. There some bodily states, some condition of the nerves, such that we could not conceive of even an angelic spirit confined in a body thus discarded, as being able to do anything more than simply endure. It is a state of nerve-torture; and the attacks which nervous victims make on others are as much the result of a disease as the snapping and biting of a patient convulsed with hydrophobia. Then again there are other people who go through life loving and beloved, desired in every circle, held up in the church as examples of the power of religion, who after all, deserves no credit for these things. Their spirits are fledging in animal nature so tranquil, and so cheerful; all the secretions which come to them are so fresh so vigorous and pleasant, that they cannot help viewing the world charitably, and seeing everything through a glorified medium. The illtemper of others does not provoke them; perplexing business does not set their nerves vibrating; and all their life long they walk in the serene sunshine of animal health. Look at Rover, there. He is never nervous, never cross, never snaps or snarles, and is ready, the moment after the grossest affront, to wag the tail of forgiveness—all because kind nature has put his dog body together so that it works harmoniously. If everybody in the world were gifted with a stomach and nerve like his, it would be a far happier and better world, no doubt. The man said a good thing who made the remark that the foundation of all intellectual and moral worth must be laid in a good, healthy animal life. Now I think it is undeniable that the peace and happiness of the home circles are very generally much invaded by the recurrence of its members of these states of bodily irritbility. Every person if he thinks the matter over, will see that his condition in life, the character of his friends, his estimate of their virtues and failings his hopes and expectations, are all very much modified by these things. Cannot we remember of going to bed as very ill-used prosecuted individuals, whose friends were unreasonable, whose life was full of trials and crosses; and waking up on a bright bird singing morning, to find all our illusions gone with the fogs of the night? Our friends are nice people, after all the little things that annoyed us look ridiculous by sunshine, and we were fortunate individuals. The Philosophy of life, then as this matter is concerned must consist of two things; first, to keep ourselves out of irritable bodily states, and second to understand and control these states when we cannot ward them off.

Mr. Spurgeon, having been greatly disturbed by persons fainting during the services at his tabernacle, has caused it to be made known to the ladies who indulge in this habit that no future they will not have the privilege of being carried out, but that water and smelling bottles will be placed in different parts of the building for their use.

WANT OF MERCY.

In a small town on the Ayrshire coast these things have occurred within the last forty years. A clergyman in the church of Scotland forced one woman and married another, having been rendered for the moment by the passion for gold. The furies of remorse immediately assailed him. And then came furies from without—the furies of Scottish wrath at his mean and mercenary deed. He was a proud and sensitive man, and on Sunday morning, not having the courage to face his congregation he shot himself. A clergyman of the Free Church went astray in a somewhat more objectionable manner. In England or he was not really a bad man, mercy would have come to him, would have pardoned him, and would have held him to his ministry. Scottish [illegible] at his pleasantness; and once when he chanced to clasp her white hand in the midst of a confused tangle of ribbons, she never spoke or smiled; and he would not have known that she observed the action, but for a dash of blood which swept across her round cheeks.

There were many more rainy nights and many times the umbrella was brought forth; and under its cover Viola trudged home beside Paul Lavalle. She thought him a strange man, and felt that madame had never clearly understood him. He seemed very unlike her notion of a woman-hater.—

How to Ripen Tomatoes Early.

First, have stout tapering plants, by giving them plenty of room, sunlight and air from the commencement of growth. Then study the habits of the plant and you will see that from the main stem, at throws out at interval, long rough leaves and at a later period from above the junction of these leaves with stem start out secondary stems, with the same habit as the original. These continue to multiply themselves until you have a large vine and plenty of small green fruit, necessarily late in ripening for the reason that force of the plant has been spending in producing vine. Do not wait thus long and think to remedy the matter by slashing off the vine at random, to let in sunlight as is a common practice, begin with the plant in time, and train it to suit you. The time to begin trimming is just when the first cluster of flower buds begin to appear. This will generally be at the junction of the further fifth leaf mentioned. At this time secondary stems will be seen above the junction of all the leaves below. Here begin your work:—Pinch them all off at once and when they start out again as they will, pinch off again until you conquer. You have now stopped the making of vine below this cluster of flower buds and all the strength and juices of the plant are sent upwards pushing forward the cluster of flowers and the secondary stems above. After a little commence your work above, and pinch off all these secondary stems, except enough to leave five or six clusters of fruit. Your vine so long as you continue to pinch off these stems, checked both top and bottom.—Keep it tied up to a strong stake and in due time your vine will be almost completely hidden by a mass of ripe fruit, all in the sunlight.

The Fallen Son.

Follow me home from the scene of his debauch. He is an only son. On him the hopes of the family are centered. Every nerve has strained to give him the choicest education. Parents and sisters gloried in his talents and looked forward to his future fame. Alas already these visions are less bright.

Enter now the family circle. Parents surrounded by lovely daughters. Within the circle reigns peace, virtue and refinement.—The evening has been spent in animated conversation and the sweet interchange of affectionate endearment. But there is one who used to share all this, who was the centre of that circle. Why is he not here? The hour of devotion has come; they kneel before their Father and God. A voice that used to mingle in the praises is wanting. An hour rolls away another hour has gone. Why has all cheerfulness gone? Why do these parents start at every foot-step?

The step of that son and brother is heard. The door is open—he staggers in before them and is stretched out at their feet in all the loathsomeness of intoxication.

Oh, who shall tell the sorrows of a home made dark with sin!

The Protestant Congres which assembled at Worms on May 31st, was attended by 20,000 persons, including representatives from all the States of Germany. The Congress, by a unanimous vote, resolved against the Papal exhortation to return to the Roman Church, and in condemnation of the Encyclical letter and Syllabus. The idea of the formation of a United German Church is mooted.

Mr. Beecher describes the fashionable religion as follows: "Religion to them is a beautiful coat of broadcloth and a magnificent coat of silk, locked arm-in-arm, and walking to Grace Church, and sitting and listening to resplendent music, surrounded by respectable people, that send cards through their gentlemen's hands to each other."

Seasonable Hints to Fancy Farmers.

To have your fields well dressed you must sow as large a breadth as possible.—A grain of foresight in this matter will insure a sight of grain at harvest.

A man may fleece his sheep but not his land. Two farmer's game is 'give and take.'

It is not a lazy farmer who takes to his bed in the morning and stays till night—if the bed is in the garden.

Ploughshares are the best investment—the dividends are sure in fall.

Pawning is not commendable: but there is no objection to carrying favor with one's cattle.

The best motto for dealing in stock buy in—never sell short.

It is about necessary to sheep shears too early; take care your sheep have their overcoats about the same time.

Now is the time for the farmer to mend his ways—highways and byways.

Kitchen gardens should be under picket guard—the fowls will come up to the scratch if the farmer don't.

Fences should be look'd to. Defence of the crops is often staked on a single post.

Raise all you can. If you can raise the mortgage on your farm so much the better.

Thorough cultivation is essential; the more barrow-in-pins you take the better off you will be in the end.

It is better to spend an hour hanging loose doors and gates than in hanging round taverns and stores.

It is better to whitewash your own walls than to blacken your neighbor's character.

D H days may be spent in harrowing dentistry on your robes and harrows.

If any one shows, let him spend his tobacco money for the benefit of the 'gregarious' in the back hair of his colts and calves.

A little soot from the chimney will suit the early cucumbers and nonsuit the bugs.—Commercial Bulletin.

BROTHER AND SISTER.—As fathers love daughters better than sons and mothers love their sons better than daughters so do sisters feel towards a brother a more constant sentiment of attachment than towards each other. None of the little vanities, heart-burnings, jealousies, that—alas for poor human nature!—are but too apt to spring up in female hearts, can (or at all events should) arise between brother and sister; each is proud of the other, because it cannot interfere with self—nay on the contrary, is flattering to self. Hence if there be a bond of family union more free from the selfish blots that interrupt all others, it is that which exists between an affectionate sister and brother.

WHAT TO DRINK.—A sensible article in the last 'Phrenological Journal' on the subject of 'What to drink,' contains the following in regard to hot weather drinks.

The warm season, now upon us, will increase our thirst. Water, pure water will be too thin, for those who chew or smoke tobacco, and they will want something they can 'taste'—something pungent, something bitter, tingling, biting. They find what they crave in whiskey, with fusil oil in it, or other similar drinks. But to an appetite that is healthy, nothing is more grateful or reviving, when thirsty, than water.

During the cross-examination of witness he was asked where his father was. To which question, with a melancholy air he responded: 'Dead, sir—dropped off very suddenly, sir,' 'How came he to drop off suddenly?' was the next question. 'Foul play, sir—the Sheriff imposed on his unsuspicious nature, and getting him to go on a platform to look at a select audience, suddenly he knocked a small trap door out from under him, and in falling he got entangled in a rope, from the effect of which he expired.'

Two young princes, the sons of Archduke Charles of Austria, had a warm dispute in the presence of no less a person than that of the august emperor himself. Greatly excited, one said to the other, 'You are the greatest ass in Venice!' Highly offended at a quarrel in his presence, the emperor interrupted them, saying with indignation, Come, come, young gentlemen, you forget that I am present.'

A DELINQUENT'S DREAM.—I had a dream the other night, when every thing was still; I dreamed I saw old Beelzebub a coming down the hill. My printer's bill was in his paw, and blood was in his eye; says he, Young man, your 'wants' draw, or else prepare to die! I gazed old Scotty in the face, and read my only chance, to avail myself of saving grace—' twas pay up in advance!

The passion for dress, about which we hear so much just now, is nothing new. An old satirist thus lampoons the ladies of the day:

What is the reason—can you guess—
Why men are poor, and women thinner?
So much do they for dinner dress,
That nothing's left to dress for dinner.

Old Squire B——was elected Judge of the inferior Court of some county in Georgia. When he went home, his delighted wife exclaimed 'now, my dear, you are judge, what am I?' 'The same darned old fool you allers was,' was the old man's reply.

An old author quaintly remarks: 'Avoid arguments with ladies. In spinning yarns avoid silks and satins, a man is sure to be worsted and twisted. And when a man is worsted and twisted, he may consider himself wound up.'

The papers relate an anecdote of a beautiful young lady, who had become blind, having recovered her sight after marriage. It is no uncommon thing for people's eyes to be opened by matrimony.

'Jim,' said one youngster to another on the first of July, 'Jim, lend me two cents till yer? I got up so early, that I spent all my money before breakfast. I didn't think the day was going to be so long.'

Stiggins, the now married man, says his wife is a perfect rose. The only drawback to his happiness is that she blows out perhaps a 'bottle' too often.

A learned Doctor, referring to the tight lacing, avers that it is a public benefit, inasmuch as it kills off of the foolish girls, and leaves the wise ones to grow up to women.

MY FIRST SIGHT OF THE QUEEN.

BY J. H. M., TORONTO.

It was in the month of February, 1857, just a little over two years ago. The scene was in London, and the occasion was the opening of Parliament by Her Majesty in person on the fifth day of that month. Many years had I wished for such an opportunity, and several efforts had I made to get a passing glimpse of her—but all in vain. Owing to the great seclusion in which Her Majesty lives, the opportunities of seeing her in public have been comparatively rare.

A "sight of her" is not easily forgotten or effaced from the memory—on the contrary, it is generally treasured up for years by all who may have been so favored—to be related to social and family circles, with all the incidents of the day, which retain their firm hold on the memory. Such, at any rate, in my own experience, for though the circumstances in which I saw her were not the most comfortable or agreeable as far as the weather was concerned, still I cannot help looking back with feelings of satisfaction at having undergone a little discomfort, to see the face and form of Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland.

This was not the first occasion on which she had opened Parliament since her long retirement; she had done so the year previous, 1856, but on that occasion I was disappointed, having been misled as to the time stated at which she was expected to return from Westminster—the result being that I got down to the Mall just in time to be too late to see her pass to Buckingham Palace.

My business location was in Upper Thames Street, not a thousand yards from the centre of the Dome of St. Paul's—a street famed for its numerous Iron and Metal, Paint and Drug, and other warehouses—so that I had a three mile journey before I could reach the line of procession; and, desiring to perform the journey in as little time as possible, I decided on going by the quickest route, namely, the "Penny Boats." The morning was fair but did not look at all propitious. Towards mid-day the clouds gathered gloomily overhead, and by one o'clock rain fell heavily. I embarked in one of these steamers, at St. Paul's wharf—a locality rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott in his "Fortunes of Nigel," for here it was that the hero of the story remained for some time in secession in the house of honest John Christie, the wharfinger of St. Paul's, and under the special care of dame Nelly, his wife.

Steaming up the river, we sailed underneath Blackfriars and Waterloo Bridges, passed in succession to the right, the famed "Tem

Peterboro and Haliburton Railway.

We give the following report for the benefit of those interested in a wooden railway to the back country:—

To the Ratepayers of the Municipalities of Harvey, Galway, Snowdon, Minden, Stanhope, Lutterworth, Anson, Dysart, and Somerville:

The Provisional Directors of the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway having received a very favorable Report of the character of the country through which it is proposed to carry this road, have appointed the undersigned to wait on the several Municipalities to be more immediately benefitted by the construction of this road, in order to ascertain if you are disposed to grant such aid by way of bonus to the undertaking, as your several circumstances will permit. The Directors are induced thus early to take this step, as they are convinced that without your substantial aid it will be impossible to build the road. While on the other hand they are equally confident that if the aid asked is freely given, the undertaking can be brought to a successful termination.

In order that the undersigned might be fully conversant with the practical working of wooden railways, and their suitableness for the purposes contemplated, they were instructed to visit the one now in operation in Clifton in the State of New York, which we have done, and have no hesitation in saying that our most sanguine expectations have been more than realized. It would be superfluous for us, after the many descriptions already published, to here enter into the several details of its mode of construction, capacity for carrying freight, &c.

Suffice it to say, that in our opinion, for developing a new country like our own, the wooden rail, from its economic of construction, as compared with iron, is placed within the reach of localities only able to command a limited amount of capital for such a purpose, while the safety with which it may be made to carry passengers at the rate of 10 to 12 miles per hour, including stoppages; and the quantity of freight which can be passed over it, render it not only suitable for our purposes for very many years to come, but sufficient for the wants of many of the older settled parts of the Province; hence its introduction cannot but be of the greatest advantage in developing our varied resources.

The importance of affording railway communication to that part of the country through which it is proposed to construct this road, can hardly be over-estimated, possessing as it does so many sources of profitable employment, independent of that already afforded by the manufacture of timber and saw logs which can only be developed by some such mode of communication.

We need scarcely remind you of the large quantities of Pine now left to rot in the woods, or become food for devastating fires, which could be manufactured into shingles; or of valuable timber suitable for stave-bolts, etc., or of the fine forests of Birch, Maple and Beech, which now are all incumbrances to the settler, but which would, with the construction of this road, become sources of wealth, to the hardy pioneer, by converting that which is now to him a source of expense into profit. Besides such sources of wealth as these, there can be little doubt that this Road would be the means of developing your mineral resources, which are by no means to be despised, as evinced by the operations of the Galway Mining Company.

The introduction of the large population which will undoubtedly follow the construction of the Road, and which will be employed in a variety of pursuits, cannot but do much to overcome the comparative roughness of the country with which the agriculturist has to contend, inasmuch as the demand thus created, must enhance the prices of everything which the farmer produces, while the price of all he has to buy will be sensibly decreased.

We feel assured that when you have considered the many advantages which must accrue to you from the construction of the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway, with the extension to Minden, as not only the few ways suggested by us, but in the numerous ways which must present themselves to your minds, you will come forward cheerfully and grant to the utmost extent permitted by the Municipal Act, the Bonus asked.

In order that no time may be lost in obtaining your decision upon this important subject, the undersigned propose so soon as the necessary arrangements can be made, to visit the several Municipalities interested, and hold meetings (of which due notice will be given) for the purpose of bringing this matter more fully before you, when they will be happy to afford such further information as you may desire, and submit the proposed By-law for your consideration.

TURNING THE TABLES.—The remarkable intelligence of the colored officials in the South must be gratifying to their Northern Radical patrons. Ben Marks, an ebony gentleman of Montgomery, Ala., had to go to jail, and Joe Williams, another colored brother, was made an officer for the time being by a justice of the peace and deputized to take him there. On the way to jail the prisoner got the officer drunk, and taking the commitment out of his pocket, presented it to the jailer and had the officer locked up. When constable Joe awoke from his drunken sleep he found himself a prisoner and Ben was far away. He stoutly denied taking anything to drink, and said: 'Something's wrong, or other, fust I knew de squire meant to write we down officer, an' Ben for Jail.'

ROGUERY IN THE PUBLIC DEPARTMENT.—Affairs in Cadada seem to be getting from bad to worse. We have to-day to chronicle embezzlement in the public departments.—A despatch from Ottawa says:—G. C. Richardson, Confidential Clerk in the Receiver Generals Department, was arrested and sent to gaol this evening, being charged with appropriating public money passing through his hands. He was remanded until Monday.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular spot of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co. employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and processions (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

NEW WARD SCHOOLS.

The School Board met on Tuesday evening, as will be seen by our report in another column, and discussed the erecting of a Ward School, but unfortunately could not agree as to site. At the last meeting it was resolved to build it on the North part of the present Union School grounds, and most assuredly nothing but the most cogent reasons should induce them to change a resolution already agreed to. The season, however, is advancing, and yet another month is put off. It will then be August, and if a tie should be on the choice, another month will go, and then it will be too late in the season; it must be put off till next summer.

Would it really not be as wise to bring the subject of site to test at once, and when settled by resolution let it remain so, no matter where situated. Then comes the idea of small Ward Schools. This has been attempted without success, nor will they ever succeed while the same subjects are taught in the Union School as are taught in the Ward Schools. The children will go to the best building, and who can hinder them. If petty Ward Schools are erected they will never be patronised; private schools will spring up just beside them, and will flourish too, because they will be considered more respectable.

These petty Ward Schools will be kept just as the present North Ward School is. The walls of the house are that filthy that no one of respectability cares to send their children to it, and they have been so for more than six months. Surely the town is not so poor that it cannot afford to spend a few shillings in cleaning and white-washing inside, and fitting it up to do until a better one be obtained.

It will just be so with all such schools; few, if any, of the Trustees will ever enter them. They will have the name of being for the poor, and of course poorly kept; and as in Canada there is only one day between the poor man and the rich man, the poor will not send to them, nor will the rich. Let a good building be erected; it will suit the greatest number, and let it be properly kept, and then all will attend it; and most assuredly the best place for the whole town is as near the Union School as possible. The centre length of the town (even as proposed by the Council) is not over two miles, its breadth about one mile. The distance, therefore, cannot be such a bug-bear. In fact the great desideratum is a good school in a respectable neighborhood, neatly kept inside, and favorable surroundings, and there is no fear for attendance.

Last winter there was an unceasing complaint about close room. When winter comes again Mrs. Charlier must return to her old cage, unless a new place be erected, and hence the wisdom of commencing at once, so as to have it completed before the cold or wet weather compels the Primary department to remove from the girls clothes room.

The meeting of the Royal Canadian Bank Shareholders at Toronto, was very noisy. There was considerable recrimination of Directors, Solicitors, and others. There can be no doubt in the public mind, that the contentions of the Board, and the large discounts and accommodation given to directors, aided in causing the crisis. The withdrawal of the government account also affected its credit. It is expected to resume specie payment soon, and under favourable circumstances, with new President and Directors except one or two. This may restore public confidence, and with careful management in future it will succeed.—The new President and Directors are:—Mr. Crawford, Toronto; Mr Thompson, do. Mr. McGee, Lumber merchant, King Station; Mr. Crombie, Galt; Mr. Wm. Barber, Georgetown; Mr. Wm. M. Giverin, Hamilton; Mr. J. H. Dumble Cobourg. Mr. Manning has protested against Mr. Thompsons election, but he is not likely to succeed.

A Mr. Reitenstein, confidential clerk in the Receiver General's office, at Ottawa, has been detected in embezzling large sums of money. He succeeded in issuing false drafts on various municipalities for clergy reserve money, had them collected through the Ontario Bank and placed to Reitenstein's credit. The last of these was collected as late as June 9th. Charges are made on six cases, but there are several others not yet made. The total amount is between $20,000 and $25,000. A considerable portion of this has been repaid. The matter is not yet disposed of.

PRESS ASSOCIATION.—The Annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association takes place at Cobourg, on Tuesday, July 20th; after which, excursions will be made to Rice Lake, and around the eastern part of Lake Ontario.

EMIGRATION.

We see by the Globe that 30 emigrants were to reach Toronto yesterday, and 400 were daily expected. These comprehend all classes of laborers and mechanics. The discontented Englishmen who came out some time ago have written home, giving a sad picture of Canadian life. Since writing the letters they have repented, and have concluded to try Canada awhile. The following letter and remarks we clip from the Globe of yesterday:

The following is a very important letter received by Mr. Donaldson yesterday from England. It presents a somewhat new phase of the Emigration question, and one which has perhaps been a little too much overlooked, in the cry for labourers. An influx of English yeomen, such as the writer of this letter seems to be, would be a valuable augmentation to our agricultural population:

PARSLY, Tamworth, England, June 24th, 1869.

DEAR SIR,—Pardon my troubling you,—Mr. Dixon mentioned your name to me through my having written a note to Mr. White. The Niagara District, and also Peterborough neighbourhood, were named as eligible localities for emigrants with a little capital, say £3,000 or £4,000, desiring to settle down on land. For such amount, with a large family, may I ask whether there would be any difficulty in finding a farm for sale of 100 to 200 acres in those districts, with house-room on it—a fair sized house, and useful land, and would you give me some general idea of prices per acre?

There seems to be ample information in this country for emigrants of the working classes, but scarcely any for the class next above them,—say a person desiring to farm with capital, as named above. With agricultural produce so much lower in price than here, and labour so much higher, the apparent benefit of the exchange of a rented farm in England for a freehold one in Canada (as to yearly profit) is not very clear to farmers here. May I take the liberty to ask your judgment as to the prospect of prosperity for such a settler as I have named above? I shall be exceedingly obliged, and others besides myself It is surprising how little is known here about Canada, whose interest it would most decidedly be to leave this over-crowded country and settle there.

I am, dear sir, greeting,
WILLIAM TOLSON.

J. A. DONALDSON, Esq.,

P. S.—A Canadian newspaper is rarely seen here.

There can be no doubts but that an industrious man with three or four thousand pounds in cash, could get a good farm and all the accommodation he could desire, in this County, his chances of success depending entirely on business habits and industry. It is too often the case that men having money spend it foolishly, and have afterwards to lament their folly; at the same time there are abundant chances of success for the man that has money and also for the industrious man that has no money. The writer of the above and more of the same class will find wealthy farmers willing to sell their improved farms and move further back to commence de novo with the hopes of increasing their acres for their sons; and there need be no fears on the part of emigrants, but this country will prove just as happy and prosperous to them as the land they leave. The world is generally what people make it, and so will Canada be. This county is no doubt one of the most eligible for farming, manufacturing or mercantile pursuits. In the old townships the soil is of the best quality, and for those of small means there is room further back, while our immense water power and lumber regions offer a tempting field for manufactories which capital would soon erect. By all means let farmers with capital come amongst us. They will induce our most enterprising men to move back, clear up and extend our settlements in different directions.

GENEROUS.—Dame rumour has it, that Roman Catholic Ratepayers are subscribing to pay the Charity tax of a certain gentleman near Peterboro, so that he may not have to violate his conscience in paying a half cent to the Protestant Home. They will no doubt, succeed in raising the amount, although large, it would be a source of sorrow to even Protestants to have additional pains heaped on him for such a grievous sin, as paying a half cent to relieve some starving Protestant, although, perhaps, said creature may once have been as proud an Irishman, as ever left the Emerald Isle.

CANADA PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—This Church now finds it necessary to divide into four Synods, with one general Synod, or Assembly. There are about 300 ministers belonging to this Church. About one third of these, and an equal number of Elders will meet in general Assembly, as a Supreme Court. The Local Synods will be those of Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and London.

TWELFTH OF JULY.—The Orangemen of Lindsay and County of Victoria are to celebrate the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne in Bobcaygeon this year. We believe that Lakefield Lodge has also determined to go to Bobcaygeon. The boat will leave Bridgenorth at 8 o'clock that morning. The brethren of the town intend visiting Millbrook on that day.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to thank the friends named below for donations in June:—Mrs. Alex. Smith, 300 cabbage plants; Mrs. Coulter, side of mutton; Miss Nesbitt, parcel of clothing; Mrs. White, of Monaghan, 2 qrs. meat; Mrs. Macdonnell, piece of bacon; Mrs. A. Smith, 2 parcels of clothing, 50 kail plants, 50 tomato plants.

An address from the Canada Presbyterian Church, was presented on Wednesday last to the Governor General, by Mr. Willis, D. D. Rev. Messrs. Wardrope, Moore and White. Sir John Young, made a very suitable reply, speaking in complimentary terms of the zeal, wisdom, and liberal principles, of the Presbyterian Church.

The Provincial Agricultural Association Show is likely to be held at Toronto this year; the people of London not being willing to expend the sum necessary, $7,500 or so, to fit up the Agricultural buildings, which are very much the worse of being used by Her Majesty's troops.

SOUTH RENFREW.—Mr. J. L. McDougall is elected for South Renfrew by 200 of a majority over Mr. Cameron. Mr. McDougall is a staunch reformer. At the close of the first day he was 157 ahead, with five new townships to hear from. Mr. Cameron resigned that evening.

An assault with intent, &c., was made last Friday on a young French girl, while engaged in picking berries in Belmont. Not being able to identify the right party, the scamp gets free.—Can.

HIGH SCHOOL BOARD.

The Board met on Tuesday night. All the members present but Mr. Reynolds.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Secretary read a letter from Mrs. Charlier, asking for an increase of salary, and also that the seats in her room be repaired to suit little children.

A letter was also read from H. J. Hutton, in reference to ventilating and heating the School buildings on the Battan principle.—

During the discussion, [relating to an increase in Mrs. Charlier's salary,] a member of the Board remarked, that Mrs. Charlier was sending one of her daughters to the Nuns' School, and he thought it was very strange, as he believed she could be as well taught in the Union School.

On motion of Mr. Clanton, seconded by Mr. Helm, the salary of Mrs. Charlier was raised to $240 per annum, commencing with July 1st.

In reference to Mr. Battan's letter, it was agreed to have him come and put in one of his stoves on trial, under the direction of a committee.

Some members of the Board believe Mr. Battan can heat the whole building with two stoves. The public will agree with them if Mr. Battan puts in his stove this month. But what about the months of January and February.

The special committee appointed to provide plans and specifications of probable cost of a building for a Ward School, were unable to report. Mr. Dumble, as chairman of the committee, offered some remarks, and opposed putting the proposed building, on the Union School grounds. He believed a suitable building could be erected for $2,000, and thought if the School Site in the North Ward was not suitable, a proper site should be purchased, as the cost of the site was a minor matter compared with the education of the children.

Mr. Stevenson was opposed to building on the present site, as it would bring too many children together He believed the Ward School should be erected in the South Ward, and a lot could be obtained for $500, and a neat small building would not cost more than $1500.

Mr. Coulter expressed himself in favour of building on the site the Trustees now have in the North Ward.

Mr. Clanton thought that the best place was on the present site of the Union School, where the wood could be cared for, and a general oversight be better maintained, than if the building was at a distance; and True tees would have to remember, that a Janitor would be required for any School, at a distance from the present School.

Mr. Gilmour thought they were wandering from the subject, and consequently out of order. The motion gave them power to report on plans and cost, not on site of the proposed School.

Mr. Dumble then moved, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the words referring to the site be left out of the motion of the last meeting.

Mr. Clanton asked how the vote would be taken.

The Secretary read a standing rule that required a majority of the Board to second or amend a resolution of a previous meeting. The vote being taken it stood, 6 for Mr. Dumble's motion and 4 against it.

Mr. Dumble then held that the chairman could vote; Messrs. Clanton, Gilmour and Cameron that he could not, unless when there was a tie.

Mr. Dumble then moved to go into committee of the whole on it. This, however, Mr. Clanton stigmatized as trickery, and it legal, not reasonable, that after defeat, seek to go into committee of the whole, and called on the chairman not to lend himself to such tricks.

Mr. Dumble then asked to be allowed to report next meeting of Board.

The Principal handed in his report for the months of May and June; the totals were: Boys 279, girls 249; average boys 271, girls 231. Total attendance 550; average 482. June being a broken month the attendance and average was somewhat less, being, boys 258, girls 239; boys average 247, girls 217. Total on roll 502, average 482. In the Grammar School the number on roll was 101 boys and 47 girls. The average of Grammar School attendance 73 in classics and 11 that were entered but non-classical. There were also 27 in the French class. He remarked that the number was now sufficient to enable them to become a collegiate institution.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Gilmour,—That while the Board receives the report of the Principal, it is with much pleasure that they observed the continued improvement of the school, under the undefatigable and able exertions of the present Principal and staff of teachers, and they desire to congratulate the Principal and his staff upon the result of the late examinations, and upon the great increase in the number of pupils.

THE HEARTH AND HOME.—This very excellent family paper is regularly received. Each number contains a large amount of information on agriculture and horticulture, besides other articles from the pen of popular and able writers. The hints to house keepers alone fully repay the amount of subscription. The next number will contain the beginning of a story, "The Romance of a Rich Young Girl," by Octave Feuillet, which promises to be very interesting and thrilling, and at the same time of a healthy tone of morality. Messrs. Pettingill & Co., 37 Park Row, New York, are the publishers; but it can be obtained at either Kidd's or Mannies' Book Stores.

AN ACCIDENT.—At a pic-nic held at Campbelltown, Otonabee, on Dominion Day, whilst a number of the young men were engaged in playing base ball, one of their number, Mr. Donnelly, met with rather a serious accident. He was running around the course and when between the "Byes," one of the opposite side threw the ball at him. The ball striking him in the side took such effect that for some time he was considered in a very precarious state.—After which, however, he began to recover so as to be able to be taken home. He is now doing well.—Com.

A RAILROAD TO THE NORTH WEST.—Millions are being spent to build an international railroad through the rocky regions to the Atlantic, where there will be no traffic.—Half the money would construct a road to the fertile plains of the Western territory, where millions of souls will soon be found in affluence. Let the lands build a road there, and it would create a market for the land in time, and twenty years would find the west as densely settled as Ontario.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, July 5th, 1869.

The Council met. Present—Messrs. English, Toole, Stevenson, Doherty, Helm, Dickson, O'Bierne, Rutherford, Edmison.

In the absence of the Mayor, Mr. Helm was called to the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read once and confirmed.

The Clerk submitted the return asked for at the last meeting of the Council of the disbursement in charities to the Catholics and Protestant poor for 1868 and half of 1869.

A communication was read from Miss Patton, Treasurer of the Protestant Home, stating the number of Catholics received and assisted in the Home.

A communication was also read from Mr. McFadden, Market Clerk, asking the Council to place seats around the Market House. The matter was referred to the Street Inspector, with instructions to act as he saw fit.

A petition was read from Messrs. Garvey & Kent, asking for a reduction in their shop license just taken out. The petition was received.

Petitions were read from Mat. Boyce and others, T. Menzies and others, E. C. Hill and others, asking repairs on streets. The petitions were referred to a special committee.

A report from the Inspector of Streets and Bridges, recommending improvements to the amount of $46, was received and adopted.

The petition of Messrs. Menzies, Hill, Boyce and others were referred to a special committee, consisting of Messrs. Toole, English, Stevenson and Dickson, with instructions to examine and report at next meeting.

On motion of Mr. English, seconded by Mr. O'Bierne, a committee, consisting of the mover, Messrs. Dickson, Stevenson and Toole, were appointed to examine Sherbrooke street and report at next meeting, as to whether any repairs or improvements be necessary, and if any, what.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, the communication of Miss Patton, and the statement of moneys extended in charities, were authorized to be published in the Examiner and Review.

The Committee appointed to consider the memorial to the Governor in Council to extend the limits of the town, and fix the wards beg leave to report as follows:

That they have examined into the matter submitted to them, and beg leave to recommend that the limits of the Corporation of the town, as extended, shall be as follows:

Commencing at a point in the Township of Smith on the Otonabee river where the southerly limit of the allowance for road between the first and second concessions of the said township strikes the said river; thence along the said southerly limit to the point at which the same strikes the eastern Communication Road; thence southerly along the easterly limit of the last mentioned road to the point at which the dividing line between lots one and two east of the Communication Road strikes the same; thence westerly along said dividing line until the same strikes the Communication Road aforesaid; thence southerly along said Communication Road to the boundary line between the said Township of Smith and the town; thence westerly along said boundary line to the allowance for road between the Park lots and township lot number twelve in the thirteenth concession of the Township of Monaghan; thence southerly along said road until it strikes the Otonabee river; thence following the river against the stream to the place of beginning.

And they further recommend that the town shall continue to be divided into four wards, named as at present—that is to say, the "North Ward," the "East Ward," the "Centre Ward" and the "South Ward."—That the Centre Ward shall be bounded as follows, that is to say: commencing at the angle formed by the western limit of George street and the northern limit of Charlotte street, thence along George street to Brock street, thence along Brock street to Rubidge street, thence along Rubidge street to the street running along the northern side of the block on which the Old Kirk building stands, thence along the said last mentioned street to Reid street, thence along Reid street to Brock street continued, thence along Brock street to Park street, thence along Park street to the allowance for road between Park Lots ten and eleven, thence along said allowance for road to the allowance for road between the park lots and the township lots, thence along said last mentioned allowance for road until it strikes "the Gravelled Road," thence along the said Gravelled Road to Park street, thence in a direct line to Charlotte street and thence along Charlotte street to the place of beginning. That the limits of the East Ward shall be as follows, that is to say: commencing at the southern end of George street where it is intersected by the creek running through the town, thence along George street to Smith street, thence along Smith street to the point at which the same is intersected by the public road leading to and past Blythe Mills, thence along said public road to the allowance for road between the first and second concessions of the Township of Smith, thence along said allowance for road to the river Otonabee, and thence southerly with the stream to the place of beginning. That the North Ward shall be all that part of the town, as extended, lying north of the Centre Ward and west of the East Ward; and that the South Ward shall be all that part of the town, as extended, lying to the southward of the Centre and East Wards.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

IVAN O'BEIRNE,
Peterboro, July 5, 1869. Chairman.

The report was received; and

On motion of Mr. Edmison, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the Mayor, or Chairman of the Council for the time being, was instructed to memorialize the Lieut.-Governor in Council to extend said limit, as set forth in the report.

The Chairman of the Finance Committee recommending the payment of $100 on account of Messrs. Weller & Hatton's account for $160.67. The report was received and adopted.

The Council adjourned for 3 weeks.

A return of the distribution of Charities in the Town of Peterborough, for the year 1868 and the first half of 1869, by order of the Town Council, 28th June, 1869.

J. EDWARDS,
Town Clerk.

Peterborough, July 1, 1869.

During 1868, there was expended for charities the sum of $681.71. The wholesale property of the town in 1868 was $1,347,771. The portion upon which the Roman Catholics paid taxes of this amount was $186,365; consequently, the Catholics paid of the $681.71 expended but $25.60, whilst they received directly $342.77 during 1868, which shows that Protestants were taxed and have paid $169 out of their pockets for the Catholic poor.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1869.

SIR,—In answer to your letter of enquiry of the 29th of June, I have to say, I am afraid it would be impossible to make out what proportion of the "Home" expenditure had been for the benefit, exclusively, of the Roman Catholic poor. No difference on religious ground is made in the treatment of the inmates by the Committee of management. But yesterday, at a meeting of the members of the Committee, it was discovered, on examination, that of the whole number of poor admitted at various times into the institution since its opening, one third had been Roman Catholics. It is but fair to state that in the case of two of these (brothers) their father had entered into an engagement to pay a specified, although an inadequate sum yearly for their support in the "Home," and that in a great measure this engagement was carried out. Mr. Mooney, also, for a few weeks, paid a small sum weekly for the care of his four children, but afterwards, as is well known to the Council, he abandoned these altogether.

Trusting what little information I have been able to give may be of service.

I am yours truly,
JANE PATTON,
Treas. P. P. Home.

JAS. EDWARDS, Esq.,
Town Clerk, Peterboro.

Dominion Day at Lakefield.

The anniversary of our Dominion ushered in with beautiful weather. The village at an early hour looked gay with streamers and flags, and an ever-green arch erected on the principal street, all indicative of the loyalty of the citizens of the ambitious little village, and of their efforts to amuse and please those who should visit them on that day.—The people were all in their holiday attire on the occasion. Many were struck with the neat and gay appearance the village presented, and were agreeably disappointed in their expectation on their first entry into that thriving little place. The villagers themselves were somewhat amazed at the number who crowded in to witness the sports of the day, there being between two and three thousand present. Immediately after the arrival of the second train from Peterboro, which brought the Brass Band belonging to that town, the Regetta commenced. The ground chosen for the course was about one mile in circuit; the starting point being a short distance above the residence of the Rev. Mr. Clementi, thence around three buoys in Strickland's bay and back the same way to the lower end of the second island. Those who are acquainted with the set of the current in that part of the river will probably think that a number of canoes could not have a fair contest in the upward part of the course, the current being much stronger in the centre of the stream; but the position of the competitors was decided by lot.

FIRST RACE—Single racing canoe, there were only three entries. Geo. Strickland, 1st, Henry Edmison 2nd, Ed. Leigh, 3rd.

SECOND RACE—Double hunting canoes, 5 entries. J. Edmison and Geo. Fitzgerald 1s, George Cochrane and C. Todd 2nd, G. Strickland and R. Strickland 3rd.

THIRD RACE—Double racing canoe, four entries. Geo. Fitzgerald and H. Edmison 1st, W. Sharp and Henry Gobeen 2nd, R. Strickland and Chas. Bolton 3rd.

FOURTH RACE.—Single Hunting Canoes, six entries. Geo. Cochrane 1st, Geo. Fitzgerald 2nd, C. Quinn 3rd.

The next race was the Horry Scurry.—For the benefit of those unacquainted with the mode of proceeding I will describe: the canoes are drawn out on the bank and placed side by side, the men are taken back some distance and at the word each man gets his canoe into the water as fast as possible. There was considerable amusement at this race as the winner of the first prize upset just as he was starting, nothing daunted he emptied his canoe and proceeded.—There were eight entries in this race. G. Fitzgerald 1st, R. Strickland 2nd, G. Cochrane 3rd.

FIFTH RACE.—Juvenile, five entries.—Masters Young and Harlee 1st, Masters Knox and Beatty 2nd, Masters Nicholls and Northcott 3rd.

LAST RACE.—Four entries. This was a private purse got up by Mr. Hamilton, hardware merchant of Peterboro. J. Saulter and Geo. Fitzgerald 1st, Richard Strickland and Robert Strickland 2nd, George Strickland and Robert Strickland 3rd.

Great praise is due to the impartial manner in which the starter, Mr. F. Barlee, and the judges, Judge Lonsmore and Mr. E Beatty conducted the whole, there being not a single dispute. Amongst the spectators, perfect order was the motto. No wrangling, no betting, no quarrelling, and last of all there could not be found five drunken men in the village. Liquor selling on the ground being prohibited by the Regatta Committee.

SABBATH SCHOOL SOIREE.—After the third race, a respite of an hour was given by the Committee, for refreshment. About four hundred availed themselves of the S. S. Soiree, others brought baskets, and a great many patronized the eating booths erected on the ground.

The day was spent very pleasantly, all appearing quite pleased with themselves and every body else.

DOMINION DAY.

MATHER'S CORNERS.

The people of Mather's Corner vicinity celebrated the third Anniversary of our New Dominion, by a pic-nic to the plains at Rice Lake. As early as 8 o'clock, a. m., carriages from the surrounding country began to assemble at the Corners, laden with a two-fold precious freight. All faces, aged as well as youthful, betokened eagerness, in anticipation of the coming festivities.

After a delay of a few moments in arranging the procession, there started one of the merriest gatherings that ever undertook to do honor to a festal day. The drive of four miles was gladdened by four miles of gleeful cheers.

We can recommend the Rice Lake plains to the pleasure seeking party. The surroundings are in themselves a continual delight, that must be seen to be understood, and only witnessed to be enjoyed. What surprise is it then, that as soon as the procession alighted the games commenced, and "all went merry as a marriage bell.' Till noon they knew no cessation, and even then it was with an apparent reluctance that the games were abandoned, for the report which the more prudent heads had got in readiness. At least 150 sat down together in pic-nic style, and partook of the viands, the choicest the season could produce, and the rarest production of experienced hands, during two or three days subsequent effort.

The afternoon was spent in the same way till tea time; swings, ball, plays, races, jumping, &c., &c., were well patronized, old and young participating alike in each feature of the occasion that promised pleasure. After tea the sports were resumed till the brothers and ——(country cousins) brought round the carriages in time to regain their somewhat habitations ere night. In not many places, I will venture the assertion, was the third year of our Dominion inaugurated in a more joyous and satisfactory manner than by the people of Mather's Corners and vicinity, and it is hoped the language of their loyal songs, will receive ample fulfilment during the year upon which we have so confidently entered.

"God bless our noble Queen And bless our New Dominion."

DUMMER COUNCIL.

A special meeting of Council was called by the Reeve, for June 30th 1869. All the members present.

The Reeve explained his reasons for calling a meeting of Council. When it was moved by Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Payne, that it is inexpedient to expend any Township funds on leading roads in Dummer, this scheme not including the boundary between Dummer and Otonabee, as about two fifths of the rate-payers of Dummer travel that road; nor the Lakefield road, as about one fifth of the ratepayers travel that road. Carried.

The Reeve was instructed to examine the locality between lots 24th 25, in the 4th con. confer with the parties about had for a road, and report to Council at its next meeting.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Robert Lukey to remove back his fence to the place where it was, and remove all the obstructions placed by him on the road, make the road as good as it was before the fence was put out on the travelled road, and pay all the expenses incurred by the case; said fence and obstructions to be removed forthwith.

Ordered to be paid to Mr. Geo. Payne, for putting stone on a bridge, $7.50.

A communication from Robt. Morrison, Esq., was ordered to be over to next meeting, to see if Mr. Robt. Sloane will furnish the statement required of him.

Mr. James Robb was appointed a road commissioner.

Council to meet again according to previous adjournment.—COM.

HARWOOD.

LAKE SCENERY AND THE "CHURCH."

Viewed from Cobourg or Port Hope, there is something ocean-like about "the lake." In calm or storm, Ontario is particularly imposing and grand. Vastness predominates. In looking upon its smooth or its ruffled waters there is a sense of immensity. So far as the eye reaches the waters are boundless and unimpeded. Beyond the solitary lighthouse, or a lone rock in the midst of the great deep, there is no interruption to the view—often not even a sail to be seen. Lake Ontario is monotonously grand—The stupendous rocks or cliffs which awe the mind on entering the Saguenay have no share in influencing the feelings of such as gaze upon the wide expanse of Ontario. Sublimity is otherwise produced in that mirror-like patch of waters in the hollow between the mountain peaks which encircle Lake Nicolet. There is grandeur and beauty too in all these sights—Ontario, the Saguenay, and Nicolet—but no variety. How different is Rice Lake. There, is beauty without immensity or ruggedness.—Look where one chooses there is a new and pleasing view, in the lowest reservoir of all the many back lakes, on the table land above the summit of the numerous little streams that immediately empty themselves into Lake Ontario. The cultivated fields, pleasant mansions, picturesque inlets, sloping banks, the bridge, the pretty steamboat, the tiny sloop, the bark canoe, the golden colored rice-beds, the ever changing hues of the waters as the sky is bright, mottled, or hung in black, or as the sun shines fitfully through clouds and burns steadily down upon water which, in the heat of day, seems like molten lead, can nowhere else be seen to such advantage as at Rice Lake. But there is more about Rice Lake than the picturesque. Its shores are not the sites of pleasant villas only. There and there are signs of manufacturing enterprise. To the sportsman it is enough to know that the Lake teems with waterfowl and fish. Ducks of every kind are especially plentiful, and muskinonge and bass of inconceivable size require the very slightest provocation to quit their native element for ever and become what they indisputably are—delicious food for man. There is nothing more delightful than giving these scaley inhabitants of the waters "under the earth" such provocation. The least temptation placed in their way makes them bite greedily and surrender to the lucky fisherman. That fisherman, if he be not a permanent resident on the lake shore, needs a place to live in and there is no more enjoyable place for that purpose than Harwood, and no better house of public resort than Church's. Harwood is the most accessable of all places on the lake. From the east, west, north and south the termination is Harwood to a pleasure seeker on Rice Lake. It is opposite the mouth of the Otonabee, it is at the south end of the well known bridge, it is in direct communication with Hastings and Marmora; and it is, in point of time, within half an hour of Cobourg; in point of money, it is within 75 cents of Port Hope by rail, 25 to Cobourg and 50 to Harwood. The hotel there is that kept by Mr. Duncan Church, formerly of Peterboro. But there are other inducements beside a good hotel for strangers, who are not fishermen alone, going to Harwood Harwood is prospering. Without making the slightest allusion to the time when Bobberseee, Red-skin, Hotalwatsi, Mrs. Squaw Hotalwatsi, and their interesting little papooses originally settled for a night or two under a birch-bark tent in the spot where the thriving village of Harwood now stands, and smoked their red stone pipes, made moccasins and speared fish, it may be stated that although there is still no other place of worship but the open air, there are tailors and shoemakers, bakers and butchers, any number of "stores," and there are two steam saw mills, employing about three hundred men. Now this population requires looking after. The commercial traveller and insurance agent must see to Harwood as well as the sportsman, and from what other quarter could he see more or learn more than from Church's. Let it be borne in mind that although there is no place of worship, specially set aside, at Harwood, there is still a Church there most willing to take care of all who throw themselves upon his protection. The first and wisest thing that any stranger arriving at Harwood can do, is to ask for the CHURCH and go there.—Com.

MR. EDITOR:

Will you please favor me by inserting the following in this week's issue of your paper:—

At the request of the 57th Battalion Band, I take pleasure in thanking, through your columns, the committee of the late Regatta in Lakefield, for their very great kindness during the day, and prompt liberality for services rendered. I wish to add the uniform kindness to the band (and bandmaster) by those in Lakefield, who patronize them, tends greatly to their encouragement.

Yours truly,
A. H. BACKETT,
Bandmaster.

How Sent in England.

The English correspondent of the London Advertiser writes as follows:

A Meeting of Free Thinkers of a religious caste has just taken place which will yet create a great deal of attention. Such meetings are very common in Boston and other cities in the United States, but hitherto to very little if not absolutely unknown, in England. The meeting was held in the Free Masons' Hall, London. The principal persons present were the Rev. J. Martineau, (Unitarian); the Rev. W. Mish, (Baptist, Dalston); the Rev. C. K. Paul, (Vicar of Sturminster Marshall), and the Rev. Athanase Coquerel (a French Rationalist pastor). Mr. Martineau opened, Mr. Coquerel preached on "One thing is needful," Mr. Mish offered up prayer, but Mr. Paul got the cap down on by a sermon on "Up is not here but it rises." He denounced the symbolism of Catholics and Ritualists and the Bibliolatry of Protestants. He declared that it was no longer possible to imprison truth in a creed or in a Bible text. The dicta, "The Bible and the Bible alone is the religion of Protestants," and "Extra ecclesiam nulla salus," were now no longer applicable. Then he denounced the belief of himself and his co-adorators to be that "Christ was a symbolical name for collective human society, which they understand to be God" Thus is unfolding Pantheism. Well may these storied constrictions call themselves Free Christians! But we grieve most to find that a minister of the Protestant church of England has the bad preeminence of giving utterance to such blasphemous sentiments, and that he and a Baptist minister could join in prayers in which the Trinity is studiously ignored. What are we coming to? We seem to be getting entirely adrift from old moorings.

On another subject, interesting to women, he writes:

Quietly, and without creating any great political commotion, Mr. Jacob Bright, the has procured the insertion of a clause in amended Municipal Franchise Bill, declaring that where the word "person" is employed, it shall be construed to include females as well as males. I am not sure that this is the exact statement, as I am writing from memory, but the practical object and result is to give the municipal franchise to women. And 20,000 will thus be added to the voters in the city of Manchester, when November calls the citizens to elect its Mayor. This privilege to females, though novel to us, is, it seems, an ancient right of which modern legislation had deprived them. The next step, of course, will be to secure for them the Parliamentary franchise, and then Englishwomen will snap their fingers at American Women's Rights Conventions.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Pelmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; no immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Hemahoeous Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have unloed to make so common.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stooms, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy,

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. SOME MOTHER'S CHILD.

At home or away, in the ally or street,
Whenever I chance in this wide world to meet
A girl that is thoughtless or boy that is wild,
My heart echoes softly, "'Tis some mother's child."

And when I see those o'er whom long years have rolled,
Whose heart hath grown hardened, whose spirits are cold,
Be it woman all fallen, or man all defiled
A voice whisper sadly, "Ah! some mother's child."

No matter how far from the right she hath strayed;
No matter what inroads dishonor had made;
No matter what elements cankered the pearl—
Though tarnished and sullied, she is some mother's girl.

No matter how wayward his footsteps have been;
No matter how deep he is sunken in sin;
No matter how low in his standard of joy—
Though guilty and loathsome, he is some mother's boy.

That head hath been pillowed on tenderest breast;
That form hath been wept o'er, those lips have been press'd;
That soul hath been prayed for in tones sweet and mild;
For Heaven's sake deal gently with some mother's child.

ELMIRA, 1869.

THE TWO-HEADED GIRL.

An Unpleasant Situation.

John Smith—you've heard of him—is very bashful; is too bashful, in fact. He was born and raised in the country. His father gave him a good education, and always allows him plenty of money. But John, with all other attainments, could never accustom himself to the society of females, not because he did not like the girls, but because his shy nature would not permit him to associate with the fair sex. It once happened not very long ago, either, that John's father had some very important business to transact in the city. He also had some very particular affair to attend to at home, which demanded his particular attention, and not possessing the power of nonquity, he delegated his son, John, to transact that in the city.

John, being thus commissioned, immediately proceeded to the city, and to the residence of his father's friend, whom he found to be a very nice old gentleman, with a beautiful daughter and gold spectacles.

John was ushered into the parlor, (a new thing for him), and motioned into a seat—not a sofa (another new thing.)

But we must use his own language: I took my seat, and made my observations. Everything was fine! Fine carpets, fine sofas, fine tables, fine curtains, fine books, fine pianos, fine everything, and especially a fine young lady who was dressed in fine silk, fine satin, who had fine curls, and who had a fine appearance generally.

After chatting with the old gentleman a few minutes, he took down his hat, told me to make my-self at home for an hour or two and left—left me alone with his daughter and a small, mischievous boy, the young lady's brother. I didn't relish the situation at all. The idea of keeping a city belle engaged in conversation for two hours; perdition! Silence reigned in the parlor for a short time, you may bet. I amused myself as much as possible with the boy—that is, I loaned him my knife and watch-key, and watched him cut holes in the carpet with one and then spoil the other. I don't know what I could have done had it not been for that boy—he was so good to attract one's attention, you know.

It's true he asked some startling questions occasionally, such as this, for instance:—

Are you a goin' to court my sister Emily?

Such things must be expected under such circumstances.

Miss Emily, thinking, no doubt, that to be a good hostess she must engage her guest in a conversation, asked,—

How do you like country life? It must be a beautiful sight to see the labourers, male and female, rousing on the new mown hay on New Year's Day. I always thought I would like to spend a Christmas in the country, a nut-gathering with the village lads and lasses. It has always been a mystery to me how they get eggs off the trees without breaking them all to pieces.

In return, I thought, to keep up my part of the conversation, it was necessary for me to quote poetry, and the like which I did. Among other quotations, I unfortunately repeated the well-known lines of Shakespeare:

"There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew it as we will."

At this juncture, the boy, who had perched himself upon my knees, looked very earnestly up into my face, and said,—

Divinity shaped the end of you nose mighty curious.

I'm certain that I wished somebody would spank the young rascal. We talked of hills, mountains, tales, cataracts—I believe I said waterfalls when the boy spoke up and said,—

Why, sister's got a trunk full of 'em up stairs—pap says they're made out of hoss hair.

It began to be very apparent to me that I must be very guarded in what I said lest the little boy might chip in his remarks at uncalled-for places in fact, I turned my conversation to him. I told him he ought to go home with me, and see what nice chickens we had in the country. Unluckily I mentioned a yoke of calves my little brother owned.

The word calves ruined all. The little fellow glanced up in my face, and said,—

Sister has got a a dozen of 'em, but she don't wear them only when she goes on town 'o windy days.

Leave the room, you unmanly little wretch! exclaimed Emily; leave immediately!

I know what you want me to leave for, replied he; you can't fool me—you want to set in the man's lap, and kiss him like you did Bill Simmons the other day—you can't fool me now I jes' tell you. Guess some candy like he did; then I'll go.—You think because you're got the Grecian Bend that you're smart. Guess I know a thing or two. I am mad at you, anyhow, because pap would of bought me a top yesterday, if it had not been for your getting them curls, doggone yer! You needn't turn so red in the face, 'cause I can see the paint. There ain't no use in winkin' at me with that glass eye 'o yonder, 'cause I ain't goin' out 'o here, that's what's the matter with the purps. I don't care if you are twenty-eight years old, you ain't no boss of mine, you old fool.

That is all the story that John related. He says that he don't know how he ever got out of that ere big scrape.

The Empress Eugenie appeared at one of her recent receptions with her hair dressed plain; that is, twisted into two plaits and brought round the head, fastening over the forehead with diamond pins. The fashion is spreading. Pity the fashionable world could not have found out that chaste simplicity is beauty, before Eugenie demonstrated it.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and advancement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly readable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of dulness" It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a sycophantic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognise honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of TEMPERANCE in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

BEAUTIFUL! SPLENDID!
is the verdict given by all who use HUNT'S EMPIRE HAIR GLOSS. It makes dry, harsh, stiff hair soft, glossy and beautiful. It cleanses the scalp, removes pimples, strengthens the glands, prevents the hair from falling, and will certainly make it grow strong, luxuriant and beautiful, and it is only 25 cents per bottle.—Sold everywhere.

THE WEALTH OF ENGLAND.—If Mr. Disraeli may have over-shot the mark when he described the national debt of England the other day as a 'flea-bite,' it does appear to be insignificant when compared with the commerce of the country. The enormous sum of £3,536,039,000, or seven times its worth as the national debt passed through the Clearing House in 1868. This was an increase of £310,000,000 on the previous year, and it shows conclusively the commercial and monetary activity of the country, notwithstanding the financial crisis through which it has passed. On the 24 Stock Exchange a fifing days the total amount passing through the Clearing House was £350 622 000, or an increase of above $100,000,000 on the preceding year. How is it, then, that, with this enormous mass of wealth, pauperism and poverty should exist to such an alarming extent as to create grave apprehensions, if not absolute pane, in the public mind?

NO TROUBLE WITH THE INDIANS IN CANADA.—In a recent speech, Wendell Phillips said:—"Now go to the other side of the lakes, and take a lesson from England. When she meets a tribe, she does not push it before her, as we do, as Mr. Douglass describes it; she encircles it in the arms of her civil laws. If an Indian trespasses, she does not send a regiment after him after him, as we do; she sends a constable. If he has a complaint, she does not send him to a colonel, as we do, she sends him to a Justice of the peace, and what is the result? For 97 years, no Indian has lifted his hand against a subject of the Queen (applause). There is not a spot in Canada marked by white blood shed by Indian hands; for nearly a century, the Crown has not spent a penny on the Indian question; and to-day, while we cover the frontier with colonels and generals, an Englishman in Montreal dares to vault into the saddle and ride due West, through the Indians to the ocean without a pistol."

A LITTLE COMFORTER.—A mother in the habit of asking her children before they retired at night what they had done to make others happy, found her two twin daughters silent. The question was repeated. 'I can remember nothing good all the day, dear mother; only one of my schoolmates was happy because she had gained the head of the class, and I smiled on her and ran to kiss her; so she said I was good. The other spoke more timidly. A little girl who sat on the bench with me at school has lost a little brother. I saw that she hid her face in her book and wept. I felt sorry and laid my head on the same book and wept with her. Then she looked up and was comforted, and put her arms round my neck; but I do not know why she said I had done her good. The mother embraced her children and said, to rejoice who weep with those who weep, is to obey our blessed Redeemer.

NOMS DE PLUME.—'Josh Billings' is Henry Shaw of New York city; a middle-aged quiet man, with grown and married children.

'Bill Arp' is Chas. T. Smith, of Rome, Ga.; a quiet middle aged man, a man of family, and a good lawyer.

'G. Washington Brooks' is Mr. John E. Hatcher, of Louisville, Ky. He is a newspaper man, a genial, good fellow, and comparatively young man.

'Mark Twain' is Samuel Clemens, late of California, but now a contributor.—He is a single man, young, and by trade a printer. 'Mark Twain' is a nautical phrase used in taking soundings. He doubtless picked it up in his many travels.

'Louis Muhlbach' is Madame Clara Mundt, of Vienna, Austria a mother with two grown up daughters, one of whom is herself something of an authoress.

Charles V. of Spain was one of the best linguists of his age. Once being asked by an Englishman what language he preferred to converse in, he replied: "That depends on whom I am speaking with. When I talk to God, I use Spanish; in conversation with crowned heads I talk in French; in my intercourse with scholars I speak in Latin; in discussing military affairs with my Generals, German is the language; in talking with ladies of mankind, I use Italian. For inferior persons, I use other tongues; thus, I address a Jew in Hebrew; my horse in Dutch; the devil in Bohemian; a bear in Russian; and a goose in English."

DEAD.—'ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE'—The body of Sophia Stick was found floating near the Desjardine Canal bridge yesterday afternoon, by a young man Daily and conveyed to the dead house. An inquest was held this afternoon, and the evidence went clearly to show that quarrels between deceased and a young man named Matthew Kelly indirectly resulted in suicide. He had treated her unkindly. She was engaged to be married to the party in question, and she went to the Young Irishmen's picnic in a dress trimmed with colors suitable to the ideas of her lover, who appeared to feel very bad while the inquest was taking place.—Hamilton Times.

AWFUL.—A wretched man in Alabama has written to the Marshall of New York complaining that somebody had swindled him to the extent of four dollars by selling him a jewsharp when an eight inch musical box playing twenty four tunes had been promised him. This is clearly a case of obtaining money under false pretences, for a jewsharp is certainly not an eight-inch musical box. There is an ancient religious sect called the Millerites, which pretends to prove that David's harp was a Jew's harp because David was a Jew; but we know of no process of reasoning by which it could be established that an eight-inch musical box and a jewsharp are identical.

A man living in Taney County, Missouri, recently sent his boy to the mill, a distance of twelve miles, and as he did not return as soon as usual a neighbor went to see what had become of him. The second boy not returning in due season, a party started to search for the youths. After travelling some four miles they saw, by the roadside, a large gray horse, dead, with the bridle from the rein of one of the boys—it at last sent out. His father fired and killed the beast. After going a short distance further, the mutilated remains of the other boy were found.

A gentleman in a tavern remarking that he had shot a hawk, at ninety yards with No. 6 shot another replied: 'Must have a good gun, but Uncle Dave has one here that beats it.' 'Ah,' said the first, 'how far will it kill a hawk with No. 6 shot?' 'I don't use shot, or bullets either,' answered Uncle Dave himself. 'Then what do you use, Uncle Dave?' 'I use salt altogether. I kill my game so far with my gun that the game would spoil before I could get it.'

Many a beautiful poem when walking in the streets would look angry if they are gazed at, but sadly disappointed if they are not.

MADOC, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1865 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which [illegible] during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worser, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that when it does cure it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compounder. Wherever Cathartic Pills are needed, certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring them to regular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a preventive against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all that extensive class of complaints originating in the malarious, miasmatic or mineral poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, Iron, Strychnine, or poisonous substance whatever, it is harmless to any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgements we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, in which other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through subsidiary localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

Poetry.

DON'T YOU GO TOMMY.

"Don't miss it my boy, now mind what I say,
If you spend all your money and time in that way;
There's no one but idlers that lounge about so,
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.
We're feeble and old, you're mother and me
And kind as a mother has been, should you be,
To whiskey, to billiards and cards 'tis odious,
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.

CHORUS.

Don't you go, Tommy, don't go,
Stay at home, Tommy, don't go,
There's no one but idlers that lounge about so,
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.

Why won't you be steady and work like a man,
I can't hold the plough but I'll do what I can,
There's so much to do, and our grain we must sow;
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.
Besides there is no corn and potatoes to plant,
You're young and you can stand it, you know that I can't.
Leave liquor all be for it 's grieves mother so,
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.

We've watched o'er you, Tommy, in sweet infancy,
When angels were silently hov'ring to thee,
At midnight we've knelt by your cradle so low
I beg of you, Tommy, don't go.
The farm will be yours at no distant day,
Eternity's blessings you'll reap if you sow,
O Tommy, dear Tommy, don't go.

Selections.

MY WIFE.

BY LEONORE LENOIT.

Gerald, please don't go out to-night, and two rosy cheeks were turned upward towards my face, two ruby lips pressed my hardened cheek, two melting blue eyes looked beseechingly into mine.

We had been married almost a year, and I had given up my place at the club, finding the company of my young and accomplished wife to amply repay me for my imaginary loss. To-day I had met some of the members, who had chided me for being, as they termed it, tied to my wife's apron-strings and wondering, in a sneering way, why I was such a consummate idiot as to give the whole of my time to the will and wishes of a little frail piece of humanity in the shape of a woman, ending with an invitation to meet with them that night, which in my frame of mind I readily promised.

With me a promise is sacred. So that night when I had silently swallowed my supper, unusual for me, for I am generally very talkative, I drew on my great coat, threw my tippet around my neck, and prepared to go to the club, the first night I had thought of spending away from home since my marriage. I had noticed her restless look, so gentle withal at my silence at supper, and the quiet, watchful look when I drew on my great coat, as well as the uneasy moving about, as I took my hat to depart. I had got out in the hall, just at the head of the steps—our room was on the second floor—when she came out, threw her arms about my neck, imprinted a kiss on my cheek, and looking at me beseechingly, spoke in her musical voice:

Gerald, please don't go out to-night.

She said it so fondly, it was not in me to speak harshly to her, so I just said, in a quiet, loving tone:

I will not be gone long, love, I am only going to the club for an hour.

But it will be so lonely without you, Gerald, she pleaded.

I had half a mind to take off my coat, and sit quietly down and stay with her, for would it not be very lonely with no one here but my darling Mary? But just then the words of my club-mates came into my mind, and I answered rather harshly:

Oh, May! You are so childish! I will not be gone long; and you surely do not expect me to give up all my old associations, and devote myself to you alone?

These were the first harsh words I had ever spoken to her, and I knew not the weight with which they fell on the gentle, trusting heart. Her hands relaxed a little, her head rested for a moment on my breast, as a drooping lily when torn from its parent stem, her cheek paled for a moment, as she answered:

I did not mean to be childish, Gerald, but I will be so lonely; please don't stay long. Here, kiss me, and say you love me before you go! and she put up her ruby lips, wound her arms close around my neck, and tried to draw my bearded face towards her own; but I would not. I knew not what dreams entered my soul just then, but I mentally whispered, "The devil is liquor, you must carry it out," and I crushed out my hand and pushed her force from my breast, as I muttered, "May, I cannot speak falsely. I cannot say I love you easy. I hate you!"

In an instant the eyes were withdrawn from my face, the eyes suffused with tears, the color was fled from her cheek, and the ruby lips were as ashen hue.

Gerald, did you say, did you hate me? Do you mean it? She spoke tremulously, and there was a yearning tenderness about her voice I shall never forget.

Already I knew repented what I had spoken for my steel heart would not yield, and I answered coldly:

Yes May, I spoke truely, I hate you! make the most of it!

Wherefore do you hate me, Gerald? You once said you loved me dearly; how I wonder you have I been faithless? Has my very soul bowed down and worshipped thee as its only idol? Have I not treasured thine image in my heart of hearts as the precious for the outer world to gaze upon?

Then wherefore hate me, Gerald? where fore? Speak and hide not!

May, I do not doubt your love. I have never doubted your truth or faith; I hope always? I loved you but the dream is gone and I have awakened to the truth. Suffering as it may be! Suffice it to say that I love you no longer! I hate you! Do not question me further.

As request a second time to speak the cruel words, and each word I uttered sent deep pain and grief into my heart, but I could not retract; I trusted to the future to repair the wrong.

Oh, my God! that I had never lived to hear this hour talk! said I, thrust him from me and walked down the railway.

I had another theory when I first loved her, for if ever deep and trusting love was in any heart it was that which first came to me sweet May. And as I walked on toward the club-room my self, rebuking the matter in my mind, it took much resolution to prevent me from going back, casting myself at her feet and asking her forgiveness. Oh how I wished in after days I had only done so.

I reached the club room and was greeted cordially by my old friends.

So Gerald has given up his allegiance at home and severed the apron cord that bound him there, said one in a bantering tone.

Yes, but only at my suggestion, answered the one whom I had met in the morning:—a good specimen of a thoughtless fast man, very common nowadays, observed another.

The hot blood rushed to my brain for an instant, and my angry retort trembled on my lips, but I crushed it down and calmly replied:

Comrades, let bygones be bygones.—What has been my course in the past is not for you to criticise. I warn you not to repeat it. Here we are treading on holy ground.

They looked at me in astonishment and I heard one whisper:

He has grown pretty—but he means it, then aloud, brave fellow well! Let us have it in a bumper of regal wine! And the wine cups were filled and toasted off by all.

It was late when I left the room, my brain heated by the repeated cups of wine, my mind confused. I reeled rather than walked toward home.

The lights were still burning in her chamber. I reproached myself for my harsh language to her while she was so kind to set up and watch for my coming. How lonely she must have been, I ejaculated.

I took out my night-key, and opening the door, ran up the steps, hoping she would meet me, as she usually did, at the head of the stairway. But she was not there; all was stillness, save the dull tramp of a single person at the far end of the hall. I paused for a moment at the door of her chamber—all was silent within. She must be asleep. I opened the door noiselessly and went in.

A neighbor met me, with her finger on her lip, and whispered to me, Silence! The doctor says her life depends on her quietness.

A keen pang shot through my brain as I glanced around the room. The lounge was wheeled from its accustomed place nearer to the glowing fire of anthracite. Mrs. Walton, the neighbor, stood before me, hiding her from my view.

She stepped aside—my God! what a sight met my eyes. There, on the lounge, pale as a corpse, lay my own beautiful May. Her white garments flecked with purple island spots, while from her mouth continually oozed a bloody froth; her pale hand held a delicate handkerchief crimson with blood, with which she continually wiped the blood from her lips. Her lips were paler even than when I saw her last, and the crimson tide that continually flowed over them only served to heighten their deathly pallor; her eyes restrained their look of smiling sweetness.

I felt a pang of remorse as I knelt beside her, and kissed the pallid cheek, and a still, small voice whispered within me, "Thou thy work!" And my conscience smote me continually.

I took her hand in mine—it was deathly cold—and essayed to speak, but the rising tumult in my breast forbade it, and I only cried, Oh, May, my own dear wife.

I could say no more. Tears choked my utterance, and I bowed my head in suffering, such as my heart had not known before.

A tear-drop stole from her eyes, and gained its way down her cheek, her lips quivered as she tried to speak, but could not, and the purple blood flowed the faster for the effort.

In those few moments I lived the agony of years. No one can imagine my suffering unless he has passed under the rod and through the vale of tears.

The doctor! I cried, as I rose and looked at Mrs. Walton.

She answered not, but pointed to the hall from which I had just come.

I went out, much as a madman. I clasped his hand in both of mine, and peered into his eyes. The lamp at the stairway shed a dim light on us, and by its aid I saw the shadow that crossed his brow.

What is it? I asked, half-crazed.

Hemorrhage from the lungs! he answered, gravely.

You see, he continued, she was found at the head of the stairway in a fainting fit, her eyes filled with tears, a pool of blood surrounding her.

Just where I gave the blow, I interrupted.

What! asked the doctor, with an inquiring look.

Nothing! go on. And I placed the door before him.

As I said completed the doctor, she by unconscious when the servant came up, brought, no doubt, by the noise of her fall. They carried her to her room and summoned Mrs. Walton and me. I found her bleeding profusely from the lungs, entirely unconscious, indeed, like one almost extinct. She has regained her consciousness, and is rational now, but is—I fear her mother died with hemorrhage of the lungs. That is all.

Then there is imminent danger?

Just so, answered the doctor, as he resumed his walk.

But, doctor, she will not, cannot, must not die!

And I grasped his hands so tight that nails almost entered the flesh as I scanned his face to read her fate in the expression there.

He said nothing; merely shook his head and continued his walk. The light fled from my soul—hope was gone. I must see her and pass her forgiveness ere she died. I rushed back into the room. I threw myself beside her, and poured out in bitter anguish.

Oh, May! Forgive me!—forgive those harsh words. I did not mean it—I—

I could have spoken more, but I could not; by tongue refused to give utterance.

Her lips moved, but no sound issued from them. I saw that she would speak, but then gave forth a gurgling sound, then a faint cough and a jet of blood spirted out and stained my spotless shirt bosom. She gasped for an instant and then all was quiet. I gazed for an instant only, her features had very calm, but eyes looked as though they were covered with a film. She was so calm, the gentle bearing was gone.

My God! was she dead?

I uttered a piercing scream; a strange feeling came over me; the room seemed to be whirling around; I could not see, and I felt heavily on the floor.

How long I lay in this position, I dare not say, but they afterwards told me it was but a few days.

When I awoke I was lying in a small bed-chamber adjoining my wife's room; the doctor was sitting beside me—my wrist in his hand.

I looked up and drew my hand across my brow as if to wipe away the mist that had gathered there, and Dr. Mattoon divined my thoughts.

It was only a fainting fit from a weakness—

I know, I interrupted; but would to God I had died. How can I live without her? I cannot! Oh, God, why can't I die?

But it was only a fainting fit, Mr. Hem—

But why did you bring me back? Why not let me die—die, and be buried with her! I am tempted again.

Dr. Mattoon gently placed his hand across my lips, as he spoke:

It was only a fainting fit. Your wife still lives, and is very solicitous about you.

Still lives! I asked, eagerly, hardly able to realize what he told me.

Yes, she still lives, answered the doctor.

Thank God! I will in the future try to atone for the past! But, are you not mocking me, doctor?

Most assuredly, your wife is convalescing slowly.

I grasped his hand in mine, and tried to raise myself in bed, but my weakness was too great.

Be quiet, resumed the doctor. Be quiet, you have been very sick, and are yet very weak. You can meet her in a very few days.

Wearily the days dragged along until I could walk into her chamber, and gaze on her much loved features.

I shall remember the day. It was a calm, beautiful April day; the sun shone very bright, and already nature had decked the earth in her finest habiliments.

She was seated at the south window, her head resting on her pale, thin hand, gazing out on the beautiful scenery.

Her face was very pale and her lips looked very white in the bright sunshine, but her eyes wore the same old expression save that they looked a little sadder.

I came up and kissed her and imprinted a kiss on her cheek. She looked quickly around and smiled as she laid out her hand—smiled a sickening smile—a feeble attempt to appear as of old.

I took her hand, and sat down beside her. I felt happy then—happier than for many days.

That day I spent much as I did in the days of my young love. Late in the evening I spoke of that night.

I was to harsh that night, May, I know you will forgive me—I have repented in sackcloth and ashes, aye, in bitterness of heart have I repented. My punishment has been great, but not greater than I deserved. I did not mean them—I know you will forgive me.

Her eyes filled with tears as she turned them full upon me, and spoke in low, sweet tones:

Do not speak of that, dear Gerald—I know you did not mean it. Yet you know not the depth of the wound inflicted; you know not, the depth of woe it cast on me. I know you have suffered; the time we ever face have deepened; we have both suffered but we must not speak of that, let it be bygones. Let us seal the past, and never renew that one painful event of our lives.

But—

She motioned her hand, and asked, pleadingly.

Gerald, my husband, please don't say any more about that event, let us number it with the past!

I have passed through the ordeal and am better for the trial; I have passed through the furnace, and am purer for having the dross. I have come out victor, and am happier, and above all things earthly I prize the one being—my wife.

Keeping One's Eyes Open.

Nobody is more like an honest man than a thorough rogue. When you see a man with a great deal of religion displayed in his window, you may depend upon it he keeps a very small stock within. Do not choose your friend by his looks; handsome shoes often pinch the feet. Don't be fond of compliments; remember, 'Thank you, ready and thank you, penny,' killed the cat. Don't believe in the man who talks the most; mewing cats are very seldom good mousers. By no means put yourself in another person's power; if you put your thumb between two grinders, they are apt to bite. Drink nothing without seeing it; he begs nothing without reading it, and be sure that it passes more than it says. Don't go to law unless you have nothing to lose; lawyers' houses are built on fools' heads. In any business, never wade into water where you cannot see the bottom. Put no dependence upon the label of a bag; mutual honor after your own hip. See the cash opened, before you buy what is in it is to be wise taken in the dark is to be cheated. Keep clear of the man who does not value his own character. Beware of every one who swears; he who blasphemes his Maker, makes no bones of lying or stealing. Beware of man more than of yourself; we carry our worst enemies within us. When a new opinion or doctrine comes before you, do not bite till you know whether it is digestible and good because of the gift on it. Never bowl hollow till you are quite out of the wood; and don't carry food with you if you are caught in the rain. There's always time enough to boast—wait a little longer. Don't throw away dirty water till you have got clean; keep on at scraping the roads till you can get better work; for the poorest pay is better than none, and the humblest office is better than being out of employment. Always give up the road to bulls and madmen; and never fight with a cool beaver, or contend with a base character, for sure to blacken you.

Neither trust nor contend,
Nor lay wagers, nor contend,
And you may depend,
You'll have peace to the end.

Rev C. H. Spurgeon's John Plowman's Talks.

Population of the Globe.

There are about 1,228,000,000 souls, of which 360,000,000 are of the Caucasian race.

552,000 000 are of the Mongul race.

100,000,000 are of the Ethiopian race.

176,000,000 are of the Malay race.

100,000,000 are of the Indo-American race.

There are 3,642 different languages spoken, and over 1 000 diff rent religions.

The yearly mortality of the globe is 333 333 333 persons That is at the rate of 91,554 per day, 3,786, per hour, 60 per minute. So every pulsation of our heart marks the disease of some human creature.

The average of human life is 33 years.

One-fourth of the population dies at or before the age of 7 years.

One-half at or before 16 years.

Among 10 000 persons, one arrives at the age of 100 years, one in 500 attains the age of 90, and one in 100 lives to the age of 60.

Married men live longer than single ones. In 4000 persons 65 marry, and more marriages occur in June and December than in any other month of the year.

One-eighth of the whole population is military. Professions exercise a great influence on longevity. In 1000 individuals who arrive at the age of 70 years, 42 are priests, orators or public speakers; 40 are agriculturists, 33 are workmen, 32 soldiers or military royal vers, 27 professors, and 24 doctors. Those who devote their lives to the prolongation of that of others die the soonest.

There are 335,000,000 Christians.

There are 5,000,000 Israelites.

There are 60,000 000 Asiatic religions.

There are 160 000,000 Mahommedans.

There are 200,000,000 Pagans.

In the Christian churches:

170,000,000 profess the Roman Catholic

75 000,000 profess the Greek faith.

80,000,000 profess the Protestant.

The Beauty of the Family.

We leave it to you if the "beauty of the family" don't invariably "turn out" the worst of the lot? If she don't cultivate the outside of her head to the total forgetfulness of the inside? If she is not petted, and fondled, and flattered, and shown off, till self-love is written all over her? If she is not sure to marry some lazy fellow, or some drunken brute, who will bruise her body—or heart—to a jelly, and be glad to come, with her forlorn children, for a morsel of bread to the comfortable home of that snubbed member of the family who was only "our John" or "Martha," and who never, by any possibility, was supposed by them capable of doing or being anything? We leave it to you, if "the beauty of the family," be he a boy, don't grow up to ruin? If he is not sure to disgust everybody with his conceit and affectation, while his manners be in the admired of all eyes—even if he don't squander all the money he can lay his hands on, and die in the gutter? We never saw a very hand-some child of either sex set up on the family pedestal to be admired by that family and its friends, to the exclusion of the other, that we do not feel like patting those children on the head, and saying, "Thank Providence, my dears, that you were not born 'beauties!'"

A bankrupt merchant, returning home one night, said to his noble wife: "My dear, I am ruined; everything we have is in the hands of the sheriff." After a few moments of silence, the wife looked calmly into his face and said: "Will the sheriff sell you?" "Oh, no." "Will the sheriff sell me?" "Oh, no." "Will he sell our children?" "Oh, no." "Then do not say we have lost everything. All that is most valuable remains to us—manhood, womanhood, and childhood. We have lost but the results of skill and industry. We can make another fortune if our hearts and heads are left us." Ourwife wonder that, encouraged by such a noble wife, he is now on the road to fortune.

Harrowing to the evil—rap.

Watering the Day after the Battle.

On the surface of two square miles it was ascertained that fifty thousand men and horses were lying! The fierce wrap of fire which had covered the field of battle, was reduced to ither, and beaten into the earth, and the surface trodden down by the cavalry and furrowed deeply by the cannon-wheels, covered with many a robe of the fight. Helmets and cuirasses, sectioned firearms and broken swords; all the variety of military ornaments, bearer's caps and Highland bonnets, uniforms of every color, plumes and pennons, musical instruments, the apparatus of artillery, drums, bugles, one good God! why dwell on the harrowing picture of a slaughter field? each and every moment display here more conspicuously the misery of such a battle. Could the melancholy appearance of this scene of death be lengthened, it would be by witnessing the remembrance of the living and its desolation, for the objects of their love. Mothers, and sisters and children, for whom were occupied in that mournful duty, and the numbers of the corpses—friend and foe, intermingled as they were—often rendered the attempt at recognizing individuals difficult and sometimes impossible. In many places the dead by four deep upon each other, marking the spot some British square had occupied—exposed for hours to the murderous fire of a French battery. Cuirasses, shoes and cuirasses were shattered literally on the earth. Terrible, good God grant the spot where the cavalry of France and England had encountered; character and honor were intermingled, and the gory Norman lances of the Imperial Guard were interpersed with the grey rhenegars which had carried Albion's chivalry. Here the Highlander and Israelitar lay side by side, together; and the heavy dragoons, with sword in hand upon his helmet, was grasping in death with the Polish lancer. On the summit of the ridge, where the ground was cumbered with the dead, and broken lances, steps in the mud and gore by the frequent rush of royal cavalry, the black plume, cuirass, of the Imperial Guard pointed out the spot where Napoleon had been defeated. Here, in column, the favorite corps de, whose big hat shakers rested, had been annihilated, and the advance and reserve of the guard was irresistible to a man of fallen Frenchmen. In the hollow the last struggle of France has been made; for there the old guard attempted to meet the British and allied lines to their disorganized companions to rally.

KEEP YOUR WORD.—When you promise to do a thing be sure to keep your word, as well for the sake of truth as in justice to others. This very interesting story is told of a boy who was singularly faithful to his word:—He had borrowed a tool from a neighbor, promising to return it at night. Before evening he was out away on an errand and did not return until late. Before he went he was told that his brothers should use the tool, at work. After he had some home and gone to bed he inquired and found the tool had not been sent to its owner. He was much distressed to think his promise had not been kept, but was persuaded to go to sleep and rise early and carry it home. By daylight he was up and nowhere was the tool to be found.—After asking and fruitless search he set off for his neighbor's dwelling. And it then appeared, from the prints of his little bare feet in the mud, that the lad had got up in sleep and carried the tool home, and went to bed again and knew it not. Of course a boy who was prompt in his sleep was prompt when awake. He lived respected, had the confidence of his neighbors and was placed in many offices of trust and profit. —Carolina Farmer.

HASTY TEMPERS.—We are always ready to condemn hasty, irritable natures. "How sad, how unfortunate such a temper is!" is an expression constantly used in speaking of a friend, acquaintance, or neighbor.—Very true; but you do not try to find out whether it was born with them or acquired!—for sorrow or sickness will lean to God or harden the heart. See the restless, weary mother at the cradle of her sick babe; innumerable cares daily devolving upon her, young voices hourly calling for one thing or another. See the father of a large family, working to support him comfort; has he an idle? Look at the pale faced woman stooping to do her duty; yet never reproved, ever met with chilling words and looks. Be who are at ease in health and wealth, surrounded by friends, can know nothing of and therefore do not realize, the misery of such a life. Let us be less severe in future, remember to "do unto others as we would they should do unto us." Cheer the weary mother; give kindness to the schoolgirl heart. By thus doing we may restrain the erring, wandering ones, and snatch a coward from him who sitteth high above the heavens.

GAS AND PARSONS.—Rev. Newman Hall communicates to the Independent an incident which recently occurred in one of the outdoor meetings which he has been holding. A free-thinker who happened to be present rose and said he came to hear temperance, but that in his opinion the man who invented gas had done more to enlighten the world than all the parsons. Quite a disturbance ensued, but a friend of Mr. Hall at once begged for a fair hearing even for the objector; and then hearing himself called up, he said, "Mr. Chairman—I'm for free thought and for free speech; and yonder gentleman has a right to speak and think for himself as much as I have. (Loud cheers from the friends of the objector.)—That gentleman says he considers the man who invented gas did more to enlighten the world than all the parsons. Well if that is his opinion he has a right to hold it, and a right to maintain it. But, whatever our different opinions, there is a time coming to us all, when we call death, when most men are somewhat serious, and like to get advice and comfort respecting the world they are going to. Now, when the season comes to one friend, I would recommend him to send for the gas man." An immense laughing with a tumult of applause followed this reply, which, Mr. Hall says, was better than a sermon; and not likely to be forgotten.

A BOTT.—A correspondent maintains that a lady who chastisingly pulls an annoying insect ought not to be a victim of being ridiculed. If she will make a barrel of herself, she must accept to be treated as a butt.

A young lady was told by a married lady that she had better precipitate herself off Lebanon bridge than marry. The young lady replied, 'I would if I could find a husband at the bottom.'

We've heard of a secret down in Liverpool which was so big that it required all the women in the town to keep it, and then they could not do so without the help of their husbands.

A married lady, being asked to waltz, gave the following suitable and appropriate answer: 'No, thank you, sir; I have had my dough enough at home.'

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

When the Canadian Government determined on depriving the Church of England and Ireland in this country of the property granted to her by a pious monarch, the spoliation was justified on the ground that it was desirable all connection between Church and State cease. Our Church accepted the situation, thankful to be delivered from the trammels of the State, and hoping to be free from all interference on the part of the Government in our religious affairs; but the commissioners in our estimate last week on the subject of the Marriage License Fund points out very forcibly the inconsistency of the Government, in first denouncing all connection between State and Church, and then interfering with the religious rites of the latter; went is so recently imposing a heavy tax on Churchmen when they wish to perform a certain religious rite, and lastly to give a preference towards Roman Catholics by permitting them to escape from burdens which they impose upon our Protestant Church.

It may be urged that the treaty of Quebec guaranteed to the Romish Church in Lower Canada perfect freedom in the enjoyment of its religious observances, but the Act only applies to Lower Canada, and are we to be told that a conquered though brave people are to enjoy greater privileges than the ever faithful, loyal and devoted servants of the Crown?

Again it may be said, that this Marriage License Fund, is not a religious matter, but simply a civil ordinance, secular as any other tax. If so, why are Roman Catholics exempted from this secular imposition?

Or it may be argued that the fund is a source of revenue to the State, and if relinquished the people must be taxed in some other way to make up the deficiency. Very good—only let the Roman Catholics bear their fair share of the burden as well as the Protestants. We do not understand how religious equality can be said to exist when such partial discrimination in favor of one particular religious body only is permitted.

We are not actuated by any feelings of animosity toward any other denomination of professing Christians. We admire the zeal they evince in demanding and protecting their rights, and we exhort Churchmen to follow their example and insist upon receiving from the Government total exemption from all interference with the rules of our Church and from special and therefore odious taxation.

As regards the interests of morality, the present arrangement of marriage licenses is a fruitful source of abomination; there is hardly a clergyman in the Province but can adduce instances of the gross irregularities which are committed under the sanction of Government license. It is in no spirit of levity that we declare it would be quite possible to obtain a Government license permitting a man to marry his grandmother or for Caraual Manning to be united in the bonds of matrimony to Adah Isaac Menken though the latter be dead in her grave.

We protest against the issue of these Government marriage licenses as a grievous wrong to the consciences of the clergy, who, as consequence of them, are placed in a most painful position. Not long ago a suit was brought in Montreal against a minister by a parent for marrying his son—a minor—to an elderly lady. The parties came prepared with a Government license, never the less the minister was fined—if we remember rightly—$100 for doing what the Government authorized him to do. He never heard that the bridegroom or the agent were call to account.

Let us imagine the case of a clergyman brought up before the Bishops' Court for innovations against the Rubrics of our Reformed Church. The accused might dare his accusers to throw the first stone; any more, with all respect we say the Bishop would hesitate to punish a clergyman for a breach of rubrical observance, when he himself had countenanced and performed similar breaches of the Church's rules.

Our Church insists upon three publications of banns before marriage; but the 101st Canon of the Church declares "by whom license to marry without banns shall be granted and to what sort of persons." It enjoins that the license "shall be granted only to such as have episcopal authority." Every Bishop therefore has the authority, but we prefer that the Metropolitan in Provincial Synod should authorize the issue of marriage licenses.

Every person who attended the last meeting of the Synod in Toronto must have witnessed with pride and pleasure the intelligence, eloquence, order and decorum of its lay members. We appeal to these gentlemen to protest their Church from a gratuitous tax. Year after year they are called upon to sustain the ministrations of their Church, many of our rural parishes are languishing for means, yet all the while they are submitting to a special tax of which their share in Ontario amounted last year to $16,202, and from which a large number of their fellow subjects are exempt.

The object of the Church Herald is to unite Churchmen in the defence of the rights of the Church and the spread of its principles. Here is a common ground for all to unite. We yet hope, by becoming the organ of Churchmen in this Diocese, to subserve the best interests of the Church and to assist in protecting her from everything like oppression and partial legislation on the part of the Government. There is no room for discussion within, so long as we are injured by encroachments from without.—Church Herald.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Herald's Cable special from London, 10th, states that the agitation in relation to the Irish Church Bill threatens to become serious. Preparations are actively being made for imposing demonstrations against the House of Lords. Mr. Gladstone has hitherto hesitated to encourage the meetings, but has consented to give some officials mention on the ground that the Lords attempted to quickly their opposition to the will of the Government and people on the ground of pretended change in public sentiment. It is certain, however, that the Commons will refuse to yield to the Lords' amendments except on three points, not affecting the principle of the Bill. It is expected that the open-air meeting will be the largest ever known.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Letters from Cuban officers say that the arrest of the Cuba Junta in New York, produced regret and despondency. They, however, say that the Cubans will fight with renewed desperation, with the cry of "Liberty or Death," as no mercy can be expected from the Spaniards.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Herald's special London, July 11, says:—"At a Cabinet meeting held yesterday it was resolved that the Government will not oppose in any of the amendments to the Irish Church Bill that will in any way impair the principle of total disendowment. It is rumoured that Lords Cherendon, Granville, and Hertington, evinced a disposition to yield, but were finally overruled by the other members present.

Mr. Gladstone and the Church of Scotland.

(From the London Globe.)

Mr. Gladstone recorded an interview to a deputation from the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland on Friday afternoon. The Assembly's representatives (Dr. Norman MacLeod, Moderator; Dr. Pirie, Aberdeen; Dr. Smith, North Leith; and Major Bahle) were introduced by Sir H. Austruther, M. P., and were accompanied by the Earl of Rosr, the Marquess of Lorn, and a great proportion of the Scotch members.

Dr. MacLeod read the petition presented to both Houses of Parliament in the name of the late Assembly, by whom, in a house of 221 members, it had been adopted, the ministers voting for it in the proportion of 69 per cent., and the elders in the proportion of 67 per cent. The people of Scotland had always, he remarked, been averse from a law which had been thrust upon them by an unscrupulous Government at the beginning of the last century. For 70 years they had constantly renewed their prot st against its operation, and more recently it had led to various secessions from the Church, the latest being in 1843. To bring the election of Ministers into harmony with the feelings of the people, the promoters of the movement wished the heritors and the congregations to determine the choice of their pastors independently of patronage altogether. It was no factious or selfish movement, being for the good of the country; and he hoped the Government, over which Mr. Gladstone presided with such eminent ability, would see their way to introduce a bill next session in order to carry out the views of the petitioners.

Mr. Gladstone, in the course of his reply, said if legislative action were to be taken in the direction indicated, he wished to know if those who had left the Established Church—the members of the Free Church, the United Presbyterian Church, and the other Presbyterian bodies—would not be disposed to turn round and say that the ecclesiastical property should be divided and made over to those who had borne earliest testimony to the very principle now contended for. Dr. MacLeod replied that he had never heard that theory propounded any where by any party. Mr. Robertson, M. P., was convinced that Government action in this matter was all that was required to open the door for the union of the Established and Free Churches. Mr Gladstone requested the deputation to put in the hands of the Government some authoritative document by the Committee, embodying details in which neither they nor Parliament could be expected to be interested, before bringing the matter before his colleagues. He could, meanwhile, give no immediate promise on the subject, but, although willing to consider it, it was impossible it could be taken up during the busy session. The deputation then withdrew.

The pontoon bridge across the Assiniboine, near Fort Garry, is now ready for travel.

Next week we shall enlarge upon the great natural advantages which the country possesses for the construction of a British Pacific Railway.

The town of Winnipeg increases even under present circumstances. We notice eight very respectable buildings in the course of erection now, whilst a number of others are contemplated to be put up during the summer.

We understand that the buffaloes are now on their way north, and that immense herds are seeking their usual feeding-grounds in this Territory. Report says that they were seven days in crossing the Missouri, and that they are now not far from Devil's Lake.

A gentleman now in the town, arrived from San Francisco, Cal., in twenty-one travelling days. He came by the Union Pacific railway to Dubuque, on the Mississippi, and thence to St. Paul by steamer. Had he come by railway direct to St. Paul, he would have arrived here in nineteen days from the Pacific coast. Verily, we live in an age of progress! and may the time be short when we too shall be able to reach our own Pacific coast in less than a week's travel from Winnipeg.

The glorious news of the acceptance of the terms of surrender, by the Canadian Parliament reached us late last evening and the lateness of the hour prevented any more general demonstration than an impromptu bonfire built on the prairie between Dr. Schultz's and the Forth. Mr. Chas. Mair led proceedings on the occasion, a beautiful flag having "Canada" in large letters on the field, which, raised by Dr. W. R. Brown, and floating from a tapering staff certainly fast in height, presented an appearance such as was never before beheld in the North-West Territory.

The loyalty of the Honorable Company is a most remarkable thing. Upon Her Majesty's birthday, when our town was filled with people from all parts of the settlement, we looked in vain for a flag to be hoisted upon the staff at the Fort; but when Wm. McTavish, Esq., Governor of the Hudson Bay Company in this Territory rode and, the British flag was displayed, and the whole establishment turned out and fired off seven guns in honor of his arrival. This loyalty is in accordance with the Company's precedents in this country. The flag, by the way, was divested of the usual H. B. and was the only really British ensign we have ever seen hoisted upon Fort Garry.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Letters from Puerto Principe, Cuba, of June 22nd, say Colonel Alcesta Alvarez' sugar plantation has been burned. A party of disguised patriots attempted the capture of the town on the morning of the 18th but were driven off. The inhabitants are in the last stage of poverty, and no business has been done for a long time. Planters have heard nothing from the plantations in six months. Artizans are out of employment, police and other municipal employees have 15 months pay in arrears. Horses and servants can be had for almost nothing, and people have been deprived of meat.

LYNDON, Ont., July 13.—Mr. James Doty, of Campbellford, Ont., met with an accident here on Saturday evening last, which will terminate fatally about 10 a. m. to-day. He attempted to get on board a train while in motion, missed his hold and fell underneath. He was going to the Western States with his family and stock. He leaves a wife and ten children to mourn his loss.

GALWAY, July 12.—Fenian outrages are of almost daily occurrence. Last night Capt. Lambert was shot at near his own house in the county and was fatally wounded. The assassin was arrested.

DUBLIN, July 12.—The Orange incendiaries made a strong public parade in Belfast and other towns to day, but no disturbances, in consequence, are reported.

AMERICAN LIBERTY.

The following from the 4th of July oration in New York, which a number of gentlemen of American birth—Senator Stockbridge, of New Jersey—did the honor of this day. He said:—

"This war for the maintenance of the supremacy of the Constitution and the rights of the States has been over for more than four years. Are the "objects" and "purposes" of the war accomplished? First it was proclaimed that the States which had been in rebellion had forfeited all rights; the people were at the mercy of the victors; they were slaves which they had conquered with the sword and the spear—they had a right to fasten them to their chariot wheels and drag them in their triumphal procession. Their former slaves were made their masters—were enfranchised and made the governing power, subject only to a veto of answer in the shape of a boycott. This carnival Christine orgies have got back to the times before Gracchus wrote, even in the treatment of a conquered people, if the condition is the result of the war. (Applause and shame.) Since that time the Freedmen's Bureau bills the reconstruction acts, the Tenure-of-Office bill, the action of our military commanders as well as the recent opinion of the Attorney-General of the United States, have reduced a large portion of our country to a condition much worse than that to which our fathers referred as marking King George "as a tyrant unfit to be the ruler of a free people." There they have rendered the military independent of and superior to the civil power; they are taxed without consent.—Without free representation, without the power of "choosing" their representatives, they are slaves, they are deprived in many cases of the trial by jury. (Cheers) But the Declaration of Independence charged the King with attempting "fundamentally to alter the powers of the government." And this is true now, not only in reference to the States formerly in rebellion, but in reference to the States of New York and New Jersey, and all the States. They are deliberately engaged in an attempt, step by step, to deprive the people of their power of local self government. Drop, for the moment, all such words as 'State Sovereignty,' State's Rights," &c., which have got to be so misused as to cloud reason. It is the people who are being deceived, and their liberties which are being torn away while they are dragged with General Grant and military glory. (Applause.)

EMIGRANTS.—The steamer Passport arrived at the Young street wharf yesterday morning with about 450 English emigrants, and a large quantity of their baggage brought out by the troop-ship Simoon, which reached Quebec last Friday morning. They are nearly all single men, and remarkable for their intelligence, and smart and clean appearance. The greater portion of them are mechanics, who were employed in the Government dockyard and in Woolwich arsenal; but they express themselves ready to do anything, and consequently several farmers who called at the Emigration Office yesterday morning, soon supplied themselves with hands for farm labour, many of them promising employment, not only during harvest but as long afterwards as they wished to stay, if they proved themselves suitable. Mr. Donaldson was busy yesterday morning in sending the parties off in different directions to situations that were open to them, and about 50 of them go to Hamilton. An agent was busy endeavoring to hire some of them to work on the road between Fort William and Fort Garry, offering them $15 per month and board, with transportation to the scene of their labor; but the farmers seemed to have the better of him in the struggle for help.—Globe 13th.

DR. W. D. POTTS CAUGHT AT LAST.—Many of our readers will remember the noted Dr. Potts, who flourished in London for a brief period about three years since, and who, for a portion of his time, occupied quarters in the county gaol, for "laying on of hands" too freely on one of his patients. At the time of his visit here many thought him a persecuted man, while others considered him one of the greatest villians unhung. The latter estimate of his character has proved correct. It will be remembered that he was committed to gaol here to take his trial on a charge of criminal assault. A couple of gentlemen who sympathized with him in his condition at that time, and believing him to be a victim of persecution, went his bail. He eventually left the city, failed to come to time on the day of trial and his bail was extracted. The scamp afterwards turned up in Buffalo, where he "laid on hands" for some months, some which period nothing was heard of him by his friends in this section. He has made his mark at last, and stands a fair chance of getting his deserts—in a word, he now lies in gaol on a charge of murder.—Ottawa Citizen.

The following letter has been circulated privately among known progressives:—

SIR,—In view of the probable failure of the Irish Church bill through the opposition of the House of Lords to the Government, the Commons and the country, you are requested to inform the Secretary of the Reform League whether you are willing that your name shall be used in the event of a defeat of the measures, to a public call for a mass meeting to consider the best constitutional method of getting rid of the obstruction to Legislation, to be passed upon the expressed will of the people.

BROTHER GOING TO LAW WITH BROTHER.—A writ of quo warranto has been issued on behalf of Mr. L. H. Davidson, calling upon Mr. Geo. B. Boker of Cornwallis, to show by what authority he holds the office of Delegate to the Anglican Synod, from the Church at Cornwallis. It will be remembered that both gentlemen claimed the position at the last meeting of the Synod and that Mr. Boker's credentials were sustained by a vote of that body. The writ is made returnable on the 19th inst., and will be prosecuted upon before Mr. Justice McKay, during vacation.—News.

QUEBEC, July 12.—Another unseemly contention like that at Montreal took place to-day between different national societies here, in the presentation of addresses to the Governor General. The President of St. Jean Society claimed precedence; others objected but offered to draw lots. This was refused and the Governor heard of the dispute and refused to receive any of them. At the Levee the Councils, Judges, and Roman Catholic Clergy and Archbishop of Quebec, &c., were presented by His Excellency; also addresses from the Board of Trade and Synod.

At Prescott the cholera has appeared in such myriads as to cause almost like a shower of brown sugar. On Wednesday the fly was in such numbers along the railway track as to "grease the wheels" so that the conductors at one point had to have the rails sanded for nearly a mile before he could get along.—Witness.

FREE GRANTS.

Our Government in their liberality, after years of doubts and fears and delays, last year placed a few acres of wild lands as "free grants." During the present year they have added a few more acres in Minden, Stanhope and vicinity; perhaps next year they will offer a few acres more. It is true that all the lands offered have not yet been taken up, nor could this be expected. If those going in to settle should from time to time find that they had to wait for a new manifesto from the Crown Lands Office, they would soon cease to look toward our backwoods for homes. There should be inducements offered, and all the regulations easily obtained, so that intending settlers would know what they were doing. Now, it is well known that not more than one-half of our people have ever read these government papers where they advertise. Even through this county only about one-half of the people read any one of the newspapers, and with what show of reason can they account for offering those lands through but one organ. Is it really so that more than one-half of the people must receive their information through an organ whose politics they despise, just because said organ chooses to purchase its pap at the price of a thick and thin support of all the vagaries and maladministration their lords and masters may think fit to serve the country with.

Apart from this, Government suppose must be mute on every subject, except those things their superiors set forth. To offer advice or warning is to incur the risk of losing their bread and butter, and this is sufficient to ensure perfect silence on all matters that concern the country. At the present time it is almost impossible to travel over the first seven miles of the Burleigh Road.—Rocks, ruts, stones, stumps and dilapidated crossways are the general order for about four miles from the Burleigh Bridge, and all the way for perhaps twelve miles the road is in a bad state. What statute labour, if any, has been done on it has been lost for the want of system, or perhaps for want of enough labour to do any part well, as on several parts of the road there are no settlers for miles. The municipality is too poor to spend money on it, and the government spends nothing, or almost nothing. In another year it will be impassable, and yet they are making roads at the Monck line and beyond it. What common sense can there be in making roads miles further back than a settler is to be found, while the front part of the roads over which all must pass in going in is in such a wretched state, except when they get settlers in to protect their getting out again? In several places a small sum would make the road passable for quite a distance. The removal of small stones and the filling up of ruts would not cost a great deal on the back part of it, but it would require a considerable sum to repair the first few miles. This, however, is absolutely necessary. Another thing could be done: several of the settlers are in debt for part of their lands and are scarcely able to pay. They could, however, under the direction of Mr. Graham, pay a little for them. Money must be spent to repair the road; the people are not able to do it; by allowing those in arrears to go to work by contract, as otherwise those poor people would then be enabled to pay their debts to the government, means of ingress and egress would be secured, and the government would be enabled to retain the money, in great part, they are now disbursing. Objections to this scheme may be sought out and set forth, but this is certain, that if the back country is ever to be settled there must be a way in to it.—Those settlers, too, must be leniently dealt with, for the quality of the land is such as requires all the energies of the settlers for years to ensure a living at all.

The Irish Church Bill has been so much changed by the Lords that the Commons will hardly recognize it. This, however, will only tend to serve the Commons to reject the work of the Lords, and so produce a crisis between the two Houses. The Lords propose to postpone the disposal of the surplus money arising out of the church property. Mr. Gladstone proposed to apply it to the relief of the poor and suffering in Ireland, and this is indeed the most reasonable. The Bill will be passed in opposition to the Lords, and according to the wish of the nation generally; and the sooner the better, as a contest between wealth and the people will eventually be to the advantage of the latter.

AUDITOR-GENERAL FOR ONTARIO.—The rumour is that the Hon. Wm. Cayley is about to be appointed Auditor-General for Ontario. A new office for some old friend.

Beautiful hard coal—display at the Toronto Exhibition looking towards Cuba. These have slipped south of the designs of the framers.

The Bishop of Ontario proposes as a panacea for all the evils that exist in families, especially for the "loose, reckless ideas of marriage" that exist "in regard to the celebration of marriage," that all marriages should be solemnized in consecrated houses, "and as a building designed to Almighty God" and to that end he thinks that all the dedicated fanes would prohibit the Government official fees to the altar. How he imagines that the time or the pleasure of a marriage can affect the parties to it, we leave to himself.—But very few who have given this matter any thought will trouble themselves whether the contract is completed in a church or in a parlour. Whatever evils exist, they are the consequences of public opinion being evil, and this is not so easily brought to a healthy moral state as the Bishop imagines.

It would be an instructive problem for the clergy, who desire the entire control of civil and religious contracts, to solve, whether those marriages that have been celebrated in "buildings devoted to Almighty God" have been happier in their results than those celebrated in the family residence or other places?

In the early history of mankind, we fail to find any record of marriage ceremonies being performed in church buildings, and much less of ministers of religion performing those ceremonies. It was considered a civil contract, and was only mixed with religious duties when the church usurped the control of things temporal and spiritual. So long as it is considered a religious ceremony it will be held in the same light as religious duty is held: and where the people's notions of religious duties are lax, so will it be of this act also, even though celebrated in the most sacred edifice.

The last is the "loose sentiments" of the present day are the result of the loose ideas of "public opinion," and this "opinion" is so strong that neither in the pulpit, in the family, nor in the press is it meddled with. Almost all the sins of the decalogue are violated, and yet only referred to in the most vague and common place manner.—Too often they are broken in the presence of Bishops and Presbyters, and the violator goes unrebuked. The libertine is received into the family circle, and into the Church. The drunkard is wished at in the social party, and that very often by the ministers of religion, for fear of getting up trouble in the Church; ante-natal murder is heard of, and not a word spoken against it unless in the secular press. The giddy dance, and other evil social circle amusements are permitted without reproof. All manner of excesses and extravagance is carried on under the auspices of the same public opinion, and shared in by the religious community as well as by the openly ungodly. While these continue unreproved how can time, or place, or any other remarkable whim affect the moral atmosphere of "loose sentiments" that prevails? We heartily concur in the following from the Observer (Bible Christian) on this subject:—

"We submit, 1st. That the disease cannot be cured by the external application of any such specific. Mothers must be educated relative to their maternal duties, and our Pastors must labor to instruct their young people in this vital question; nor must the pulpit be silent thereon, and let the press speak out in no muffled sounds, and under the divine blessing we should soon have a more healthy sentiment on the subject of 'Christian Marriage.'"

It is rumored that the St. Patrick's Society of Montreal and the Hibernian Society of Quebec are sending several hundreds of letters to Cork, Tipperary, Waterford and Kerry, and all through Connaught, warning the people against Mr. J. G. Moylan, who has been sent home to induce emigration to this country, and denouncing him as worse than Corradan or Massey.

If these societies are guilty of this they are the worst enemies their countrymen can have. Mr. Moylan was accused of too warm sympathy if anything with his fellow-countrymen on the United States and Canada, although not connected with their designs. He also well knows the liberty of speech and action his countrymen possess in Canada, as well as the opportunities thereare of attaining to comforts and positions they never could attain in Ireland, and these societies which seek to deter men from coming to this country, because Fenianism cannot run rampant here, are worse than the vilest traitors. In this country Catholics have become wealthy, very many of them possessing fine farms, beautiful dwellings, large herds of sheep, cattle, horses, &c.

One farmer in Eastmore is reported to possess 1,000 acres of splendid land, and many others have 300 and 400 acres. They enjoy all the security the best institutions in the world bestow. They go in and out, none daring to molest or make them afraid. They are elected to municipal honors and appointed magistrates, and occupy positions they would not in like circumstances, perhaps, in any other country, and assuredly never would have, had they remained in their native country, and so long as they are industrious, sober, and civil their influence will be hailed with pleasure; but we want none of those city strugglers from cities and towns who love the bottle too well to be good citizens in any country. It should be remembered, too, Montreal and Quebec outsiders are somewhat noted for their alleged feelings of exclusion, and, hence, their opposition to Mr. Moylan, or to any one else, should form an excellent passport to their countrymen.

AUDITORS GENERAL.

The Reifenstein case at Ottawa affords a wholesome moral on the necessity for an Auditor General. Reifenstein was confidential clerk in the Receiver General's office; Mr. Langton is Auditor General, and yet Mr. Reifenstein embezzled $60,000 of public money, and Mr. Auditor Langton never detected it. It remained for Mr. Amos Wright to find out the robbery. And how many such cases there may be yet no one knows. What was Auditor General Langton doing while this was going on? Several letters appeared lately in the Ottawa dailies in reference to the misfeasance of Mr. Langton; doubt note speak louder than words. The man who pay-leaves to be an idleness in his office and yet permits a systematic robbery of $60,000 must have a weak place somewhere.

We see it stated that Ontario is to have an Auditor General some to see after her accounts. Let us hope that some one qualified for the position will be chosen, since one there must be.

After all who is better qualified to audit accounts than the Treasurer, who is also accountable to the people, and has likely than any corrupt to embezzle the funds committed to him? The public funds would be just as safe in the management and oversight of Treasurer Wood, as any individual appointed by the Government. The appointment of an Auditor can only be to increase offices.

The Battle of July.

THE Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was celebrated by the Peterboro brethren at Millbrook. At an early hour, the usual bustle preparing for the proceedings was visible. Five Lodges left town on the morning and were met at Millbrook by some more Lodges. Proceedings was formed, and to the lively and accustomed tunes, the brethren marched through the different streets. At the general rendezvous, the Rev. Mr. Ewing, of Mount Pleasant, Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of Centreville and Millbrook, Presbyterians, and the Rev. Mr. Allen, Episcopalian, addressed the assembled people, about 4,000 in number it is believed. D. G. Hatton, Esq., County Master of Peterborough, also addressed them. After refreshments and brotherly greetings, they returned home in good order.

The Lakefield lodge went to Bobcaygeon, where the brethren from the County of Victoria were assembled.

The brethren in the neighbourhood of Keene celebrated the day by themselves.

The day was pleasant and all was quiet and orderly; not a word was heard on the streets, nor was there a man to be seen "the worse of liquor."

There was general quietness and good order everywhere in the Dominion during the day and evening; less disturbance or manifestation of feeling than in former years.

There was no procession in Toronto, as all the lodges went to St. Catherines.

In London, Ont., there was a large turn out.

At Kingston, we are told that the Roman Catholic citizens watched the procession approvingly, so agreeably have the Orange and the Green been blended under the benign influence of Sir John A. McDonald.

At New York a sharp riot occurred between a party of Catholics and Orangemen. Some 20 or 30 persons were injured, but none seriously.

In Belfast, Ireland, a riot occurred, and for a time mob-law was supreme. It was soon quelled. Only one arrest was made.

There were other processions, but very little disturbance is yet heard of, contrary to all expectations.

ACCIDENT AT MATHER'S CORNER, OTONABEE.—Mr. Peter McFarlane, a young man who has lately returned from college to spend vacation, met with a rather serious accident, while out shooting, on Monday the 12th instant. It appears he had laid the gun down upon the ground for a moment, when upon retaking it with the right hand and while in the act of adjusting the ramrod, the piece discharged, carrying away the thumb of the left hand entirely, and frightfully mutilating the part of the hand contiguous. Dr. Dean was called in and dressed the wound. As the hammer of the gun was down at the time, also there being nothing against which it could have struck or caught, and as he was simply raising the gun, the cause of the discharge must remain a mystery, and teaches that too much caution cannot be observed in the use of loaded firearms. We learn that an accident very similar in result happened a few hours earlier of the same day, to a young man on Rice Lake, one of the excursionists from Keene, with a revolver.—Com.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skilful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Carnes'-Hotel, on Thursday, August 5th, and will remain till the evening of Saturday, August 7th. He will be in Lindsay, at Jewett's Hotel on Tuesday, August 10th. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of diseases of the most complicated and miserable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession. Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skillful in the treatment of consumption as well as all other diseases and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—On Monday, the 28th of June, a man named George Davidson, was endeavouring to force a boat up the rapids between Horse-shoe lake and Twelve mile lake in the township of Minden. He had reached the most difficult place in the rapids and was standing up in the boat when it took a sudden turn throwing him into the water. The current held him up for a short time, but coming into an eddy and being no swimmer he sank to rise no more. Search was made for his body, but up to Saturday night last it had not been found. Mr. Davidson leaves a young widow, to whom he was married but one month, to mourn his untimely and unexpected death.

SPEEDY JUSTICE.—The first case under John Sandfield's new act, for the more speedy trial of certain criminals, occurred yesterday. One John Woods was charged before Mr. Edwards by Robert Hamilton, an engineer on the railway to Lakefield, with obtaining two dollars from him under false pretences. He was sent up for trial by the convicting magistrate. The Sheriff reported immediately to the Judge, and then almost in a few hours, he is brought to trial, while under the old act he would have had to lie in jail till November awaiting trial. In trivial offences it will work well, but in offences of a serious nature the punishment is generally too light.

SECURE YOUR HOME.—About a week ago some one whose love for children exceeded his power to keep the commandments, visited Mrs. Dixon's barnyard and carried off almost all her fowls; and on Saturday night last, during the storm, they, perhaps the same party, carried off Mr. Jas. Gleadower's. Suspicion rest on certain parties of somewhat doubtful honesty. That such occurrences exist about the shire of the town should lead to a little care in protecting hen roosts generally.

The Hon. Mr. Rose, Finance Minister of the Dominion, is about to resign. He is going to England as partner in a large Banking firm. It is rumored that Mr. Bridges will succeed him, but A. T. Galt is more likely to return to the Treasury Benches.

CRICKET—PETERBORO vs. BELLEVILLE.—The Peterborough Club played at Belleville yesterday, winning by three runs and six wickets. They play to-day at Kingston, where they expect to be equally successful.

Examinations Continuing Contest.

Shelburne, July 12, 1869.

A special meeting of the Council was held this day.

In the absence of the Reeve, whose circumstances were caused by severe bodily affliction, Mr. Laing was appointed chairman.

A petition was adopted, praying His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor of Ontario that to annex the town lots to the Town of Peterboro.

A petition was received, signed by Wm. Brownscombe and seven others, praying to have a drain made through their town lots, in accordance with the provisions of statute.—Granted. And that Councillors Robson and Birney be a committee to carry out the same.

An order was given on the Treasurer in favor of Robert Bothwell, for $9.75, for 78 loads of gravel, at 12½ cents per load, for boundary road between Cavan and Monaghan.—Com.

PNEUMATIC.—The friends of Mr. Hustwick of the Ontario Bank here will be pleased to hear of his promotion to the management of the Ottawa agency. But while congratulating him on the appointment, we only express the opinion of the whole community, by regretting his departure from us. Mr. Hustwood was the first manager sent here on the opening of a branch in Peterboro, and the directors showed their wisdom in his appointment. His genial and obliging manner, his high moral character, and his aid in every religious and literary undertaking in the town won for him a host of warm friends and the esteem and respect of all. He carries with him the good wishes of all who know him to his new sphere.

All persons suffering from Cancers, which are entirely cured without the use of the knife, Abscess, Ruptures or Hernia, Aneurism, Swellings, Tumours or any Chronic dangerous complaint, should not delay in seeing Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings.

LONDON SOCIETY.—The July number of London Society is received. In this number "The Three Whispers," "Social Superstitions," &c., indeed all the reading matter is attractive. It can be ordered direct from W. C. Chewett & Co., or from Mr. Kidd or Mr. Morrison.

The annual Sabbath School Pic-Nic, in connection with the Wesleyan church, will be held at Lakefield, on the 29th instant. We hope the children will have favorable weather and a pleasant trip.

Mr. Robert Hamilton, at the sign of the Circular Saw, advertises a new Patent Hay Fork for sale. Those about buying improved Farm Implements would do well to call and examine it.

We have been requested to state that the Band of the 57th Battalion will play in the Court House Park, to-morrow (Friday, 16th inst.) instead of Thursday, as heretofore.

In the late Virginia elections the Democrats have defeated the Republicans by large majorities. The Governor elected is a Democrat.

DR. CAMPBELL, the pastor of the Bond-street Baptist Church, Toronto, died of heart disease, on the 9th inst. He was 60 years old.

The last number of the Hearth and Home is a very good one. With this number "The Romance of a Rich Young Girl" commences.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Like others of my fellow townsmen, I was amused by a perusal of the letter of Mr. James W. Fitzgerald in the Review; but beyond a mere perusal neither the letter nor the writer of it would have engaged further notice were it not that so much importance has been attached to so effusion, which while contemptible in spirit comes with its own condemnation in the opinion, at least, of all right minded men. Mr. Fitzgerald is a somewhat peculiar sort of body, which it was presumed most people were aware of, and it was expected, therefore, that for anything emanating from him he alone would be held accountable; and that his vagaries would not be charged against the religious body of whom he claims to be a member. However genuine his production may appear, I for one did not believe that he possessed such qualities, and am hesitant enough to believe better of him. If I am right, after a consideration of his keen sense after everything that tends to his interest or aggrandizement, I leave others to judge. Mr. Fitzgerald has strained many points of late to gain popular, as old dodgers are becoming "played out," he is thrown on his own resources. His late letter is merely an effort to stand on his own bottom, and by hook or by crook secure a semblance of popularity which in time may be converted into cash. His little scheme is this: convince the Catholics of Peterboro that they have a grievance, next that he is the only available champion of their cause, call a meeting of Catholics get the string of resolutions already prepared, endorsed, and point No. 1 is gained. The next move is to exhibit three resolutions to members of the government, in order to convince them that Mr. J. W. F., the P——d I——n is what Black Frank used to say of his amiable spouse, "She is a ————." Seriously, Protestant fellow townsmen, this is the light in which we Catholics view the late exposure of the artful dodger. Mr. J. W. F. Had you been willing to permit him to play his little pranks without notice, so would we. But when it is sought either by himself or others to make us responsible for his sayings, it as we beg to demur, and here let me state that the disclaimer entered by Mr. Doherty at the meeting of the Town Council is endorsed by the unanimous verdict of the Catholics of the town and county also, as far as heard from. Mr. Fitzgerald may get all the pap he can by running his machine on the old line, but he will not be permitted to compromise us and set us at variance with our neighbors, in order to bring grists to his mill. We have to live our own row, and common sense and the necessities of this world teaches us to take things as we find them, and only complain when there is cause. If the Catholics of Peterborough had been imposed upon, Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald would not have been the first to make the discovery. We have in the town and county councils practical and honest, if less pretentious men, to whom we repose confidence, and from them we learn the true injustice has been done us. Without, therefore, going into a minute discussion of particulars, we beg to say broadly that we fail to perceive any grievance in connection with the matter to which Mr. Fitzgerald's letter refers. If in the foregoing the feelings of the Catholics of the town and county are fairly expressed, as I fully believe they are, then the matter as regards Catholics and Protestants is not at issue. There remains, however, an individual named Fitzgerald and his co-religionists. He had no en-

Burdock Blood Bitters is the best Blood Purifier in the world. Try it.

Mr. ALEX. Somerville, the "whistler at the plough," has published in the Montreal Gazette, an abridged narrative of the case of the Rev. John McMillan, now in the Penitentiary as a Fenian convict. Mr. Somerville has controlled himself that Mr. McMillan's case is "hardly parallel in the annals of misadventure" . . . that "he was at first [illegible] arrested, afterwards left quietly [illegible] on trial, partly by accident, largely through somebody's neglect, and was condemned to be hanged," "without a hand being raised to help him save Mr. Somerville's. Mr. S. narrates the circumstances of Mr. McMillan's being on his way to Montreal to wind up his brother's estate, where will Mr. S. himself continued. He also shows wherein the facts as three of the priest were not brought out at the trial, &c., and concludes with the emphatic declaration that "the issues before the executive and the power of commutation rest with the Queen alone." It was generally understood some time ago that this peculiar case would be taken into favorable consideration after the close of the session, with the prospect then he would be released.—Ottawa Times.

MYSTERY PAUL DERRICK, of Millbrook, feeling his earthly tabernacle stored with troubles, as we expelled, decided, after full enquiry and investigation, to employ Ayer's Pills. In his hearty he partly his Dutch stomach, he stopped his directions, took to it, and swallowed it! It was done. Pain ceased, of course, as everything internal rebellion. But Paul went through the fight like a hero, and came off victor at last, with a restored system which he proudly exhibits as proof of the wisdom of his choice. He advises everybody to take Ayer's Cathartic Pills, but kindly advises his friends who are ambitious of following his example, to "be sure and take the right bottle." (Minnesota Telegraph.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland commenced its annual sittings in Belfast on Monday, the 7th ult., and from the reports of its proceedings it seems evident that Presbyterians in Ireland have escaped the situation, and here with a good grace to the inevitable. If this be so they show themselves sensible men. Mr. Gladstone's Bill deals very liberal with them, as with all the other religionists involved, and the world be greater fools than we take them to be, if they did not see that such is the fact.—Ed.

The interminable Alabama claims have again been under consideration by the English House of Commons

A Horrible Case of Insanity.

A horrible case of religious aberration has recently occurred in South Carolina. A Mr. Leach, his wife and four children united Sarah, Polly, Eli and Hannah, because intimate friends of the same name as a "pretended worship," and began to see visions. Sally claimed to be the true God, the mother also saw Polly on the steam, and sometimes herself fell on her head the theory ensues, and Sally on her daughter appear on her footstool during prayer. They held meetings in the [illegible] room, one day with their [illegible] raised up above their elbows, kneeling dried chestnut from or to the other [illegible] their naked arms and hands were covered with blood. One night, while Sally and her mother [illegible] some passage in Scripture, a dispute arose, commenced by both of them claiming to be God. The mother thought Sally was the devil and ordered her arms and husband to tie her; they did so, and thrust her—her hands tied together—out of the door. She attempted to get in; Hannah seized a pot of lard and tried to push her away, while the mother, unable to hold the door against her, ordered Eli to shoot the devil; he fired, hitting her in the hand, and then, as they theorized it afterwards, "the devil surrendered off the shoulders." Soon she was back again pushing her bloody hands to get a hole in the door, when Eli was again ordered to shoot. Hannah handed the rifle with two bullets and drew it to Eli, who said, "Father, must I shoot?" "If nothing else will do," said he, "you better shoot;" and said Eli, "This time I plumped him right between the eyes." The body lay outside the door until daylight, when the mother ordered the rest to carry the devil to the hog-house and bury it. They did, pushing among his last a bit of the spring had split, a rail or two, some portions of the old cabin, and the cushion of the swelling themselves had hips in the salve. The family were taken up gaol, and while they were all attempting the rope, a heavy grand jury from an open cap and elbow, the same killed the mother by choking her. A trial resulted in their acquittal on the ground of insanity.—Boston Courier.

The Irish Mail Gazette of a late date says—Lord Monck, who is on his way to the Irish Church Commissioners, joined in the debate last night only to elaborate some illustrations illustrating the position of the Canadian Church. The voluntary system came into operation in Canada in 1854, and a return published under episcopal supervision shows that the number of clergy has risen since that time from 200 to 413, just double. The bishop of Montreal testified to the enormous increase not only in clergy, but in contributions by the support of the Church; and the Bishop of Toronto wrote as follows:—"There have been within the last five years fourteen new churches built, varying in cost from 1,500 to 12,000 dollars, and costing in all, in moderate computation, 45,000 dollars. There have been expended on the erection of twelve new parsonages within the same period 14,000 dollars. There have been subscribed to this diocese during the last four years towards the formation of an episcopal endowment in money and lands 40,000 dollars. All the above is exclusive of the annual contributions to the Church Society."

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE ON THE CARS.—A man named Atchison, aged 45 years, a tailor by trade, from Galt, Ont., attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a penknife, while on board the G. T. cars, going west, on Thursday last. It appears that Atchison has been drinking hard of late and went to Toronto on Tuesday to meet his sister, who arrived from England by the "S. Patrick." She refused to accompany her brother to Galt, and went off with an acquaintance to Boston. Atchison seems to have afterwards abandoned himself to drink and left Toronto on Wednesday night for Galt. Half stupefied with drink he got into an excited conversation with some fellow-travellers about Fenianism, and, in a moment of frenzy, drew a knife across his throat from ear to ear with a penknife. His blood was almost and the wound was not deep. The [illegible] accompanied by [illegible] passengers, but was overpowered, and at Guelph he was put in charge of the police. Dr. Stark dressed his wound.

From an autopsy made of Mr. Raymond's body it appears that his death was owing to the bursting of a blood vessel in the brain. He ate a late and hearty dinner the day before his death, and had eaten again later in the evening. It is probable that there was some congestion of the brain from indigestion. As he stooped to close the lower half of his door, the strain, brought by the sudden stooping on the enfeebled blood vessels, caused the catastrophe. He at once fell insensible, and all the medical assistance in the world, if rendered instantly, would not have saved him. Mr. Raymond's grandfather and uncle died from apoplexy.

The Quebec writes to the Quebec Chronicle denying the truth of the statement made by that paper to the effect that Lord Monck, notwithstanding his professed admiration for the voluntary system of Church support, contributed nothing for this object while at Quebec. Mr. Cuthbert, who is a member of the Church at which Lord Monck and his family attended, says that on the contrary Mr. Lowndes was always liberal in his contributions to Church purposes.

FASTEST PASSAGE ON RECORD.—The R.M.S. S. "Scotia," of the Cunard Line, arrived off Cork harbor, Ireland, on the 25th June, from New York, having made the passage across the Atlantic in eight days and one hour, the quickest homeward voyage ever made. The average running per day was a little over 336 miles, which, is equal to an average speed of 14 knots per hour. The "Scotia" has half 267 first-class cabin passengers on board.

AMERICAN GOOD FOR CANADA.—A number of Armstrong guns were lately sent out from Britain for distribution in the towns and cities of the Dominion. The Royal Mail steamer, Corinthian, in her last up-coast trip, had gone on board which she delivered for the following places:—Hamilton, Guelph, London, Brantville, Prescott, Collingwood, Kingston, Port Hope and Cobourg.

The Belleville Intelligencer of the 6th instant, says that Professor Macoun, of Albert College, has left en route for Fort William, Lake Superior, on a Botanical expedition, under the auspices of the Natural History Society of Montreal.

We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who are suffering to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. THE RENAISSANCE BISTERS OF YUCATAN—which include all of Quebec, are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still speak some of the picturesque words and Pyramid gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of Chemists digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with chemical agitator a coil of rope and a keg of water, they are ready for the forest when the wild beasts furnished them with food, and thatch-leaf of trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble lab-rers, who dig roots for the benefit of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while their employers lose their ears.—[Boston Commercial.

Don't Know What to Do.

We sometimes hear persons say, "my house is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order; they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and recently that its effects were most satisfactory. One horse-dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darby's Canadian Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbors, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be contemplated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

In not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it to ultimate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." One bottle of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in theory what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Rheumatism Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear boards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they not take a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and dazzling appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts. per bottle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Colds, Coughs, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, for its many severe, yet uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the throat and lungs, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease [illegible] to young children, it is by the most robust constitutions, when the latent fire in them first kindles into consumption, and the dangerous symptoms of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed no one of the numerous ills to which we are liable, should be left unprovided with this antidote for them.

Consumption, which fastens its dreaded fangs upon its victims, and bears unmercifully on, from one stage to another, till the last symptom is developed, and the poor sufferer resigned to eternal death by the physicians of the Lungs and Throat, they say, can be cured, and we have the most abundant proofs that it can, in the Cherry Pectoral they unhesitatingly recommend.

Asthma is always relieved, and often cured, by it.

Bronchitis is promptly cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known, that we deem it unnecessary to publish certificates here, or to assure the public that its qualities are fully sustained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Fever and Chills, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and indeed the whole class of diseases originating from Miasmatic Poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is novice to any one. The Ague cake, and other effects of the poison in the system, are literally forced outward, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines, the public is assured, by the most ample proofs, that no remedy has been offered to the afflicted which can in any degree compare with it in the certainty of its cures, and the perfect freedom from every injurious quality. Even those cases which have baffled the skill of the Ague Cure, and those cases which have baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, resort to it, are immediately benefited by its use, and rapidly recover under the influence of this powerful antidote. Being purely vegetable, it imparts no injurious quality to the blood, but, on the contrary, expels the disease-breeding poisons which have rendered it impure, and thus leaves the system in a healthy condition. The people may rest assured that they will find in the Ague Cure a perfect protection against the fevers of the South and West, and all those fevers contracted in the vicinity of stagnant water, or in the decomposing vegetation of new settlements, or in the autumnal months. Travellers and residents in, or emigrating from, the chill districts, should be provided with it. Shaking Fever and Ague can be cured by taking the Ague Cure only.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is the best remedy ever discovered. In many cases of Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, Nausea, Headache, arising from Biliousness, or Derangement of the Liver, a few doses will work a miracle cure.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold by all around the world.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pleathisis or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, by loss, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

The Great English Remedy:

SIR JAMES CLARK

Poetry.

I HAVE NO WIFE.

BY GEO. H. S——D.

I have no wife! young girls are fair,
But how it is, I cannot tell,
No sooner they are wed than their
Contentment bid them all farewell;
The girls, God bless them! make us yearn
To rich all odds and take a wife,
To cling to one, and not to turn
Ten thousand in the dance of life.

I have no wife! who'd have his nose
Forever tied to one loose flower,
Even though that flower should be a rose,
Pleached with light hand from fairy bower;
O, better far the bright bouquet
Of flowers of every clime and line,
By turns to charm the mind away,
And fragrance in the heart renew.

I have no wife! I now can change
From grave to gay, from light to sad,
And in my freedom wide can range,
Pet for a while, and then be glad,
I now can head a Strout's tongue,
And know that eyes glance not in vain!
Make love apace, and being "flung,"
Get up and try my luck again.

I have no wife! and I can dream
Of girls well worth their weight in gold,
Can look my heart in Love's broad beam;
And dance to think it yet unsold;
Or I can gaze upon a brow,
Which mind and beauty doth enhance;
Go to the shrine and make my bow,
And thank the Fates I have a chance!

I have no wife! and like a wave,
Can float away to any land,
Can up and kiss, or g aile love,
The sweetest flowers that were at hand;
A pilgrim I, I bend before
The shrine which heart and mind approve;
Or, Persian like, I can adore,
Each star that gems the heavens above.

I have no wife! in Heaven, they say,
Such things as weddings are not known;
Unvoked the blissful spirits stray
O'er fields where love no shade has thrown;
Then why not have a Heaven below,
And let fair Hymen hence be sent?
It would be fine; but, as things go,
Unwedded folks won't be content!

For a lady to sweep her carpets with embroidered under skirt would be considered indecently dirty, but to drag the sidewalks with her skirts seems to be very genteel.

One of Bishop Bloomfield's latest bonmots was uttered during his last illness.—He inquired what had been the subject of his two archdeacon's charges, and was told that one was on the art of making sermons, and the others on churchyards. 'O, I see,' said the bishop, 'composition and decomposition.'

An ignorant but well-meaning man, having been placed on the commission of the peace in a rural district, declared, on taking his seat as a magistrate, that it would be 'his most anxious endeavor to do justice without fear, favor, or affection. In short,' said he emphatically, "I will take care that on this bench I will never be either partial or impartial."

LEAVING SOMETHING.—A Southern paper narrates a comical incident of the late unpleasantness.' One of Sherman's bummers met a countryman in the course of one of his excursions and stopped him. 'Come out from under that hat.' The unlucky victim delivered his hat. 'Now come of those boots' said the bummer.—His orders being obeyed, he said, 'Crawl out of that coat, and be quick about it.'—Having subsequently robbed the man of his shirt, his trowsers, and a finger ring, the bummer was riding off, when his victim stopped him. 'Look here, mister,' said he, 'you forgot something' and, pulling out a quid of tobacco from his mouth, he handed it to him. 'You'd be ruined if you left that,' he remarked.

A young blood residing not half a dozen miles from this place, was the victim of rather a good joke one Sunday night recently. He was trying to be particularly "sweet" on a young lady, and had paid her a number of visits at the residence of her parents. The old folks had somehow got the idea into their heads that the children were too young to "keep company," and conveyed the desired hint by calling the girl out of the room and sending her to bed at nine o'clock, the lady of the house astonishing the young gent by bringing into the parlor a huge piece of bread and butter, nicely spread with sugar, which she presented to him saying, in her kindest manner, "There, Bobby, take this and run home to your mother; it's time little boys were in bed." The would-be gay young beau hasn't fl-t as though he wanted any more sweetness from that source since.

SAYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and advancement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly readable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of dulness." It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world.

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a sycophantic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognize honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of TEMPERANCE in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention.

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

GRAY HAIR
Is a certain indication of decay at the roots.

New Style. Important Change.
A REAL HAIR RESTORER AND DRESSING
Combined in One Bottle.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S
HAIR RESTORER
Will Restore Gray Hair to its Natural Life, Color and Beauty.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It will promote luxuriant growth.
FALLING HAIR is immediately checked.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S XYLOBALSAMUM, another preparation for the Hair; clear and transparent, without sediment. It is very simple and often produces wonderful results. Its great superiority and economy as a Hair Dressing over high cost French Pomades is acknowledged by all not only in this country but in Europe. The Restorer and Xylobalsamum should not be used one with the other. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Proprietress, S. A. ALLEN & Co., Wholesale Druggists, 26 Bromfield St. and 40 Park Place, New-York.

RHEUMATISM and all other aches and pains leave the body on application of JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. We will warrant it to cure Burns, Frost Bites, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Lame Back or Side, Sprains, &c. Some of the cures it has effected are almost too wonderful for belief. Many have been saved by it from impending death, and restored to life and health. No family is safe a day without it; hundreds of valuable lives and thousands of dollars may be saved annually by its use. As a preventive of contagious diseases, nothing ever before invented can compare with it.

We authorize all dealers to refund the money if it does not give entire satisfaction.

DYSPEPSIA cured by using Dr. Colby's Anti-Costive and Tonic PILLS. They regulate the Bowels, correct the Liver, clear the Complexion, and renovate the system; they are composed of active ingredients in a highly concentrated form, and strike at the root of disease, curing almost like magic.

Thousands testify to their extraordinary curative properties. Sold by all dealers.

ORMOND & WALSH, sole agents for Peterborough.

BEAUTIFUL! SPLENDID! is the verdict given by all who use HUNT'S EUREKA HAIR GLOSS. It makes dry, harsh, stiff hair soft, glossy and beautiful. It cleanses the scalp, removes pimples, strengthens the glands, prevents the hair from falling, and will certainly make it grow strong, luxuriant and beautiful, and it is only 25 cents per bottle.—Sold everywhere.

GO TO THE EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHARLESWORTH & SONS, Courtney P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

I, ——, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the stomach, which gradually during the spring of 1867, exceeded to my bowels, and on me to my bed, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For almost two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and used drugs of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonean Remedy by reading the notice performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; to find I was getting stone-bruised. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonean Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a part of factors hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and if any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonean Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonean Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

A. F. WOOD, J. P.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

Its virtues are known in every section of the country, and the public scarcely need to be informed of the great cures it performs. Other, and extract and purify from the blood the foul humors that generate and develop scrofula in the system, and hurl into the air we breathe the infectious elements of consumption, thereby protecting multitudes from this fearful scourge, as well as relieving those who are already victims of the disease. It cleanses the blood, from the worst humor to the common pimple or blotch, and restores the vigor of health. Hence, in every case where the blood is contaminated, or the system deranged, this remedy will be found to produce the most beneficial results. Many of the diseases which afflict mankind originate in a disordered liver, and this great organ, in such cases, is generally deranged in its action. Whatever may be the cause, whether intemperance, change of climate, or the common derangements of the digestive organs, this medicine will restore the liver to healthy action, and with it will disappear the cause of the disease, whether it be found in the blood, the stomach, or any other part of the system. Those who are languishing under the depressing influence of Scrofula, or any of the diseases originating in impure blood, should not delay in giving this remedy a fair trial. Its power to cure is unquestioned by those who have ever used it, and the evidence of its wonderful cures is found in almost every community.

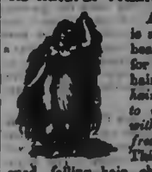
Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of feeding the hair with a pasty bolus, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil, stain, or crock, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Poetry.

I've Wandered East, I've Wandered West.

A SCOTCH BALLAD.

BY W. MOTHERWELL, ESQ.

I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
Thro' mony a weary way;
But never, never can forget
The luve o' life's young day.
The fire that blaws on Beltane e'n
May weel be black gin Yule;
But blacker far awaits the heart
Where first fond luve grows cule.

O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
The thochts o' bygone years
Still fling their shade we ower my path,
And blind my een wi' tears.
They blind my een wi' saut, saut tears,
And mair and mair sick I pine,
As memory idly summons up
The blithe blinks o' langsyne.

'Twas then we twirl'd wi' frank and free,
'Twas then we twa did part:
Sweet time—sad time! twa hairts at schule,
Twa hairts, and but ae heart!
'Twas then we sat on ae laigh bink,
To leir ilk ither lear;
And tones, and looks, and smiles were shed,
Remembered ever mair.

I wonder, Jeanie, often yet,
When sitting on that bink,
Cheek touchin' cheek, loud lock't in loof,
What our wee heids could think?
When baith bent doun ower ae braid page,
Wi' ae buik on our knee,
Thy lips were on thy lesson, but
My luve was in thee.

O mind ye how we hung our heads,
How cheeks burn'd red wi' shame,
Whene'er the schule weans, laughin', said,
We cleek't thegither hame?
And mind ye o' the Saturdays,
(The schule then skail't at noon),
When we ran off to speel the braes—
The broomy braes o' June?

My heid rins round and round about,
My heart flows like a sea,
As ane by ane the thochts rush back
O' schule time, and o' thee.
Oh, mornin' life! O, mornin' luve!
Oh, lichtsome days and lang,
When hinnied hopes around our hearts
Like simmer blossoms sprang!

O mind ye, luve, how aft we left
The dull'ning dinsome toun,
To wander by the green burnside,
And hear its waters croon.
The simmer leaves hung ower our heids,
The flowers burst round our feet;
And in the gloam in o' the wud,
The throssil whusslit sweet.

The throssil whusslit in the wud,
The burn sang to the trees,
And we, with Nature's heart in tune,
Concerted harmonies;
And on the knowe aboon the burn,
For hours thegither sat
In the miduess o' joy, till baith
Wi' very gladness grat.

Aye, aye, dear Jeanie Morrison,
Tears trinkle down your cheek
Like dew-beads on a rose, yet nane
Has power to speak.
That was a time, a blessed time,
When hearts were fresh and young,
When freely gushed all feelings forth
Unsyllabled—unsung!

I marvel, Jeanie Morrison,
Gin I 'ha'e been to blame
As closely twined wi' earliest thochts
As ye ha'e been to me?
Oh! tell me gin their music fills
Thine ear as it does mine;
Oh! say gin e'er your heart grows grit
Wi' dreamings o' langsyne?

I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
I've borne a weary lot;
But in my wanderings, far or near,
You never were forgot.
The fount that first burst frae this heart,
Still travels on its way;
And channels deeper, as it rins,
The luve o' life's young day.

O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
Since we were sinder'd young,
I've never seen your face, nor heard
The music o' your tongue.
But I could hug all wretchedness,
And happy could I die,
Did I but ken your heart still dream't
O' bygane days and me.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

BY OCTAVE FEUILLET.

(From Hearth and Home)

PART FIRST.

THE HOUSE OF PERIAS.

A beautiful August day was near its close. A joyous peal of bells rang out from the small but massive Church of Feras, which crowns the rounded summit of a cliff upon the eastern side of the Norman peninsula. A crowd in holiday attire, which had just issued from the church, and were swarming in the churchyard, welcomed with a murmur of satisfaction the appearance of a Norman nurse in gay apparel, who now presented herself on the steps of the porch. She held in her arms and beneath the shadow of her great Norman cap, an infant richly arrayed in its baptismal robes.

The crowd opened a way for this important personage, who could ascended from time to time to st p her triumphal march, and to lift the veil from the face of the infant for some tender-hearted gossip. The nurse was followed by two servants in black livery, bearing perches of cane, which drew the attention of the less sentimental portion of the public.

Suddenly the curate, still wearing his priestly robes, came out of the church, and with a busy air addressed some words to the servants, who at once departed, drawing the crowd after them. A few moments later, the curate, who was a robust man of mature years, and whose countenance bespoke much honest kindliness, was left alone in the churchyard, while from the distance, mingling with the dull beating of the waves upon the beach, came the sound of children's voices across the moor, quarrelling among themselves over the accustomed bargain.

And now the festal chime had ceased, and the unpretentious architecture of the church and a profound air of solitude that rigid and melancholy aspect which the ocean seems to reflect upon every thing near it. Behind the great forests which veiled the horizon on the side of the land, and followed the undulations of the hills along the shore till lost to sight, the sun, now descending in glory, pierced with a thousand golden arrows the thick masses of foliage; he chestnut rose still glanced upon the summit of the cliff, and sparkled from the glazed windows of the church, but already fell short of the sea, whose azure had taken suddenly a sombre hue.

At this moment the door of the church opened; an old gentleman and an old lady, both of tall and slender figure, but with a marked air of distinction and gentle dignity, slowly descended the church-steps; they drew near to two slabs of white marble coupled over two adjoining graves, and knelt down side by side. The curate just behind them knelt also.

After a few moments, the old gentleman rose; he touched the shoulder of the lady, who was still praying, her face hidden in her hands, and said gently: "Let us go, Louise."

She rose at once, raised her eyes to his, and smiled tearfully upon him. He drew her to him, and pressed his trembling lips upon the rare, pale forehead she bent toward him. The curate drew near.

"Monsieur le Marquis," said he with some timidity, "He who gave hath taken away. Shall we not say, Blessed be His name!"

The old man sighed, fixed his eyes for a moment upon the sea, then glanced heavenward, uncovered his head, and answered:

"Yes, Monsieur, blessed be His name!" And giving his arm to the old lady, they passed together out of the churchyard.

A half hour later, as night was falling, a carriage, rolling noiselessly over the damp ground of a dark avenue, took back to the Chateau of Ferias all that was now left of the ancient family of that name—he two grand parents, whom we have seen kneeling over the two graves, and the blue-eyed orphan babe who had just received in baptism the name Sibylle-Anne, names for ages traditional in her house.

But little more than a year had elapsed since the Marquis and Marchioness had lost, successively, and at a few days' interval, their daughter-in law, Julie de Vergnes, an angelic creature who had lived with them but just long enough to be adored and to be mourned, and their only son Christian, Comte de Ferias, a gentle, grave and affectionate young man, whom this great sorrow had stricken down.

In this age of sickly sensibilities and of feeble faith, such blows often drive to despair those upon whom they fall; but the Marquis and the Marchioness had escaped this shipwreck of the soul, though their hearts were tender, even in weakness, and though they felt all the bitterness of their bereavement; but they were sustained by faith in God, by the aid of a mutual affection, which time had purified but not abated, and above all, the thought of the duty still left them to perform by the side of this cradle which had sprung from a tomb.

II.

THE HOUSE OF BEAUMESNIL.

A lady of the neighborhood, Madame de Beaumesnil, had found in the catastrophe which had overwhelmed the House of Ferias a happy occasion for the exercise of those consolatory talents with which she was proud to think herself endowed. There is a well known story of a surgeon who used to set open the trap-door of his cellar that those who should thereby cripple themselves might be added to the number of his clients. There are some women of this temper; in fact, they are not rare, and Madame de Beaumesnil was a splendid specimen of the variety. She felt no great need of distributing the treasures of charity with which nature had filled her bosom that she was really entitled to some gratitude for awaiting, without provoking (them) the misfortunes of her neighbors. To a person inspired by so active a devotion, the birth of a child and two sudden deaths succeeding each other beneath the roof of a friend within a period of fifteen days, had been a threefold festival, a golden opportunity. At the first illness of the young Countess, this discreet matron, her pockets filled with all sorts of elixirs, had hurried to the chateau of Ferias. Feeling quite in her own element for the whole of the fatal fortnight, she never for a moment ceased to advise, to console, to chatter, and bustle about like a seabird in a storm, equally useless and often troublesome. Such transports on the part of a stranger were in strong contrast with the calmness and composure of the two old people, upon whom fell all the weight of these terrible trials, and who, avoiding as much as possible all manifestations of grief, concealed their tears with the reserve of noble souls. Madame de Beaumesnil was deeply shocked by their want of feeling, and some days after, at the close of one of those rich and succulent dinners common in the provinces, she gave vent to her feelings in the presence of her guests, with an habitual vulgarity of expression which we ask our readers' permission to repeat.

'Decidedly,' said she, 'they're no heart, these Feriases. I always thought so; now I know it. They're all pride. To tell the truth, if I hadn't been there, 'twould have been a dry time I do believe; and as for any thanks I got I might as well have saved my pocket-handkerchiefs and spared my poor eyes. But then some people have feelings and some haven't; and besides, what I've done I've done for the Lord's sake; He who sees all and who reads our hearts. Isn't it so, Abbe? You don't drink your wine, my dear Abbe. Take a little glass of my nice home-brewed liquor. Come, you won't refuse that? Pshaw! you are not in the chateau of Ferias. My poor Curate we've got no such fabulous wine-cellar as they, but what we have we give with a will, and that's something. Take another glass; yes, you will. There, it's poured out already. You must build yourself up, Abbe. You were awfully cut up at the two ceremonies; I saw you crying like rain over the alter. By the way, speaking of the altar, your new altar cloth is almost done; 'twould have been finished already if it hadn't been for all this commotion. But you must build yourself up; this world is only a vale of tears, you know, and, besides, I don't see why we should be so much more distressed than these Ferias, who really have astonished me; not that there's any such great reason for it either; Providence knows what it's about. That Julie had some good qualities, I don't deny it; but she was, after all, a little Parisian humbug, and would have given no end of trouble to her father and mother-in-law; above all, with that Christian for a husband, who wasn't fit to manage such a woman, in spite of all his fine airs; he was a good fellow enough, I don't say he wasn't, but a real Feriac, as proud as a peacock. Ah! Curate, we may well say, with the Holy Scripture, they who exalt themselves shall be abased!"

Whereupon, Madame de Beaumesnil moderately wiped her lips, thin and shadowed by a somewhat masculine down, upon which the liqueur had deposited no unctuous varnish. Notwithstanding the paltry soul which this tattle evinced, Madame de Beaumesnil, though plainly a silly woman, was yet far from being a fool. A kind of low cunning, which finds its best lodgment in the narrowest minds, and is sometimes accompanied by the most ignoble sentiments, was in her united to tenacious will, and made of her what is called a clever woman, with unusual capacity for business.

The daughter of a small country squire, over-burdened with children, she seemed, as she herself said, to be destined to the service of St. Catherine, the patroness of virgin martyrs; in other words, to grow up an old maid. But when on the verge of despair, a sagacious friend has suggested out to her a prey in the person of Monsieur de Beaumesnil, an honest gentleman of a neighboring county, rich and of an ancient family, but of a feebleness of intellect bordering on idiocy. This imbecile she determined to marry, and, to her glory, she accomplished her purpose. Monsieur de Beaumesnil was far from being as clever in business matters as his wife, but he did not do an unwise thing when he gave his name to Mademoiselle Desnoyers, for she undertook with energy the management of his embarrassed fortune, and succeeded in reestablishing and maintaining it on a good condition. Thereafter, Monsieur de Beaumesnil was able to abandon himself in complete security to the gentle somnolence which generally filled up the intervals between his repasts; the rest of the time laughing at every thing and without the slightest reason, his mysterious spirit seemed to look out upon life as the most amusing thing in the world. He was habitually as silent as a fish, but when he had dreamt over night-night he became possessed with a desire to recount his dreams. Sometimes he dreamed that he was a bull, and, for some unaccountable reason, this vision seemed to delight him, and with it he loved to entertain his guests.

Monsieur and Madame de Beaumesnil had no children. This circumstance, which is not of a nature to make us despair of the human race, was an extremely fortunate one for the relatives of Madame de Beaumesnil. One of her brothers, Theodore Desnoyers, who had adopted the title of Chevalier to give himself a slight tincture of nobility, soon set up his pennies in the manor of Beaumesnil. He was a middle-aged man, with large nose and little eyes and rich in spicy jests, which raised pleasant blushes upon the faces of the ladies at dessert. On week-days, he was by times the joy or the terror of the servants-maid of the neighborhood, and on Sundays he sang in the church-choir. Then there was a Cousin Constance Desnoyers, a fat old maid, smiling and obsequious, and kept by Madame de Beaumesnil constantly busy about the housework; and, lastly, a niece, Clotilde Desnoyers, whose father had recently been killed in Africa, a beautiful, dark-haired child; but passionate and capricious, completely spoiled and giving promise of a stormy future.

'You see,' Madame de Beaumesnil said one day to the curate, often the confidant of her thoughts—though to do justice to the poor man, his appreciation of them was generally weak and ecclesiastical—'you see, it is only spoiled children who turn out well. I've always noticed it. And why should we vex the dear little creatures? They'll have trouble enough after they grow up the dear loves! And, besides, it's not showing proper trust in God, who is watching over them. I know the Ferias don't think so, and they don't hesitate to insinuate it to me about Clotilde—just as if the dear child might reproach us some day for having spoiled her, when, on the contrary, she loves and respects Monsieur de Beaumesnil and myself beyond anything you can imagine—don't you, my darling Clotilde?'

Mademoiselle Clotilde, now seven or eight years old, listened to this speech from the topmost round of a chair-back, on which she had balanced herself, and replied to her aunt's question by thrusting out her rosy tongue from between her sharp teeth.

'Charming little rogue!' said Madame de Beaumesnil, as being disconcerted; 'what a frank and open nature! As for these Feriases, we shall see what they'll make of their Sibylle, with their stuck-up education. It's no good omen already, that Pagan name they've given her. That's their pride again. Remember what I say, Curate, they'll only make a silly, affected woman of her, just like her poor mother.'

It seems astonishing that a woman like Madame de Beaumesnil escorted by such a curiously assorted family, should be admitted to the intimacy of a house like that of Ferias—a house where a native good taste joined to nobility of race, and a rare elegance of manners and habits, combined to form an interior of marked distinction.

But it is one of the greatest drawbacks to a provincial or country life, that one is forced to submit to one's intimacies instead of choosing them. Moreover, Madame de Beaumesnil, in spite of her dedaneful speeches, really attached great value to her familiarity with the magnates of the country and had sense enough to observe herself, and to impose upon her family, when in their presence, a very great reserve in language. Besides, she was constant in the most obsequious attentions to them, that these excellent people really felt themselves under some obligation. The charitable of spirit natural to honest souls, and the inexorable necessity of a second at biscuits and a fourth at whist—games which aroused the old Marquis, and in which the Chevalier was triumphant—will further explain the monstrous alliance between such discordant elements.

III.

SIBYLLE.

The Count and Countess de Vergnes, the natural grandparents of Sibylle, who lived in Paris and maintained a great house there, had readily assented to an arrangement proposed by the Marquis of Ferias after the event which had plunged both families into mourning. This was that Sibylle should remain in the country during her childhood, and should go to the Hotel de Vergnes as soon as it became necessary to finish her education, to present her in society, and to provide for her marriage. The Countess de Vergnes particularly, a very fashionable woman, still young, and thinking herself much younger than she was, had eagerly accepted as a engagement which postponed her rôle of grandmother, and kept out of sight its visible proofs.

We are forced to avow that the early years of Sibylle-Anne de Ferias were in some remarkable. The child was pretty; she had large blue eyes, which were generally mild and gentle, but they took a deeper tint whenever she gave herself up to those wild and mysterious fits of anger which nurses are wont to soothe and oppress by vague incantations. Of these transports, by no means the principal charm of her age, Sibylle to tell the truth, was not chary.—One summer evening, she had just been placed in her cradle before a window which had been left open on account of the extreme heat of the day, when she fell into a fit of anger so vehement and so prolonged that the Marquis and the Marchioness both ran together into her chamber. The nurse had already exhausted all her sedative arts, and declared that she could do no more.—The Marchioness sang, the Marquis scolded; but all to no purpose—the child still screamed convulsively.

'This is really intolerable,' said the Marquis; 'there must be a pin somewhere in her clothing. Try to find it, nurse.'

'No, my dear,' said the Marchioness; 'the child wants something.'

'What in the world can she want, my dear?' said the Marquis. 'Do try to find out what it is; for I repeat it, I can't endure this.'

'My friend,' replied the Marchioness, who had observed, with quick, maternal instinct, the direction of the child's frantic gestures, 'I see what she wants—she wants a star.'

'God bless me! I believe you are right,' rejoined the Marquis. 'Yes, it's plain enough now, she wants a star!'

'We must light a bit of paper,' said the nurse, and put it into her hand.'

'No, no,' said the Marquis, 'that will never do. I would not get up to her caprice even if it were right ever to deceive children. Nurse,' added he in a severe tone, 'shut the window.'

This coup d'etat accomplished and the window closed, Sibylle-Anne, after a moment of reflection, concluded to go to sleep, and was soon dreaming dauntless that she held the star shut up in her little fist.

As soon as Sibylee could talk a little, and add some words to her gestures, there was no longer any room to doubt that this young lady had received from some wicked fairy who had been forgotten at her christening the fatal gift of conceiving the most unreasonable fancies, and of exacting their satisfaction with an imperious ardor which in the presence of obstacles was exalted almost to frenzy. This vicious disposition, maliciously observed by Madame de Beaumesnil, was to her a source of infinite pleasure; the poor Marchioness, on the other hand was almost in despair.

'You must admit,' said she to her husband in a despondent tone, 'you must admit,' that there is something of the demon in the angel.'

'No, my dear,' replied the old Marquis, 'I will not admit it. It is true that the child will be passionately eager for whatever she desires; but as much the better if her desires are just. I often see you, my dear, admiring this little girl's rosy and transparent finger-nails, and I beg you to remark that if you bestowed no care upon them they would soon change to ugly deformities, and in like manner the faculties of the soul with which heaven has endowed us are also two-edged weapons equally fitted for good or for evil. The more striking and powerful these faculties are, the richer the gift; all depends upon the way in which they are trained and directed.—When Sibylle shall become the mistress of her own moral liberty, this direction and training will be her duty; until that time it is ours. I have always thought that parents, and all those upon whom devolves the sacred task of rearing children, were to a great degree responsible for the destinies they prepare. In my conception of the justice of God, He condescends to go back to the source and origin of all our faults; he sees them in their first germs and discriminates with severe and supreme equity the part which each of us has had in the life of every other being. This responsibility is doubtless a weary burden, but, on the other hand, my dear, it is sweet to think that our influence upon the future happiness of our children does not end with this life, but is prolonged throughout eternity. As for Sibylle, without breaking in her the precious instrument of the will, a faculty of the greatest worth, and invaluable to her in the struggle of life, I shall exert all my courage to bend and to train it in the direction of the good, the true and the possible. But I would have wished that my old age had been spared this painful task, for I acknowledge my extreme weakness for the child, and I should be in despair if she should ever come to look upon her old grandfather—now her only father—as a hard and unfeeling man; for I am not!'

'God knows it!' said the Marchioness, fixing upon her husband a look of fonte tenderness.

The conversation of this worthy couple was suddenly interrupted by piercing cries, which issued from the garden and summoned Monsieur de Ferias without delay to the practice of his theories. With a heavy heart he proceeded at once to his cruel duty. He found his granddaughter engaged in a fierce struggle with the faithful nurse, who, two or three years before, had been promoted to the office and functions of governess.

This terrible scene was being enacted near the borders of a little lake, upon which three or four superb swans were majestically displaying their majestic grace. As her grandfather approached, Sibylle ceased crying, and awaited him with flaming eyes, compressed lips, and a resolute attitude.

'What is the matter now?' said Monsieur de Ferias.

'I want to ride on the swan,' said Sibylle, laconically.

'Ride on the swan!' exclaimed the Marquis. 'What nonsense is this?'

The nurse now explained that Mademoiselle, who had been feeding the swans with crumbs of bread in her pretty way, had all at once expressed the desire to get upon the back of one of them, and, then mounted, to make a turn about the lake.

'And she would drown herself, wouldn't she, Monsieur le Marquis?'

'No doubt of it,' said the Marquis, 'and she deserves to be allowed to make the experiment.'

'The swan doesn't drown,' said Sibylle.

'God has made the swan to swim,' said the Marquis, 'but not you.'

'I want to ride on the swan,' said Sibylle, with fretful petulance.

'You will go to your room,' replied the Marquis, 'since you won't listen to reason. Take her away, nurse.'

Sibylle, with loud cries struggled hard to escape from the nurse, and, at last, Monsieur de Ferias lifted her from the ground by the waist and carried her sobbing child to the chateau. Having placed her in a lower room and fastened the door, he rejoined the Marchioness and felt exhausted into a chair.

'It considers me a little, my dear,' said he, 'to think that I suffer more than she does.'

But there are readers who have no children, and we must not forget it.

We will not follow step by step the Marquis de Ferias in the painful and meritorious applicati n of his system of education. It is sufficient to say that after many seasons quite similar to that we have just witnessed, Sibylle came to understand perfectly well that the nature of things and the superior reason of her grandfather could and would, in many cases, interfere with the caprices of her will, until the time should arrive when her own knowledge of mankind should be sufficient to prescribe its bounds and direct its course. A day came when, to calm the tempest of an unreasonable caprice, it was enough for Monsieur de Ferias to say, smiling:

'Sibylle, you want to ride upon the swan?'

In brief, of her imperious instincts she only retained a persevering and passionate firmness in all permitted aspirations. Madame de Beaumesnil, a jealous witness of this happy change, now altered her tone. Instead of commiserating Sibylle's grandparents, it was Sibylle herself she pitied.

'That old Ferias,' she said, 'has no more soul than my shoe to-whip that dear little child! Poor motherless orphan!—I have never seen him whip her, it's true he would never dare to do it before me, he knows how I would—how I feel, he knows I would tear his eyes out, Ferias though he be. But it is plain to see that the child is whipped, she trembles before them, she hates them, and they deserve her hatred, it will be their punishment until God's turn comes.'

Madame de Beaumesnil was mistaken. Thanks to the goodness of that God to whom she appealed so often, like all senseless blasts of her kind, that God whom she knew so little, a mother can always boldly chastise an erring child without incurring the fearful risk of being hated. Within the heart of every little child, as in the soul of every great nation, there exists a profound sense of justice. Children love their parents as a nation its sovereign—when they can respect them. Sibylle far from hating Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, who, except in the intervals of necessary severity, made for her between their two hearts the sweetest nest in the world, bore towards them both a considerate affection quite beyond her years. She adored and admired them. Her acute and serious, but somewhat enthusiastic mind had been deeply impressed by the elevated and ingenuous nature of these aged people in their familiar relations, by their exquisite intimacy, their tranquil dignity, and the almost patriarchal discipline which distinguished and honored the home of her fathers. Nor were contrasts wanting to enlighten her judgement. She was sometimes sent for a day to the manor of Madame de Beaumesnil, who pretended to feel towards her mother, and who made good her pretensions by overwhelming her with absurd compliments and by cramming her with indigestible sweetness. On these occasions the trivial gossip of the hostess, the insipid gayety of Monsieur de Beaumesnil, the chattering of Mademoiselle Constance among the dom

AN EXTRAORDINARY MANIFESTO.

The following resolutions have been published:—

Proposed by Mr. John O'Farrell, seconded by Mr. Jeremiah Gallagher, and supported by Mr. Michael Kelly:

Whereas, by letter dated the 3rd inst., and addressed to William Conway, Esq., President of this society, and now laid before this meeting, we are invited by Lawrence Ambrose Canavan, Esq., City Clerk, by virtue of a resolution of the City Council, adopted at a meeting of that body on the 2nd inst., to co-operate as one of the national societies in tendering a becoming reception to his Excellency Sir John Young, the Governor General of this Dominion, on his arrival in this city.

And whereas, the reception referred to is intended for the office and not for the distinguished incumbent personally, and would imply unqualified approval of the system represented by the office.

And whereas, the Government system represented by that office hath for centuries ruled Ireland with a rod of iron, dividing that it might rule, and ruling that it might enslave, sweeping from the land every vestige of liberty, whether of the persons or of commerce, crushing out by unjust laws her trade and manufactures, imposing on her the burden of a church alien to her conscience, and the tillage of a soil never again to become her own, sucking deep to flesh and the parasitic tendrils that drew from Ireland the rich blood that gave to Britain her business and power, decimating our people from time to time by famine, the plague and the sword, scattering our race over the habitable globe, and tearing asunder those whom affection, blood, ays, even God himself had joined together, seemingly bent on making of the loved old land a howling wilderness for the sheep and the cave to roam over in desecration of our father's graves, subsuming such men as McGee, Parkes and McKay by the bribe of office, and otherwise to discuss conspiracies without existence and without object, save the exclusion of Irishmen from every office of trust in Canada, Australia and New Zealand, thereby branding our race wherever found, with the stigma of political degradation.

And, whereas, the fond hope that lately warmed our breasts of one seeing a full measure of justice meted out to Ireland, and of seeing the past forgotten has been blighted at the sight of prejudice staying the hand of mercy in mid course, and refusing to contradict, or even to mitigate the sufferings of men whose fate, had they been Greeks, Poles, Italians, or Cretans, would have roused the British nation to frenzy of commiseration.

And, whereas, our dislike of the system that has wrought such misery for Ireland, and for Irishmen at home and abroad, is not lessened by our personal regard for the many virtues, public and private, of His Excellency the Governor General; Be it therefore,

Resolved—That the Quebec Hibernian Benevolent Society shall abstain from participation in the welcome to His Excellency Sir John Young on his arrival in this city.

J. S. REDMOND
Secretary, Q. H. B. S.

There was a row in New York on the 12th of July. The following are the particulars:—

"Yesterday, the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, the Prince of Orange Society of New York went to Paterson on their annual pic-nic. They were accompanied by a band, and the usual Protestant party insignia. On their return they passed up the Bowery, numbering about three hundred. They stopped at No. 163 Bowery, and the band struck up the Orange tune of the 'Battle of the Boyne.' A crowd of from three to four thousand had gathered about this time, and when this tune began a violent demonstration was made by the Catholic element present.

"An Irishwoman was the first to commence hostilities. Going up to a tall, endurance-looking son of Ulster who wore a conspicuous Orange sash, she deliberately slapped him on the cheek, exclaiming, as she did so, 'So much for King William!' The band continued to play, the excitement arose, and the crowd momentarily increased, stopping the progress of the cars and blocking up the whole avenue. People looked out from the windows, and young gamins climbed upon every post and pillar bearing on the scene of the disturbance. At length a fusilade of stones, bottles, and other miscellaneous missiles, was sent quivering into the throng of pro and anti-papists from the belligerent outsiders. Hats went flying off, ugly looking—cerebellums were struck in delicate places, and a general free fight ensued—the portraits of King William cast in the dust and trampled on with a vengeance. All this time the police had not interfered. Orange and Green were having it all to themselves but the former was rapidly getting the worst of it. The orange lilly was turning pale, the party airs ceased, and an eager desire to skedaddle somewhere evidently possessed the disciples of the Orange Prince. Now came more serious demonstrations. Pistols were drawn, but fortunately not fired. The anti-Orange women kept inciting their husbands and others to tear to pieces the detested yellow banner. They needed but little urging. The surging multitude at length broke in, striking and trampling all before them.

"The scene presented at this time along the Bowery was one of the most exciting character, and almost beggars description. The news of the attack upon the Orangemen spread like wild-fire, and, as usual on such occasions, the most exciting stories were circulated through the city. Thousands of citizens, old and young, male and female, were to be seen rushing excitedly through the streets, anxiously enquiring for the scene of the difficulty. Along the Bowery, from Chatham Square to Spring street, crowds of men and women, wild with excitement, ran had along the street, and many were the threats uttered against the bedecked Orangemen, who, to escape bodily harm, were ever and anon seen hastening down the broad thoroughfares and through the by-streets.

"In front of the Military Hall, Bowery, the scene was still more exciting. The street, at this point, was literally blockaded by the dense crowd, who gathered in front of this building, and one of the saloons near by, where many of the Orangemen had gathered for protection. It was not until a number of policemen made their appearance that the crowd cleared the road."

The wife of Rev. Mr. Chamberough, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Newburg, N. Y., was terribly and perhaps fatally burned on Saturday by the explosion of a can of kerosene oil. She was engaged in canning fruit, and in order to increase the fire, which did not burn well, she resorted to the exceedingly dangerous expedient of pouring on kerosene oil from a gallon can. The result was the same as in hundreds of similar instances.

COMMEMORATIVE MEDAL.

The medal which has been struck to commemorate the confederation of the provinces is a solid gold, and is so large and massive that its value in metal alone, is £20. On the obverse there is a head of the Queen, for which Her Majesty recently gave Mr. Wyon sittings; the reverse bears an allegorical design—Britannia seated and holding the scroll of confederation, with figures representing the four provinces grouped before her. Ontario holds the sheaf and sickle; Quebec, the paddle; Nova Scotia, the mining spade; and New Brunswick, the forest axe. The following inscription runs round a raised border:—"Juncta in et Patrius Vigor Canada In stamata. 1867." The relief on the side is extremely bold, and the composition, modelling and finish are such as to leave little to be desired. The treatment of the head on the obverse is broad and simple; the hair is hidden by a sort of hood of flowing drapery, confined by a plain coronet, and the necklace is but little breast serpentine. The ornaments are massive rather than rich; there is a plain pendent in the ear, and associates of the Prince Consort is attached to a necklace of very chaste design.

THE HON. MR. MCDOUGALL AND THE NORTH-WEST.—On Dominion day, he Hon. W. McDougall was present at a pic-nic of the Good Templars, at McDonald's Corners, in the North Riding of Leeds, and made a speech, in which he alluded to the North-West Territory, briefly going over the history of the negotiations for the transfer of the territory while he was in England, and the subsequent ratification of these negotiations by the Canadian Parliament. He described the country as one of the finest in the world. In regard to the advisability of parties in Canada emigrating thither, he thought that those with sufficient means to keep them a year after getting there, would be running no risk in going. He would, however, be able to speak more definitely on the subject after visiting the country, which he intended doing this season. When the waggon-road from the head of Lake Superior to Fort Garry, which Mr. Dawson was now engaged in constructing, should be finished, it would afford good facilities for reaching the rich lands of the territory. In regard to his own appointment to the Lieut.-Governorship of this country, he stated that the position had been offered him, but he had not yet decided to accept it. He could not sacrifice his family by taking them to this remote region, and their now motherless condition made it hard for him to be removed so far from them. Considerations of this kind had prevented him from making up his mind in the matter, and he wished still to be regarded by his constituents as a candidate for future favors, should he finally decide not to accept the position.

A remarkably fine specimen of petrifaction, in the form of a human foot, was lately discovered, the Brockville Monitor says, by a boy while ploughing on the farm of Mr. Richard Dobson, in the township of Alice about 14 miles from Pembroke, which is now in the possession of Mr. Wilson, of Arnprior. From its shape, it has evidently belonged to one aborigines, never having been confined in a shoemaker's prison. Its length a 11 inches, greatest width 5 inches, and weighs 11 lbs. A large portion of the epidermis covering the ancle, is quite natural, which proves that it must have become petrified soon after death, as decomposition would otherwise have destroyed the fine lines and beautiful network on its surface, which in this specimen. Mr. Wilson proposes searching for the remaining members for the remaining members of the body, which he considers must be somewhere.

THE SOLAR ECLIPSE.—The coming solar eclipse is naturally exciting considerable interest in the public mind, as in the scientific world. The eclipse will not appear total in Canada, but will be so observed in a belt of country, in the United States of about 140 miles wide, and from the coast of North Carolina stretches away, in a north-westerly direction, through North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. Extensive preparations are being made to observe the phenomenon with exactness on the 7th of August, and observations bearing upon it will commence about ten o'clock and continue during some time subsequent to the prevalence of the eclipse. It is anticipated that the observations to be carried on by the French, English, and American governments will aid very materially in arriving at more exact conclusions as to the composition and atmosphere of the great orb.

Annie Bradley, a young woman about 29 years of age, committed suicide in Detroit by taking laudanum last Friday. She was a native of Nova Scotia, and it is believed has a sister living in Perth, at which place her parents died some years since. The cause of the suicidal act is undoubtedly found in the fact that, some two months since, she caused the arrest of a young man named Archibald Glass, travelling agent of the firm of George E. Curtis & Co., upon charges of seduction and breach of promise of marriage, and the defendant gave bail in in the sum of $10,000, in each case, for appearance for trial at the Wayne Circuit Court. The matter was settled, however, on Wednesday last, friends of the defendant giving Miss Bradley $150 to withdraw the suits and sign a release.

Another of the Bourbons has done a wise thing, in marrying an American lady, Miss Payne. He is the "Henri de Bourbon" who lately wrote a strong letter or two to the chief of the Madrid Government, denouncing the Duke of Montpensier, and offering his own democratic adhesion for the consideration of the country. Should he turn out to be a candidate for the throne, that last demonstration would tend to conciliate the Republican party, and not injure his pretensions, either, with Napoleon III., who served his own cause by a somewhat similar course of action. It would be one of the curiosities of modern history if an American lady should become Queen of Spain.—N. Y. Times.

DROWNED.—The Sun says, a sailor named William Hait belonging to the Schooner "Jessie McDonald," was drowned in our harbor about midnight on Tuesday last. Deceased was intoxicated and fell over the wharf, on going to his vessel. Several other sailors in the Schooner Magdala heard his cry when he fell and went to his assistance in a yawl boat, but when they arrived he was gone. The poor sailor was the son of a widowed mother residing in Colborne. Up to the time of writing the body has not been found. The Globe says Hait's is still well at Colborne, but on a drunken spree.

THE IRISH CHURCH BILL.

The Irish Church Bill was taken up in its amended form on the 15th instant, and as anticipated, the amendments of the Lords rejected by large majorities; the Commons deciding that the amendments are inconsistent with the principles of the bill. There is some likelihood that the Commons will maintain their position, and thus compel the peers to give in. They will be the more likely to do this, knowing that the voice of the country is with them, and that they, therefore, have nothing to fear.

The Upper House appear anxious to detain the settlement for some time, hoping thereby to gain strength, but no length of time will satisfy those who believe that the connection of Church and State is detrimental to the cause of religion and to the peace of Ireland.

Large meetings of the people in support of the Commons continue to be held in various parts of the Kingdom, and these will gain strength by the opposition of the peers. There is a class of politicians who pretend to see, in this movement of the Gladstone government, a beginning to the overthrow of monarchial principles in Great Britain. But the mental vision of these is blinded, not ignorantly, but willfully, in order to create reaction, if possible, so as to preserve to the Church her ill-gotten wealth. The thing is too puerile to receive more than a passing notice. The Government of Great Britain is as liberal now as any government under the sun. The Commons rule the country. The Queen wisely permits the voice of the people to be the supreme law, and in so doing establishes herself in the affections of the people, and renders them happy in obeying their own enactments.—They could have no more under any form of government, and that Messrs. Gladstone and Bright know right well.

We cannot, however, think that Mr. Gladstone believes that disestablishment will completely disarm Fenianism, and satisfy the Irish malcontents. If he does, he will find himself undeceived some day.—The causes of discontent are not to be found in church endowments alone, nor in the land tenure system, nor in poverty. The Irish people are taught from earliest infancy to hate England and everything English. Every little grievance is magnified into oppression and tyranny. Their own neglect of the soil and their consequent poverty are held to be the results of landlords and bailiffs, and thus they nourish bitter hatred and murder against them. Their religion teaches them allegiance to a foreign power, existing in the Eternal City, and they are also led to believe that every opposite doctrine seeks their individual, as well as their collective ruin. The English people acted foolishly in their first treatment of Ireland and the Irish people; to this they added folly in endeavoring to propogate any sectarian or religious opinion, for by doing so, the people were found arrayed against the State religion, believing it founded on tyranny, and to this last alone, may be traced the failure of the Church of England mission in Ireland. At an early period the Irish people formed a bitter hatred to everything English, so that even their own religion if solemnized entirely in English would be received at this day with distrust.

The endowment of Maynooth had much to do with this state of things; and now that it does exist, England may blame herself for spending the peoples' money in perpetuating systems that have produced such feelings. Just as soon as disestablishment is completed, the cry will arise, Ireland for the Irish. Discontent so deep rooted and cherished by powerful influences is not easily eradicated. Disestablishment, however, is one not only to Catholics but to Dissenters, and is more a matter of justice to all than a concession to a portion of the people, and for this reason we wish for its completion. Nor will it stop in Ireland; it will follow in Scotland and England too at no distant date; and the sooner the better—the better for the nation and for the church.

We are sometimes told that state aid was necessary for the cause of truth in the early history of the church. Then why was it not accorded to the first propagators of christianity? Or was it during the time of state endowment that Protestantism made such strides in England? The fact is that state endowment dwarfed the effort by confining it to one groove, and thus instead of advancing truth, turned error into its own course again, as is seen in puseyism and ritualism to-day. The time is come when state pampered rests, like state paid officials should be cast on their own resources. If their system is from above it will stand, and holy men will be found to arise out of the ashes of Church and State, and counted with life and power for the faith once delivered to the saints. The contention now is for honesty, fair living, and honor; those it will be for holy living; and all who desire that end, whether in the church or out of it, desire also the consummation of disestablishment, and Messrs. Gladstone and Bright are just the men to finish the work they have begun. All friends of justice and the extension of truth wish them God speed.

PRESENTATION.

The managers of the Knoxonia Presbyterian Church waited on their Pastor, the Rev. Wm. Rintoul, on Saturday last, and presented him with a short address and a new Buggy. We believe that this was not their first act of kindness, as during the winter they were very liberal in various favors useful for domestic purposes.

We had occasion not long since, to mention the gift of a fine horse and a set of harness to the same gentleman, by the members of the Springville portion of his congregation. It is pleasing to have to record these tokens of good will on the part of the people towards their pastor; and it must be gratifying to a pastor to thus know that his labors are held in grateful remembrance by the people to whom he is sent. We have had the pleasure of knowing somewhat of the labors of the worthy recipient of these favors since his call to the Springville Church, and know that his untiring zeal in the cause of truth, temperance and morality have justly earned for him the respect of not only his own people, but also of those of other denominations. In regard to those offerings of the people, do they not always come opportunely, and hence we gladly record the above for the example of other churches, that they may learn to do likewise.

Ashburnham School Examination.

The midsummer Examination of the above School was held on Friday last. The primary department was examined during the forenoon, and the pupils though young acquitted themselves well to Reading, Spelling, and defining words, and in the simplest of the elementary rules of Arithmetical, and Arithmetic tables. In the afternoon the senior department under the care of Mr. J. Wood, was examined in Reading, Spelling, Arithmetic, as far as Partnership, General Geography and in English Grammar including Analysis and Parsing. The reading was (generally) good, and the spelling faultless. The questions in Arithmetic were solved readily and with an evident understanding of the rules and first principles.—In Geography and in English Grammar the answering was prompt and very correct.—During both forenoon and afternoon there were a number of parents present who appeared well pleased with the whole Examination. The chairman of the Board of Trustees was also present during the afternoon. At the close of the exercises the Teachers, through the liberality of the Trustees, distributed prizes to the pupils.—When after singing the National Anthem all separated for the holidays.

WESLEYAN METHODIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL PIC-NIC.—Although Tuesday morning looked somewhat cloudy, a large number of children, 330 in all, and nearly as many adults, left, at an early hour, on the train, to hold their annual Pic-nic, at Lakefield. The few showers that fell through the day, made it a little unpleasant, but in other respects the whole was a decided success. During the rain they were quietly housed in the Methodist and Baptist Churches, which were kindly opened for them, and all returned safely in good time in the evening, pleased with everything but the state of the street from Lakefield proper to the train, which by the way needs very much the pathmaster's hand for a few hours. However ambitious the citizens may be, they most assuredly require to mend a little of their ways.

Father McMahon of Fenian raid notoriety has received his release from Penitentiary, unconditionally. The reason assigned for this recommendation on the part of the Minister of Justice, has not been made public yet. In all probability they will be founded on the fact that he was drunk at the time, and as a matter of course, not accountable for his acts. We are not of opinion, however, that that is a sufficient excuse. Not a few of the raiders made themselves drunk to nerve them for the undertaking, how then could they claim any respite on account of their being intoxicated. There can be no doubt but that in the United States both clergy and people are to an extent in the movement against England, but only Father McMahon was found bold enough to join the raiders—that there is a feeling hostile to everything British in the minds of Irish on Canadian soil, it is very evident from the manifesto of the Quebec Hibernian Society, and perhaps it will be found in other places than in Quebec. Such feelings, however, hurt no one, and hence they may be allowed to pass over unnoticed; still they caused the death of the unfortunate and lamented McGee, and if nourished may be the cause of other and similar outrages. The fact is that too much leniency towards a certain class of men may prove as injurious to our national well being and happiness as too much severity would. And while very few regret that McMahon is at liberty, very many think that he has not yet suffered in proportion to his guilt and treasonable designs.

One the 12th of July, while the orange procession was just entering Castleton, a man named David Smith, attempted to discharged a cannon loaded with powder and sand; it burated in the attempt. A piece of the cannon passed through the flesh of Smith's leg, and another piece struck a horse on the shoulder, at the distance of 200 yards and knocked him down, neither of them were killed. Such accidents should afford useful instructions to avoid the unnecessary use of fire arms.

The laying of the French Atlantic Cable has been completed to Boston. There was a rumour that the American Government would not let the cable land unless subject to the action of congress, it was a mere rumour however.

In Toronto a young man of unsound mind was killed by falling into a well from which he was drawing a bucket of water. The boy's name was Chandler; he was subject to epilepsy fits, and was believed to have taken one when killed.

The Hon. Wm. McDougall says he has been offered the Governorship of the North-west Territory, but that he has not accepted or accept it. He will in all probability do it yet, and then leave the political circus.

The following anecdote is related of Mr. McDougall in reference to his temperate habits. It would be well if all the members of the coalition were as abstemious. Mr. McDougall while in England had been attacked with a dangerous fever of a malignant type. When the doctor arrived, his first enquiry from Sir George was whether the patient was addicted to the use of liquor. Sir George answered that there was always one flask he had to MacDougall, that he was always too abstemious in his habits, as he considered that a little good wine was a very excellent thing. The doctor's face brightened up at this announcement, and he stated that he was glad the sick man was of the character described, since in that case there was some hope of him; but on the other hand, if he had been intemperate and irregular, his chances of life was very slender.—Mr. McDougall said that this incident naturally had the effect of strengthening his former habits, now that he had fully regained his usual health.

Mr. McDougall further stated in his remarks that although the Lieut. Governorship of the North-West had been offered him, he had not as yet decided whether to accept it.

The Hon. A. T. Galt is now Sir Alexander Galt. Her Majesty having signified her approbation of his past services by conferring the honorable order of the Knighthood.

This is no doubt the result of his rejection of the inferior honors before offered him, and the spirited manner in which he declined to accept. It is also in some degree due to the feeling that past connections engendered between Sir John A. McDonald and Mr. Galt. All the leading conservatives who took an active part in bringing about confederation, have now received some token of Her Majesty's approbation, also Mr. McDougall who claimed to be a reformer.

The Hon. Geo. Brown, however, did more for the cause of Confederation than all the others put together. He sacrificed his feelings in joining the coalition and his interests, and left himself open to the charge of inconsistency in doing so, and all to bring about the Union of the Provinces. Had Mr. Brown refused to join with the tories in order to obtain a union, no union would exist at this day, Sir John, Sir George and Sir Alexander would still be J. A., &c. We do not know that Mr. Brown desires or requires such marks of distinction to keep him quiet. One think is certain he never sought them. His enemies, however, must admit that he after all deserves them, and no petty personal feeling should prevent the recommendation of honor to whom honor is due.

TEACHER'S CONVENTION.—We again remind our readers, and teacher's and trustees in particular, that the proposed convention of the friends of Education will come off next week in the Music Hall, during Thursday and Friday. Arrangements have been made for business during the day, and also for Lectures, essays and readings on each evening. We are not yet in a position to give the names of all those gentleman who have kindly consented to lend their aid, but we have every reason to believe that all who favour it with their presence, will not go away, disappointed. Teachers in particular, we expect to come forward, and lend their aid and encouragement.

FRANK LESLIE'S LADY'S MAGAZINE for August has been received. This number is a good one, the plates are excellent as regards the fashions. The literary part will found entertaining to lovers of light reading. The Lady's Magazine can be ordered direct from the Publishers, N. Y., or through the Booksellers, at $3.50 a year.

The Canada Farmer for July, is now before us. The July numbers, is a good one. Every farmer should take this excellent paper.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skilful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Carse's Hotel, on Thursday, August 5th, and will remain till the evening of Saturday, August 7th. He will be in Lindsay, at Jewett's Hotel on Tuesday, August 10th. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of diseases of the most complicated and uncurable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession. Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skillful in the treatment of consumption as well as all other diseases and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

All persons suffering from Cancers, which are entirely cured without the use of the knife, Abscess, Ruptures or Sternia, Aneurisms, Swellings, Tumours or any Chronic dangerous complaint, should not delay in seeing Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings.

THE HOUSE SHOE FALL.—A correspondent of the Hamilton Spectator, writing from Niagara Falls, says:—"The announcement of the breaking away of the Horse Shoe Fall is creating something of a sensation in the fashionable circles here. The facts are that about thirty feet of that part of the cove where the green water is seen, nearest Goat Island, has caved in, and it is estimated by competent geologists that about eighty to one hundred tons of rock have fallen. This now gives the shoe more of a triangular appearance. It is very evident that Niagara is yearly receding, but this is probably the greatest change that has taken place within the recollection of the present generation."

The Provincial Association met on Tuesday at Cobourg, and after the transactions of the usual routine business, receiving reports, &c., the election of officers was proceeded with, resulting as follows:

President—D. Wylie, Esq., Brockville.
1st Vice President—Mr. John Cameron, London.
2nd Vice President—A. J. Belch, St. Marys.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Mr. E. Jackson, Newmarket.
Assistant Secretary,—Mr. J. Somerville.

In the afternoon the Association enjoyed a trip to Rice Lake and back.

In the evening a Conversazione was held in Victoria Hall and a very pleasant evening spent.

HINDEN.

PETERBORO AND HALIBURTON RAILWAY.

Pursuant to public notice given, a meeting of the ratepayers of Minden, Snowdon, Anson and Lutterworth was held at Minden Village, on the 16th instant. The room was crowded and so were the hallways and windows accessible, so that great interest was shown in the matter. Around the chairman (Mr. R. C. Garratt) there sat J. Carnegie, Esq., M. P. P., S. S. Peck, Esq., Warden, and Reeve of Minden, W. Hartle, Esq., Reeve of Lutterworth, and other leading ratherers—Mr. Kellett, Township Clerk of Lutterworth, acting as secretary.

The chairman in a few appropriate remarks on the subject of the meeting, opened the business and introduced Mr. J. Carnegie, as a Director, and as one who had been on a tour of inspection to report on the wooden railway system in the United States.

Mr. Carnegie explained the intention of the Company, and its charter, and hoped it would be seen that the proposed railway would benefit Minden Village, raise it to a town and so benefit all the surrounding townships, viz.: Snowdon, Lutterworth, Anson, and Stanhope. He spoke of the feasibility of the scheme, of the route and of its substantial benefit to Minden Village as the northern terminus; said that the lumber merchants would take Minden as their point of supply should this railroad become a certainty, shewed the good to accrue from its opening up a market at Port Hope for the various hardwoods that now were lost to the settlers by being burnt, at a heavy cost of the sweat of their brows. Mr. C. went on to explain the several amounts of bonus asked for from the various townships, proved the bonus to be really a small, a light burden on the farmer when the benefit to be derived was considered. He went on to describe his pleasant surprise at the suitability of a wooden railway, his astonishment to find the working capacity of such a railway, fit as it is proved to be for all kinds of freight, and just suitable for the country lying from Peterboro to Minden on the intended route. He hoped the settlers would see it to be for their benefit to support the scheme, so bound up, as he was convinced it was, with the opening up and prosperity of this back country. He named a leading gentleman in Port Hope, who had written him on the matter of the ready market that hardwood of various sorts would find at that town, and shewed that the towns-people of the place named, saw the route of the proposed railway to be the natural line of supply for them. Mr. Peck, his colleague on the inspection tour, would give them further information.

S. S. Peck, Esq., said he appeared before the meeting in a three-fold capacity—as a director and as a ratepayer of four different municipalities. Our authority to appear as directors was to be found in the Act of Parliament. He then read the names of the several directors, his own included, told of Mr. Carnegie with himself being instructed by the directors to visit Clifton, inspect the wooden railway there in operation, and see if it was suitable for this back country and worthy of adoption. Mr. Peck continued, he was surprised at its adaptability to the requirements of this country. He was surprised at its ability to carry all sorts of freight. He urged the meeting to decide was a railway to benefit this country or not? He felt and knew it would benefit each of the Municipalities around, financially; but there would be no canvassing; that meeting must just consider the figures put before them by Mr. Carnegie and himself, and then say whether the railway was to be a benefit or not; whether it would settle the country or not; if they saw it would, then give the bonus. The next step would be for the Directors to go to the Government, backed by the settler's vote, and ask for aid. The Quebec Government had aided the lines in their province, and he had no doubt ours would do the same in this Province. If any man object, as some do, saying, "We have sufficient market now, therefore vote against the railroad." Such a man was opposed to the settlement of this country, as his act is calculated to perpetuate the stand-still state of the last few years, while there are thousands of acres yet unoccupied, fit for settlement, which will be seen by the report of Mr. Dixon, P. L. S., wherein he shows that in Minden there are 18,000 acres, Snowdon 17,000 acres, Stanhope 12,000, all fit for settlement, and yet unoccupied, and in Lutterworth, Anson and Hindon in nearly the same proportions. Shall this land continue idle, just to save a few dollars and cents? I say, bring in settlers and then our burdens will be lightened, and this railroad will pay well. Mr. Peck then read a resolution for the action of the meeting:—

"1. That it is the opinion of this meeting unless some improved form of ingress and egress be established for our back country, there cannot be any advancement made in settling up the several townships.

"2. That the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway, by way of Minden, if built, would be the means required to advance settlement in and tend to the prosperity of our country.

"3. Therefore, be it resolved,—That the councils of the municipalities of Lutterworth Anson, and Hindon, also Snowdon and Minden Le and are hereby requested to submit By-laws to the several municipalities for the approval of the ratepayers."

Mr. W. Hartle, Reeve of Anson, &c., said, I am quite certain that the proposed railway is the very means needed to settle our country. I am fully satisfied of this. He told the store-keepers who opposed this measure that produce-growers had nothing to fear. He said that the lumbering would soon cease and our producers would want a way to send off their marketable stuff. He fully concurred with Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Peck as to the supply of hardwood of several kinds, and in that way also the railroad would be a benefit. Let the shop-keepers say that teaming was as cheap as railway carriage; we knew better. He knew what teaming was, and felt sure that by railway, things would be one-half cheaper, prices would come down, and the difference would cover the extra tax, and the bonus asked would be easily given.

In reply to some questions put, Mr. Carnegie shewed beyond doubt that railway transit is the cheaper by far. He remarked that if the profits of the store keeper were cut down by the introduction of the railway it could not be helped. (Laughter).

Mr. S. Eastman, councillor, spoke of the heavy cost of teaming; and as a practical man, and one intimately acquainted with the pre-ent mode of bringing in of settlers and their goods, from Bobcaygeon to the lakes of Minden and Dysart, certified to the expensiveness and consequent discontent of new settlers, who look upon the costs of teaming and stoppages as a very heavy burden. He would freely take the responsibility of $100 as his share of taxes or bonus if the railway be but brought about, so confident was he of its need and benefit.

Mr. Kellett, Clerk of Anson Township, rose and said:—I wish the meeting to set the advantages to be gained by the bringing in of a railroad side by side with the extra tax for the Loans, and think it must be evident to all that by the railway we would be great gainers. I am surprised at our merchants being against it, and so I conclude they are saving money by the present state of matters and wish the backward state to continue.

Mr. Hall, storekeeper, said that farmers' profits would certainly fall in favor by the introduction of a railway, and they would weep for the consequences. (Laughter).

Mr. Carnegie, at the request of Mr. Eastman, mover, observed in the first the full money given to the public that all moneys could be expended profitably, and read the petition.

Mr. F. Peck, Reeve of Snowdon, spoke in favor of the scheme, showed it would open up lands in Galway and Snowdon that no other road would open for years, lands amounting to nearly 20,000 acres. He contended it would be wrong to keep these lands unoccupied.

Mr. Mason, storekeeper, said, that feeling himself the friend and not the enemy of the country, opposed the railway. He insisted that raisers of produce would be losers, prices would fall. Ridiculed the idea that plaster was needed as a dressing for land, and farmers use their barn yard manures instead; contended that logs floated down the waters was a much cheaper way of conveying lumber than sawing it here and then sending it by rail. Went on making light of the idea that benefit would come to this section by a railroad, and concluded by stating that one train of cars would bring in all goods needed for a year.

Mr. S. S. Peck rose and completely refuted the remarks of the last speaker. He said, as a storekeeper at a more recent date than Mr Mason, he had paid out $200 for teaming in a year. Asked how could such a puerile thought as one train being sufficient for a year's goods, enter his brain?—But he said this meeting was called, not to consider freight for the proposed road, but to instruct the township councils to take a vote of the whole people at the polls or not.

Mr. F. Shore, councillor, in a concise and neat speech, favored the project of a railroad and went on to shew that the farmers' interests ought to be consulted, not the storekeepers' only. He showed that the farmers needed a railway, and needed the "plaster" in it, and that "salt" as mentioned at that meeting, was also a great necessary for the farmer. Our lands required both and he agreed with authorities on agriculture, that they were agents for good, when properly applied to the land, but it needed a railway to bring them within reach. A railway would put plaster down here for the farmer at a saving of nearly $3 a barrel, and so with every other article in proportion. See then the margin I see the great difference! this would soon cover the loans asked for. He then described the vast water power possessed in the back country unoccupied, and asked, why not these become the seats of manufactures?—Why not these privileges be improved? They will be by giving us a railroad; but we have no market now. He then urged the meeting to accept the very modest demand of the Directors and give the bonus, and wished they may all live to enjoy the benefits of a railway and of manufactories.

The resolution was put and carried in the affirmative.

The township council met thereafter, and By-laws were passed a first and second time, favoring the scheme.

HALIBURTON.

At Haliburton, on Thursday last, the public responded to the call of Messrs. S. S. Peck and J. Carnegie, M. P. P., with alacrity, and turned out in good numbers. A right down keen feeling pervaded the settlers shewing them to be fully alive to the benefits that must accrue to their fast improving township and village by a railway terminating there.

After the usual preliminary explanations by the deputation mentioned above, the pith of the occasion became manifest. Mr. Nevin, the Land Company's Agent, read a communication from the Manager of the Canada Land and Emigration Company, Mr. Bloomfield, promising with all readiness their share of any bonus voted by the ratepayers. Mr. C. R. Stewart advocated the claims of a railway scheme, and spoke highly of its benefits to any country. Messrs McDonald, Reeve of Dysart, and D. McFarlane, also old settler there, supported the measure with warmth, and the assembly, numbering a little short of 100, voted that the Township Council bring the matter before the settlers in the legal manner immediately, all being ready to back the matter up by their votes. Accordingly the Council met same day, and a By-law in unison with the wish of the Directors and people was read and passed a first and second time.

F. B.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of last week appears a letter from "A Catholic," in which he makes a most unwarrantable attack on the Rev. Mr. Kelly and Mr. Fitzgerald. In the first place he accuses Mr. Fitzgerald of arrogating to himself the position as mouthpiece of the Catholics of this mission, for his own special ends. Now we Catholics look on Mr. F. as an active member of our Church, kind and charitable to the poor of all creeds and nationalities, (I will admit his name has not been published in the local papers for giving a head of cabbage to the Protestant Home), and not placarding his charity before the world, knowing his duty to God too well for that. He is accused of being a P——d I——n. The only pride we can see in him is that he is proud of the land that gave him birth, and he has a right to that. If Mr F. is or has been employed by the Government, he has given the Government an equivalent for what he has received, and he has just as good a claim or right to get it as anybody else. He has no occasion to use his friends for his own aggrandizement, but thank God the Government of the Dominion is more liberal than the Town Council of Peterboro, no matter what Mr. Doherty or any body else say to the contrary. "A Catholic" has thrown down the gauntlet to Mr. F., that at a public meeting of the Catholics we would not sustain him. He also (a Catholic) boastingly says if the Rev. O. Kelly comes out in his proper name that he will do the same, and show rare sport, &c. Now if "a Catholic" be a bona fide one, let him come out from behind the columns of the newspaper and I will call a meeting of the Catholics of the Town to test the matter. But the cowardly dog will not, simply because he knows he could not get a corporal's guard to sustain him. He makes a very flippant remark about Mr. F. taking refuge beneath the "Cassock." I wish all Catholics did the same, and take the advice of our respected pastor if they would, they would do with ing wrong to themselves or their Protestant neighbors.

Now, sir, I would not trouble you with communicating this, only I did not like it should go broadcast through the country, that we would allow a scoundrel to speak of our pastor and a respectable citizen like Mr. Fitzgerald with impunity. "A Catholic" has now a fair chance to test his metal again. Mr. Editor I wish to say that I will not answer any letters from "A Catholic," unless he comes out over his real name, as I have no inclination for a newspaper discussion. Also, I would not interfere if it were let between Mr. F. and your other correspondents, as I know he is able to defend himself, and show the Town Clerk how to add up figures correctly. Mr. F. may have done some good to the municipality of the Town of Peterboro, as Mr. Edwards has to do a great deal of financing. This may teach him to add correctly in future.

I am yours, &c.,
ANOTHER CATHOLIC.

Matrimonial Advertisements.

The ever conspicuous of the immoral advertisements are amply illustrated by the incident which lately came to our knowledge. A widow who had, by hard labor as a nurse, accumulated a little money and some personal effects, in an evil hour thought she would like to have a husband to look after her interests. She inserted an advertisement something like the following:—

"A widow, not disagreeable, aged about thirty-five, wishes correspondence with a view to matrimony. Send photograph, and address Mrs. Mary O——, B——."

In a few days this fish was ensnared. She accepted one whose photograph pleased her, and an interview was had, and with a most singular lack of judgment, she married the adventurer—for it need not be told he was nothing else—in three weeks from the date of the first interview. The result was sad in the extreme. After living with her a few weeks he decamped, taking with him all her hard-earned money, her watch, and in fact everything of any value she possessed. She afterwards ascertained that the scamp had a wife and children in Canada, Ill., and a wife in Michigan. The worst, however, was yet to come, for from him she contracted a fearful disease, which has destroyed her constitution, and forever unf

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. NEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1868.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Q ick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennis Raines & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving names, residences and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverence combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is neither injurious nor patient. The number and variety of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride in, and confidence in its powers to remove all the radical cures effected to obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Chills, fever and paroxysms, attributable to, or originating through miasmatic localities, will be prevented by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy action.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is generally useful, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other remedies had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold by all druggists everywhere.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past two years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used; and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It" stands forth to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phethisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, tic-tic-he, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, is given in a place in every household and is fast superceding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, tic-tic-he, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, is given in a place in every household and is fast superceding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, spasms, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By no delay, and understanding the symptoms and the cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, fainting, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and will administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysteries, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comforts of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former, here all men avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the sufferings of the horse. Those who will not use it shall be the losers, their horses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

J. T. LLOYD
27 Cortlandt Street, N. Y.

But Sibylla knew other pleasures than costume. Next to her husband and her granddaughter, Madame de Ferine was passionately fond of two things—flowers and rare domestic fowls. It is doubtful whether she really was possessed of these tastes, or whether she assumed to have them merely for the sake of the exquisite pleasure which their gratification afforded to the Marquis. However that may be, hardly a week ever passed without some new surprise for the Marchioness—a new bird-cage or a new flower pot meeting her eye when she opened her window in the morning. Meantime, the Marquis, hidden among the shrubbery, and Sibylla, crouching at his feet, would watch for the effect of this discovery, their hearts palpitating with delight. It generally happened that Madame de Ferine had never seen as all her life, nor even as much as can be imagined that there could be found in all the world, flowers of so rich a tint, or birds of such extraordinary and wonderful beauty.

These attentions, constantly repeated for a long course of years, had made the courtyards and greenhouses of Ferine famous through all the country round. The Marchioness passed a large part of her time in these delightful places. There she blessed Heaven and her husband, and there too she sometimes wept, but for Sibylla the pleasures of this Paradise were without a loy. This kingdom of birds and flowers, of which her grandmother seemed to her the queen, enchanted her. She believed she lived in one of those fairy stories to which her cradle had been rocked. Her grandfather, the creator of these magic delights, seemed to her, to her fancy at least divine. And the Marchioness was not far from sharing Sibylla's confusion in this respect. One day, as she was stooping over the glazed roof of a greenhouse and gazing within with an enraptured look, Sibylla came and looked over her shoulder. She saw Monsieur de Ferine grafting a rose-tree in the morning sun.

'Look, my darling!' said the Marchioness; 'see how handsome your grandfather is! Isn't he beautiful?'

Sibylla ran lightly away, drew near to the old Marquis, and said to him in a stately way:

'Grandfather, the Marchioness of Ferine desires me to say to you, that she thinks you very handsome.'

The Marquis smiled.

'What nonsense!' he said. 'Go and tell her that it is she who is charming.' Then, recalling her, he added: 'Take her this flower.'

A Protestant Cow.

Paddy Murphy and his wife Bridget, after many years of hard labor in ditching and washing, had accumulated a sufficience to warrant them in purchasing a cow (of course they had pigs) which they did at the first opportunity. As it was bought of a protestant neighbour, paddy stopped on his way home at the house of the priest, and procured a bottle of holy water with which to exorcise the false faith out of her.

'Isn't she a foine creature?' asked Pat of the admiring Bridget. 'Just hold her till I fix the shed.'

To save the precious fluid from harm, he took it in the house and set it up on a cuboard until he had 'fixed' things. Then he returned and brought the bottle back again, and when Bridget was holding the rope proceeded to pour it upon her back.

But poor paddy had made a slight mistake. Standing within the same closet was a bottle of aquafortis, that had been procured for a far different purpose, and as it dropped upon the back of the poor cow, and the hair began to smock and the flesh burn, she exhibited dreaded appearances of restlessness.

'Pour no more, Paddy, shouted Bridget, as she tugged at the rope.

'I'll give her enough now,' quoth Paddy, and he emptied the bottle.

Up went the heels of the cow, down went her head, over went Bridget and a half-dozen of the children' and away dashed the infuriated beeine down the street to the terror of all the mothers and the delight of the dogs.

Poor Paddy stood for a moment breathless with astonishment, then clapping his hands upon his hips looked sorrowfully, and exclaimed:

'Bejapers, Bridget but isn't the Protestant strong in her—the baste!'

A PRACTICAL JOKE.—As a boy I remember reading a capital story of a wager laid by a Bow street runner with a country gentleman, that the latter could not proceed from Oxford Circus to Bank, via Holborn, on foot, with a guinea, without being robbed of it. The wager was accepted, and the country gentleman 'declared' to carry the guinea in his mouth as the safest place. All went well till the country gentleman reached Holborn Bars, where a crowd was collected round a Jew pedlar boy, whose box had been upset by some hoor. The crowd sympathising, helped the lad to pick up his traps; but he would not be comforted, because he had lost all his savings, consisting of a guinea. Says a boy, with a preternatural squint, while pointing to the country gentleman 'I saw that gent pick it up and put it in his mouth.' The unhappy country gentleman was convicted on the clearest evidence; he was bonnetted, had his coat split up the back, and was obliged in addition to pay the wager to the Bob street runner.—Temple Bar

CASH DOWN.—On no occasion do people seem more prone to commit blunders than at a wedding. The following funny incident actuall happened at a wedding in California:—In the midst of a crowd of witnesses, the clergyman had just completed the interesting ceremon which binds in the silvery bonds of wedlock two willing hearts, and stretched forth his hands to implore the blessings of Heaven on the union. At this point the groomsman, seeing the open hand reached out, supposed it was the signal for him to surrender the wedding fee which was burning in his pocket. Accordingly, just as the clergyman closed his eyes in prayer, he felt the pressure of a double eagle upon his palm. The good man hesitated, appalled at the lukewarmness of his situation, but coolly deposited the money in his pocket, and proceeded with his devotions.

We have read of a certain clergyman who' being engaged in a warm controversy with a gentleman, was told that his black coat protected him. It may be so said the worthy parson, but if it protects me it don't you, and throwing his coat over a chair, he gave his opponent a sound thrashing. That was muscular Christianity.

The Recent Contests—Swell: Had no breakfast? Sweeper: No! Swell: Paw beggar! And no dinner? Sweeper: No, sir! Swell: Paw beggar! Sweeper: Got a'er a copper, yer honor! Swell: Naw! Sweeper: Paw beggar!

A home missionary was asked the cause of his poverty. "Principally," said he, with a twinkle of the eye, "because I have preached so much without notes."

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every male, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and improvement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have interesting and profitable for every member of the family, and forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly reliable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of delusion." It will contend against all the evil, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world.

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a sycophantic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognize honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of TEMPERANCE in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention.

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other quasi lucrative and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SLOAN, Chemists P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada

YARKO, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and used lots of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At that time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one affected as I was, I have only to say try the shoshonees remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEESE, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that is her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

A. F. WEESE, J. P.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was there any before so universally in demand. Into one, in every community, nearly all diseases, at one time or other, are more or less subject, and consequently the public have long needed a reliable and safe cathartic that it is sure to be such, they have had reason to believe. The cathartic we now present to the world, we think, fully meets this want. It is compounded from the most searching vegetable remedies in the whole range of the materia medica, with which chemical skill is combined a process by which the full virtues of all the ingredients are secured, and the whole made into pills of the smallest size, and most convenient form for taking. Sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—restore the derangements of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, removing them, by their specific action on each, when they become the cause of disease. Minute directions are given in a wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstruction which causes it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Paln of the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired relief by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose will invigorate stomach and bowels into healthy action, restore the appetite, and invigorate the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and renovated by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this germs and unfelt taint of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, its ravages may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the exceptional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute directions for each case are found in our American pamphlet gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections sympathetic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Poetry.

DO NOT CENSURE.

Do not censure without hearing,
Oh ye bird a noble mind,
Worthy of our love bestowing,
Whose we boast export to find;
Many a heart in kindness beating,
Hides in a multitude its own,
With an kindred spirit meeting,
Lives entered heaven unknown.

Should you feel inclined to censure
Faults you may in others view,
Ask your own heart, ere your censure,
If that has not failings too;
Let us kindly o'er us be broken,
Rather strive a friend to gain,
Many a word in anger spoken,
Finds its passage home again.

Do not, then, in idle pleasure
Trifle with a brother's fame,
Guard it as a gilded treasure—
Sacred as your own good name.
Do not form opinions blindly,
Hasty to condemn and wrong,
Those of whom we've thought unkindly
Oft become our warmest friends.

SIBYLLE'S MADMAN.

When the first dawn of summer day has illumined a clear and cloudless sky, the early morning hours are so pure and calm that one might almost hope they would continue so forever. But, on a sudden, a wild wind begins to blow, the grain bends before it, the leaves are shaken, a white network of clouds spreads over the heavens like a curtain drawn by unseen hands, and the traveller becomes disquieted and dreads the approaching storm.

This well-worn image represents with some exactness the new phase into which the childhood of Sibylle seemed to enter after five or six years of the perfect serenity we have endeavored to describe. Her disposition became all at once capricious and uncertain. Sometimes she was gay and sprightly, but more often her blonde head drooped like an ear of grain upon its stalk, and her young heart shivered as if touched by some icy blast.

At the same time, a vague strain of poesy rang in her ears, and then came over her a strange yearning for solitude. Dreaming her nurse after her, she would wander all day long through the forest which surrounded the park of Ferrieu, and only return at nightfall to the chateau.

'What can she be doing all day in the wood? What pleasure does she find there, nurse?' at last asked Monsieur de Ferrieu, who had begun to be disturbed by her strange ways.

'Monsieur le Marquis,' replied the nurse, 'this is the wandering age.' We walk along very quiet for a good while and Mademoiselle is as good as a grown image. Only it also happens to catch sight through the trees of a blue corner of the sea, she gets wild about it, she claps her hands, and cries out, 'The sea! the sea!' and then she catches my hand and makes me run with her until I can't run any more, she sitting all the time. 'The sea! the sea!' and laughing with all her might.—Then I sit down at the foot of a tree and take my work, and Mademoiselle comes and sits down by me. She loves many sea-shells—a boat, a little flower, a bit of moss, and she will look at them for hours together. Sometimes she runs into the thicket and lies down among the grass, and sleeps there like a partridge in a furrow. I say she sleeps, Monsieur, but I don't really know; for to-day, when I lifted her hat, which she had pulled down over her eyes, I found she had been crying. Perhaps it was a dream she had.'

This last circumstance awakened the solicitude of the Marquis. Sibylle was sent for.

'Why were you weeping in the wood to-day?' he asked. 'Are you in trouble? Are you unhappy?'

'Oh! no, no!' cried the child eagerly, and threw her arms about her grandfather's neck.

'Then why were you crying?'

'I don't know—for nothing.'

And this was the only answer they could obtain.

In the forest of Ferrieu there was one spot for which Sibylle showed a special liking. Through a narrow and retired valley, and half concealed by the verdure of its banks, ran a little brook, whose bed increases in a deep ravine that divided the forest. At the head of this ravine stood a large rock, from which filtered little threads of limpid water collected at its basin of ancient masonry, and thence flowing down the valley. This weeping rock, shaded by thick foliage, festooned by creeping plants, and carpeted with damp mosses, presented in this solitude a wild and charming appearance, and had probably enjoyed at some time the honor of a legend of which now the name only remained. It was called the Fairy's Rock. This name awoke in Sibylle's mind all the romantic echoes of her infancy, and made this spot her favorite resort. She would linger there, with strange persistence, watching with eager gaze this wonderful rock, as if under the influence of some spell which need yet delighted her. She was waiting for an adventure.

There happened to be two.

One summer evening she had come to pay her vast to the Fairy of the Rock, while her nurse was, as usual, occupied with her work in the upper part of the wood. Sibylle bent to her alms with her rock. At this time she was a great girl of seven or eight, large for her age, and of an elegant and graceful carriage. Her thick masses of auburn hair were enclosed in a net, and their weight seemed to bend her head slightly backward with a movement full of stately grace. She wore habitually a flat-crowned hat adorned with a black plume, which fell straight over her shoulders, and cast a round shadow over her deep-blue eyes; but sometimes she loved to entwine in her hair flowers, green leaves, and forest-vines, and to form about her head a thick coronal of verdure, like those which shade the foreheads of flute-playing shepherds in the pictured scenes of the mythological age. On this particular evening she had indulged this fancy, and, before the little fountain as a mirror, had composed a head dress of simple and rustic grace. She bent in her head a twig stripped of its bark, and, standing upon the edge of the basin, with wandering and dreamy eyes, she raised her arm from time to time and traced slowly upon the air with her white round mysterious signs, as if she were citing a part in some fairy spell with which she was herself enchanted. All at once, just in front of her, the thicket opened, and a young man leaped lightly from it to the green bank which surrounded the fountain. Sibylle a-ving back a step or two, and half opened her lips to utter a cry of alarm; then stood motionless, her head resting upon the wand in an intrepid posture, her eye fixed upon the intruder.

But the appearance of the stranger was not alarming. He was a young man, perhaps twenty years old, tall and supple, with a great deal of youthful grace, and a gentle light in his large eyes. The unexpected appearance of the child, her beauty, her strange rustic crown, and her heroic attitude held him for a moment in silent astonishment.

He smiled and murmured to himself a few words, then said aloud:

'I beg pardon, Mad'moiselle, perhaps I am intruding?'

'Yes,' said Sibylle.

'Excuse my indiscretion,' said he, 'I will withdraw. I came,' added he, showing an album, 'to sketch in this wood, which I supposed open to the public.'

Sibylle making no answer, he took a step or two as if about to go away.

'It's a pity,' said he gayly. 'What a charming spot! May I ask you its name?'

'The Fairy's Rock.'

'Indeed! And you are the fairy, I suppose?' said the young stranger, assured by the serious manner of the child.

A smile flitted across the proud lips of Sibylle.

'Yes,' said she.

'Is it possible! And will you allow me to take your portrait?'

'No.'

'Will you at least permit me to inquire your name?'

'Sibylle.'

'Good-bye, then, Mademoiselle Sibylle. May I kiss you, my child?'

'No,' said Sibylle.

'May I kiss your hand?'

Sibylle put out her hand with an infantile gesture. The young man smiled, then gravely kissed it.

'I am very grateful to you, Mademoiselle. Now I am going away, and I assure you that I shall never forget either the rock or the fairy. Try to keep some remembrance of me in that pretty head of yours. Will you?'

'I don't know your name,' said Sibylle.

'My name is Raoul. Will you remember it?'

'Always,' said the child.

Raoul, slightly embarrassed—he hardly knew why—looked at her a moment longer with an ask ward smile, then bowed respectfully and disappeared in the thicket.

Some days later, Madame de Ferrieu began to recite to her little granddaughter, who sat listening attentively upon her knee, one of those Eastern stories which she occasionally imparted.

'Once upon a time, in a forest on the banks of the Ganges, a king's son was hunting. He was as handsome as the day, well-bred, wise, and modest. His name was——'

While the Marchioness was yet seeking for the name of this king's son, Sibylle pronounced it:

'Raoul,' said she.

'Why Raoul?' asked Madame de Ferrieu, with some astonishment.

A faint rosy tint spread over the face of the child. From some inexplicable feeling, she had hitherto kept to herself the innocent mystery of her interview with the stranger. Now she did not hesitate to tell it to her grandmother, adding very simply that Raoul having appeared to her as handsome as the day, well-bred, wise and modest, his name came naturally to her lips as a fit one for that king's son who had previously the same qualities.

Madame de Ferrieu laughed at the story but not perhaps so heartily as she seemed to do. However, the next day, after discreet inquiry at the village, she found that the stranger, who was, moreover, described to her as a young man of good family and conduct, had quitted the country on the day after his appearance to Sibylle; so that she was allowed, as before, to continue her favorite walks, and to meet shortly after word, in the same place with a second adventure, which demands a few words of preface.

The brook which flowed from the urn of the Fairy of Ferrieu and traversed the wood emptied into the sea some two leagues away, but in its course, swollen by the waters of two or three affluents, it became a very respectable stream, and a few years before the period of this story had the honor of turning the wheel of a mill which stood on the skirt of the forest. The proprietor of the mill was named Jacques Ferray. He had gayly fleshed his term of service on a ship of war, and had found on his return a faithful sweetheart, to whom he gave his sailor's ear rings, and who became soon afterward a fair and piscanal looking miller's wife. The marriage was a happy one.—Jacques Ferray was an honest, good-tempered fellow; he had a pleasant voice, which he had perfected during the long nights-watches on shipboard, and he sang found a use for it beside the cradle of his little girl presented to him by his wife. There was a little garden before his house, with some bee-hives and a pair of fig trees, and there, with the young wife, the singing and busy miller, and this bit of a child, who dozed between them, made up a cheery picture under the summer sun.

Five or six years later, madame Ferray again promised an increase to the miller's family and Jacques Ferray, who pretended to know something about the matter, declared that the expected stranger would be a boy. Just at this time, one gloomy autumn night, a waterspout burst over the country of Ferrieu. The flood of rain was prolonged throughout the following day and the next night; the paralyzed brook, overflowing into a furious torrent, transformed its banks, spread over the field, and entirely destroyed the mill of Jacques Ferray. He with his wife and child barely escaped with the clothes they had on their backs, but he was completely ruined by the disaster, having lost, in addition to his house and machinery a considerable stock of grain and flour. His wife became distracted, it was said, and died three days after words, and the little girl, who had been exposed in the water during a whole night, soon followed her mother to the churchyard of Ferrieu. The day after the burial of the child, the curate called to condole with poor Jacques Ferray. He found the unhappy man stretched at full length beside his broken wheel, in the yellow slime which now covered the once gay little garden.

'Courage, Jacques!' said the curate, touching his shoulder.

Jacques did not stir.

'Come, my friend,' said the curate again, 'I beseech you.'

Jacques raised his head.

'Go away,' said he. 'There is no God.'

The curate could draw from him no further speech, and he went sadly away.

The next day he found him in the same place and in the same posture, and to all his words of consolation he made answer in the same language:

'There is no God!'

It was soon perceived that the reason of the poor fellow was seriously affected. He abandoned the ruins of his mill and took possession of a wretched shed upon the top of the cliff, which served for a protection to the sheep during the summer heats, and lived there like a beast of the field. Sometimes, and especially on stormy days, he uttered the most heart-rending cries. A singular circumstance occurred during the first period of his madness. For several mornings the glass windows of the church of Ferrieu were found broken and the pavement of the nave strewn with stones. A watch was set, and one night Jacques Ferray was discovered, with fierce and childish rage, hurling stones against the house of that God who had so cruelly stricken him. There was some talk of arresting and confining him; but the curate, who was a good man, had pity on him and made no complaint. But then was the sole act of violence with which the poor wretch could be reproached. He was quite inoffensive, though his appearance was frightful. He was often found sitting upon the bank of a ditch by the wayside, his face turned toward the hedgerow. Like all unhappy beings of his kind, he had at last wearied out all compassion, and had become an object either of terror or of cruel sport. He was known as 'Crazy Feray,' and while at the farm-house doors broken meat was given to him, as much from fear as from charity, the village boys used to fasten old tatters to his back.

One day Sibylle had left her nurse at a little distance, and was reclining on the bank of the basin which received the waters of the Fairy's Rock. Her head was bare. She had been examining with curiosity the vegetation growing at the bottom of the pool, and had little by little sunk down among the grass and flowers which grew on its borders. Overcome by one of those unaccountable crises of emotion to which she had for a long time been subject, she began to weep, and she watched her tears as they fell one by one, like pearls, into the musical and pellucid fountain. A slight sound made her raise her head suddenly, and she saw just in front of her Jacques Ferray creeping among the underbrush. His face, shadowed by a tattered straw hat, thin and pale, and of a frightful appearance, was peering from the thicket, and his hollow eyes were fixed upon Sibylle with an extraordinary intensity of expression. Great tears escaped from them and rolled down upon his long gray beard. At this apparition, the child, though brave, felt a sudden chill run through her veins; she tried to call for help, but her voice failed her. The madman perceived her alarm, and said in a low and plaintive voice:

'Don't be afraid of me; I won't hurt you.'

Then he rose from the ground, and while Sibylle, by a sort of mechanical movement, was also rising, he approached and gazed fixedly upon her.

'Poor child!' he murmured. 'Poor child!' And falling upon the ground beside her, he hid his face with his arms and sobbed.

Sibylle knew the history of the poor man, and at once comprehended that some vague resemblance recalled to him the little girl he had lost. Terror for a moment was overcome by pity in her gentle soul; she knelt down and passed her white hand over the madman's shaggy head; then, as if frightened at her own boldness, she ran away to rejoin her nurse, who was in no little alarm at seeing a moment afterward Jacques Ferray treading close upon their foot-steps. He followed them like a dog until they reached the chateau.

Monsieur and Madame de Ferrieu, affected by Sibylle's story, approached and spoke kindly to the wretched man, who had stopped at the gate, and filled his sack with provisions. From that day forward it was observed that his madness had assumed a milder type. Hardly a day passed that he did not present himself at the gate of the estate, where Sibylle hasted to meet him with full hands. She often saw him in her walks. He had noticed her fancy for wild flowers, and knew the kinds she liked best. Of these he gathered enormous bouquets and came and placed them at her feet without a word.

She would say, smiling, 'Thank you, Jacques,' and the madman would go away satisfied.

The Marquis and Marchioness used to call him 'Sibylle's madman.' The domestics, 'The madman of Mademoiselle.'

The mastery she had acquired over the desolate and revolted soul touched Sibylle and she was proud of it; but it failed, nevertheless, in one point. Advised by her grandparents, she tried one Sunday to lead Jacques to the church of Ferrieu, but when he had reached the gate of the churchyard he disengaged himself with violence from Sibylle's hand, uttered a wild cry, and fled across the moor.

About two months after her first meeting with 'Crazy Feray,' Sibylle had a visit from her friend Clotilde Demorsin, who was preparing to enter a convent at Paris, to complete, or rather to begin her education. Mademoiselle Clotilde was at the time about twelve or thirteen years old.—She was tall, of fine figure, with superb eyes, usually half closed and veiled, but intense and eager when she raised her long petaches. She wore long tresses of glossy black, and showed between her purpled lips an even row of teeth as white as the pulp of a fresh-cut filbert. She appeared, moreover, to be endowed with a quick intelligence and ardent sensibilities, but it was hard to tell what elements were fermenting in the heaving chaos of this rich nature, which was completely abandoned to itself and inspired in Sibylle a feeling of strong affection mingled with despotism. Mademoiselle Clotilde frequently annoyed her by stormy caprices of authority, but the next moment she endeared her by an effusion of irresistible tenderness. She would press her to her heart with tearful eyes and exclaim: 'I love you, Sibylle, and I will love you all my life. Swear to me that you will love me always. Swear to me that you will,'

Sibylle timorously took the required oath.

'You see,' said Clotilde, 'I am so fond of those I love that I could eat them.'

And she did sometimes bite them.

Mademoiselle Demorsin had come to pass a day at Ferrieu. While Sibylle was preparing a repast for her friend, Clotilde espied through a window 'Crazy Feray,' sleeping on the pavement in a shady corner of the courtyard. Without saying a word, she hurried to the kitchen found some cords of twine and strong together some old bats of iron broken spurs, and pieces of glass, then stealthily approached the sleeping lunatic, and attached this trumpery to his clothing. Finally, having taken the barbarous precaution of closing all the courtyard gates, she called the dog 'Mad,' a half-savage brute, that always followed her, gave Jacques a kick which startled him his slumber, and cried out: 'Here, Mad! Here, Mad! Bite him, sir; bite him!'

Feray had a horror of dogs, and they generally showed but scant friendship for him. Seeing the brute about to attack him, he commenced running wildly. The jangling apparatus about his limbs was now set in motion and added to his terror. He ran from one gate to another, and threw himself against it terrified, gasping and howling, the dog close at his heels, all to the great delight of the fair Clotilde.—But Sibylle, attracted by the noise, had hurried to the window. As soon as she saw what was passing, she bounded into the courtyard, and reached the madman just as the dog was seizing upon the tattered rags which covered his legs. The child made every effort to protect her friend from the ferocious brute, till finally he turned his rage upon her, fixed his jaws upon her arm and made the blood flow. The servants now came to her assistance. They drove away the dog and bore to her chamber the fainting Sibylle. At this result of her raguery, Clotilde burst into tears; but when an hour later, as her comrade sent one talking her home, she saw Jacques Feray raise himself from the pavement, point to the old bats of iron she had hung about him, and shake the lot at her, she could not help laughing at the silent menaces of the idiot.

She was wrong.

Sibylle was confined to her bed for three days with fever.

Jacques Feray passed three three days stretched out beneath her window as if dead. After some unsuccessful attempts to make him quit the place, Monsieur de Ferrieu gave orders that he should not be disturbed, and food was brought to him there. He did not even leave at night.—On the morning of the fourth day he heard his name called, and, looking up hastily, saw Sibylle at her window. It was a touching thing to see the smile which now passed like a ray of winter sunlight over those sad features which no laughter ever visited.

Valuable Hints to Business Men.

Everybody knows that the surest and quickest way to accumulate a fortune is to advertise; but everybody does not know "how to do it." The Inside Track has some good ideas on the subject, which may be of practical value to some of our readers:

An advertisement is not always valuable in proportion to the space which it occupies.

A prominent advertisement once or twice will be effective, if followed up by a steady card giving business and address.

Do not take down your sign in dull times People read newspapers at all times of the year.

If business admits of it, several small advertisements, with your name repeated every time, will avail more than the same collected, with your name repeated only once.

Do not fear to have a small advertisement by the side of a competing one. The big one cannot eat it up.

A short advertisement, four times, is better than a long one only once. 'Brags' is a good dog, but hold-fast is better.

Small advertisements and plenty of them is a good rule. We were at babies once, yet we made considerable noise.

Do not advertise unless you have something worth advertising.

The easiest way in the world to throw away your money is to advertise injudiciously.

The surest way in the world to accumulate a fortune is to advertise judiciously. The sewing machine men—the leading makers—agreed about a year ago to give up their extensive advertising. The result has been to decrease their business one third.

The piano men have doubled and trebled their business by advertising.

The valley being sometimes more a depressed spacious, and usually adjacent appearance, as though crushed and heartbroken, by long-continued oppression; sometimes a heavy, displeasing, dragging one, and a blank and lowering brow, and the chief agent which indicates the disturbance within, and the form of vengeance which is to be taken is suspended in. The latter is sometimes true; the former is frequently spontaneous. Instance: Mr. N. P. Willis, in one of his earlier volumes, has a clever little tale describing the power of an "injured look." By virtue of it a young American lady contrived to persecute a whole house full of brothers till regard her as a martyr, and to speak the worst and think the worst they could to their husband; and all this, without uttering one word beneath was produced solely by the "injured look." And, if there is an "injured look," there is also such a thing as a "diabolical devil;" if the power of one is great, the provocation endured by the latter is unutterable. It is a curious, and to some still appalling circumstance that obstinacy in a woman is more often encountered with a dumb devil than in a man. Sullenness is visible even in the nursery, where it obtains, as to speak, in the form of a bad; but it is merely an outbreak of bad temper, for at that age a child need not learned the method of using it as an instrument with which to punish his playmates. And the wisest course to learn is entirely unnoticed, to "silence" the offender, as the French say, until there is an obvious return to a more amiable disposition. But boys and girls soon learn to estimate the power of sullenness, either by passive or endurance and a large subscribe the best check on a despotism of this kind. Sullenness is not a tyranny which can be safely exercised in society at large and it is commonly reserved for private or home exhibitions, the smaller the circle the more concentrated its force; in a family, in a house, in one room, the power enthrones oppressive overshoes and pervades every author of it. In love making, sullenness is a deplorable blunder. Smile or strike, or dimple and strike, too, if that seems more advisable; but no good ever follows a sullen enmity, which chills, disconcerts and often actually destroys love. Even that unnatural antidotes, that toothless vengeance which consists in pouring coldness as an experiment full of danger, and in the worst possible taste. But if between lovers it is a blunder, in married life it is simply the greatest madness of which a human being can be guilty. There they are, man and woman tied together, like two goats, and as the countryman justly observed, "there's been a trouble to more than goats, and it either of them is endowed with the faculty of persistent sullenness, one shudders to think of the life the other may be made to lead. It might be reasonably urged as a cause for judicial separation possible even for divorce, since the practice of quietly pressing the life and spirit out of a human being, no matter how many years the operation proceeds over, is not one that ought to be permitted in a Christian country; "on viette," the weak go to the wall, and top often the weak are the pleasantest and most lovable of earth's creatures.

A WORD TO WOMEN.

There are strifes and inward warfare in many, perhaps in most families, and yet an impartial judge could seldom, if ever, impute the whole offence to either side; indeed, there may be no intentional offensive act, but simply the friction of unharmonious natures, the greatest sufferer being not necessarily the woman, but the one possessing the most sensitive nervous organization. Then in one cause of the early fading out of our American women—this and the burden of heavy household duties, the multitude of family cares. I know it is said to be young, fresh, still attractive, and in a few years to be old, faded, and forlorn, with a weight of care never lifted from aching shoulders, and the duties of an pressing upon one feeble pair of hands. It is to see, inexpressibly more sad must it be to experience. I recall a dozen, at least, of those hopeless women whom I once knew as fresh young girls; and yet I think of the husband of one of those bantering home from his desk, and the long column of vexation agrees to take the ailing, fretful child from the arms of the weary wife and mother.

Sometimes this fading of a woman's beauty is unavoidable. "Poverty is hard to bear, but, after all, much is the result, of placing our standard in dress, and living beyond our means; so much, that I have sometimes thought the fixed classes in the Old World, with their unalterable customs really blessed. O sisters! when will you learn that a simple dress of inexpensive material neatly fitted, home surroundings suited to your means—which your neighbors know as well as yourselves—will do more to win admiration and respect, to say nothing of comfort and happiness, than silks and satins, velvets and laces, in which you appear simply out of character and ill at ease? This striving after the unattainable is killing our women; living in houses beyond their means, poorly, if at

An Interesting and Sweet Child but Only a Little Girl's Heart, and then its end.

Those who have passed up the street leading from the ferry landing in Campbellville, Hudson Island, may remember a large, three story, brown stone-front house, the first story of which is a shoe store standing at the head of that street, and fronting the landing. This store belongs to Mr. Cornelius Harrington, and in the building that gentleman resides with his family. For the past ten months he has had in his employ a journeyman shoemaker, named Gaetan Roache, aged 46 years, a widower, who lived with the family. Roache was, as a rule, very industrious, and was esteemed an excellent workman. He had, however, an unfortunate habit of getting on a spree, on which occasions he would be under the influence of liquor for a week or more at a time, and would frequently have attacks of delirium tremens resulting from his intemperance. Mr. Harrington several times threatened to discharge him for this reason, but as the unfortunate man promised to quit his irregular habits, he still retained him in his employ. About ten days ago it was noticed that Roache was again drinking to excess, but as he was quiet in his demeanor the discovery created no undue comment. On Monday he was at work all day, and appeared to have quit drinking.—In the evening, however, he drank excessively, and went to his room in a state of decided inebriety. About six o'clock yesterday morning he knocked at the door of Mr. Harrington's sleeping room—as usual preceding on his part—and on that gentleman's asking what he wanted, replied, "I thought I would let you know that I did not sleep well last night." Mr. Harrington remembered to him that he looked pale and sickly, but that he would probably get better during the day, and went down to open his store, Roache going up again to the room wherein he worked, on the third floor. It appears that he there took from his bench a very keen-edged shoemaker's knife, and coming down stairs again entered the room adjoining Mr. Harrington's, which was the sleeping apartment of that gentleman's two daughters, one of whom, Emma, one aged thirteen, and her sister about six years. Emma was clothing herself when he came in, and appeared to have been at that moment engaged in fixing one of her shoes. With at a moment's parley, Roache seized her, threw her upon the bed and drew the knife across her throat, inflicting a gently wound, or rending from ear to ear. Emma gave one slight scream and immediately expired.—Her little sister, who was put in a terrible fright, crept under the bed when the madman first entered, and had managed to escape these down stairs in a moment afterward, where she told her father that Roache was murdering Emma. Mr. Harrington immediately rushed up to the room, and one almost drives insane by the appalling sight which met his view—his dead child, lying on the bed, covered with blood yet flowing from the horrible wound in her throat. The neighbors were immediately alarmed, and a search was instituted for the murderer. It seems that immediately after enacting this terrible tragedy Roache went to his own room, where, standing before a looking-glass, he drew the knife across his own throat, inflicting a wound from which he died in a few minutes; for when a gentleman who was passing by when the alarm was given entered the house and went up stairs in search of him, the man was found lying on the floor, just in the act of expiring. A spattering of blood on the looking-glass and the appearance of a pool of blood on the floor immediately underneath show that the suicide's end was be-litted with deliberation and determination, while the wretched man was looking in the mirror.

The scene in the house caused by this tragedy beggars description, and the demonstrations of the parents of the child were heart-rending. The murdered girl was a beautiful and exceedingly bright child, and was greatly petted by all the neighbors. The horrible event has cast a gloom over the whole village, which has never before known such a direful occurrence. Mr. James Harcourt, the Coroner, empanelled a jury yesterday morning, who, after hearing Mr. Harrington's testimony, returned a verdict as to the death of each of the parties in accordance with the facts above narrated.

Roache's body was immediately removed to a vault in the town, to await disposition by his friends. The obsequies of his unfortunate victim will take place on Thursday. Roache is said to have been, when sober, a quiet, unobtrusive man, and to have always manifested a special regard for Mr. Harrington's children.—New York Times.

Crop Prospects in Europe.

The Mark Lane Express, July 12, has the following in reference to the prospects of the harvest:—"A continuance of dry weather, with an increase in the temperature and a good portion of brilliant sunshine, has this week conferred immense benefit on the country. The hay crop is the main, will now be secure, and much of it has been got up without rain. The later pieces of wheat have been coming into bloom in a much more favorable time than that which was early; and there has been a marked change for the better in every English county and in every country in Europe. Still, it is too late to alter the character of this year's crop, which cannot, by any possibility, equal that of 1868; and the first gatherings in France show an inferior weight and greatly deficient yield; but it is too early yet to state, with any accuracy, the probable deficiency. However, it is more confirmed that the leading grain this year is likely to be oats, which promise great abundance, and, should the weather continue fine, the quality, as well as the yield, will be excellent. The hoeing-crops of the present harvest has pleasingly brought out the fact that, notwithstanding our abundance last year, stocks have now become very low, having been begun upon early and well-drained till late, making a claim of about one-sixth beyond what 1867 was able to furnish; while foreign stores were pretty well cleared from every grain-exporting country. We therefore find that the late fine weather has only partially checked the inward movement, which on the average has been fully in operation, while some places were so exhausted that millers had to pay 2s. to 2s. per qr., more than on the previous week. What bought we should have reached with a continuance of the late low temperature, mixed with rain, there is no saying; but it is clear we have had a providential escape. The same firmness existed in our corn market has been also partially exhibited in other parts of Europe; and, though the southern kingdom may now be considered safe, or nearly so, the general position is yet critical, with a much greater likelihood of an advance than a recurrence to the late quotations. It must always be remembered that our averages are still about 20s. below those of the same time last year. But little change has occurred at New York in the value of breadstuffs."

The Ottawa Defalcation.

Reifenstein, the defaulting clerk, has skedaddled to the other side of the line. He was admitted to bail on the permission of Judge Armstrong, and on the security of his own son, and one McPherson, who is said to be a nephew to John A. McDonald. These now turn out worthless, and to the great loss of the country and the meting out of justice to a culprit, neither Reifenstein nor his abettors can be reached at all.—There is evident neglect on the part of the minister in Ottawa at the time, to permit Judge Armstrong or any one else to allow a man guilty of public robbery to get off free. It is asserted, and perhaps on some show of reason too, that a fear of criminality of those in high circles necessitated the act of Judge Armstrong and two incapable magistrates. Surely it is time that some change should be made in the management of a department where $50,000 were embezzled before the dishonest clerk was detected. The Dominion has an Auditor-General, but of what use is he? A systematic pilfering has existed for three years, and yet never found out by Mr. Langton. During last year about $17,000 were taken by Reifenstein, and large sums during the two previous years, all these figures passing through the audit office. For the last two years they did not add up correctly, and instead of enquiring after the cause, the papers were merely sent back to Reifenstein's office for correction. After several days labor they were made appear correct by changing the figures, the blunders being left to printer or copyist—$347, for instance, being made $743; $138, $1,318, and $706 into $1,706. Yet all this blundering never led to investigation. So much for the advantages of an Auditor-General.

The Gazette's correspondent very properly, we think, holds Mr. Langton, the auditor, morally responsible for these embezzlements. The items in which these frauds appeared have been published for three years in the public accounts. The responsibility for their correctness is his. Were such auditing to take place in the accounts of any public company, the person responsible for it, even for one year, would audit no more. It is contended that Mr. Langton, whatever may be his high personal character, owes it to himself to acknowledge, and to resign his office or be removed.

Father McMahon at Liberty.

An intimate friend of his, this very notorious character who figured so in the history of the Fenian raid, and who received a just sentence of penal servitude for life, is now at liberty, his sentence being remitted.

John A. McDonald's reasons for advising his Excellency to this course have appeared in the public prints. His reasons appear to be:—That Lamalen, a Protestant, was acquitted; that the Roman Catholic hierarchy and clergy, and especially the Archbishop of Halifax, have taken a special interest in his case, and have interceded for him; that several petitions have been presented for his release. It is also intimated as a reason for the remission of his sentence that "there were Protestants on the jury that found him guilty." But the grand reason assigned is that the Government owe a debt of gratitude to the Roman Catholic Clergy for their exertions in the cause of loyalty and good order. For these reasons, and as a token of respect for the distinguished prelate from Halifax, John A. recommended McMahon's release.

We are not disposed to quarrel about the release of Father McMahon, nor is it a matter of concern to us that he is released because of being a priest, or because he is a Roman Catholic. If it is right to set him at liberty he should not be detained because he is a Catholic. But we ask Protestants to consider the opinion John A. McDonald holds of them as jurors. He says:—

"If not all, a majority of the jurors, in both cases, were Protestants; and the undersigned believes that there is an impression, however ill-founded, among the co-religionists of McMahon, that even-handed justice was not administered in these two cases, and a good deal of irritation has been engendered thereby."

Just as much as to say that a Protestant jury could hardly be expected to do justice to an accused Roman Catholic. And this in the whom Orangemen and Protestants delight to honor. A man who, in a sworn paper to Her Majesty's representative, sets forth that for such reasons there was a Protestant jury, poor Mr. McMahon had not justice done him. Is this not really the meaning of the above paragraph? And even though emphasis be placed on the last clause, why should John A. McDonald strengthen such unjust and unwarrantable impressions, by making them a reason for executive clemency? Could he not as a man boldly say that it was a matter of political policy, to them try to retain the power of the Hincmathy for coming ascendancy, in view of the additional defection of the Catholic community. The Irish through means with dubious force to their Congressmen who have fought through think and hide for this which said representatives to-morrow. They may dissect the power of secession but this through in the dark, as their Parliament justice against Irish them their daily occasion are by other words. With the Protestant electors and juries of Peterborough remember that Sir John A. Macdonald has boldly and publicly placed it on record on the face of the throne, that a Catholic's liberty is in danger at the hands of a Protestant jury. He on the contention, shame on the leader that would dare to make the insinuation, and shame on the Parliament who gave his support to keep such a political charlatan in a position to debase them. The Irish Canadian says:

"We thank Sir John would have added quite as much to his political stock-in-trade by telling the truth, and saying:—"We must be McMahon got things look very deserted along our borders, and his case is interesting the debauching storm." So think we."

WHAT OTHERS ARE DOING.

We are sometimes asked to believe, in view of the fact that we have a beautiful school building, an excellent Principal and a staff of teachers of more than common merit, that we are doing all that could be expected for the education of the rising generation, and we are willing to believe that when our Grammar School becomes a Collegiate Institution, our town will have something to boast of in this important work.—Unfortunately, however, all the calculations are based on the education of boys, while the higher education of their sisters is only partially provided for. At the present day several young ladies are forced to leave town to complete their education, although we do not believe that there is the least necessity for such a course; but the fact that some think there is, should lead us to consider the matter. It is also well understood that some Protestant parents send their children to the town Convent School, under the impression that these they have certain advantages which they would not have at their own school. On this subject we also have our doubts that such parents or guardians are actuated more by the idea of respectability attached to attending a Convent School, than they are by the superior education received; although we by no means wish to be understood as deprecating in any way the work of the Sisters of the Convent of Notre Dame. The mere fact that some do go to that institution, should lead us to investigate the cause, and apply a remedy if possible. Toronto has established the Bishop Strachan School to prevent this very thing complained of. Hamilton has the Wesleyan Female College; London is to have a Female College; and at a late meeting in Ottawa City, it was unanimously agreed to establish a Protestant High School for young ladies.

The time has arrived when such a thing almost becomes a necessity for Peterboro. It is true that in our present Union and Grammar School a young lady can obtain an English education equal, if not superior, to that imparted in many of their so-called academies; but this must be impressed on the minds of parents and others, in order to satisfy them that such is really the case. In not a few of these academies there is more attention paid to what is termed the "accomplishments" than to mental culture; and do not all young ladies know that except in matters of social etiquette they forget more than they acquire at many high schools. Yet in the present state of public opinion they are patronised and will be. The question is, how shall we provide such an education as shall recommend itself to the community, so as to secure that support that is now bestowed on institutions of doubtful merit, if not also of injurious tendencies.

All that is required in connection with the present school arrangements is merely to provide a first class music teacher, which would cause no additional outlay except in preparing accommodations. The fees of pupils, at a very moderate rate, if the teacher should be of sufficient merit, would afford an ample salary, and the Board should not lose sight of this in any of their present and future arrangements.

In order to remove alarm from those who may be in dread of additional costs, we point them to the fact that one seventh of the property of the town supports four teachers, while the other six sevenths are taxed to keep only nine, instead of twenty-four teachers, if they would keep up the proportion. The average cost per pupil for one year in our public school is about $10, while in other places it amounts to $12, and even to $15 per annum. But this is a very narrow view of the matter. It is as necessary to educate our children as to feed and clothe them, and more, it is more responsible, and more shrinkless to be, now upon them a liberal education than to hoard up a few paltry dollars to leave them at last, and then not know whether we are bequeathing to wise men or to fools. By all means let us have the best education we can, and the best teacher the Board can find; pay a good salary as an investment. Prepare to educate our own children in our own way and at home, and there is no fear but the people will endorse the action of the Board.

We may return to this subject again as it is one of more than common interest to us, to our children, to the country, and to the future.

The weather has been all that farmers could desire, for almost a week, and hence there have been large quantities of hay saved. In the early part of the hay harvest the weather was unsettled, and perhaps induced some to put in greener and damper hay than in other years, but during the last week this was not the case. Farmers tell us, however, that the wet has hurt the crops very little if any. Wheat harvest is commenced in some localities. At this date last year fall wheat was all in the barn.

Mr. Cartier assumes the office of Finance Minister, vacated by Mr. Rose, and Sir A. T. Galt is to be Minister of Militia. The will not be permanent, as Sir George's previous habits were not calculated to fit him for financing. Mr. Galt, in all probability, will again control the money bags of the Dominion.

Mr. Rose did not resign his position on political grounds, but on personal and professional. The Montreal Witness speaks of him as both able, popular and courteous.—His banking scheme was not popular.

Mr. Cayley, M. P., for Beauharnois, has brought an action for libel against the Courier, laying damages at $12,000.

Presentation of an Address to R. S. Eastwood, Esq.

A few of the many business friends of Mr. Eastwood, in the city of Peterborough, who [illegible] in the office of the Bank of Montreal, [illegible] to present the address to him on the occasion of his departure from this town to take charge of the Bank there.

Among those present were Robert Nicholls and Wm. Hall, Esqrs., Wm. Clinton, Esq., C. Gwynne, Esq., Geo A. Cox, Esq., Robert Hamilton, Esq., and John Stewart, Esq.

Mr. Clinton read the address, but before doing so took occasion to remark that it was with great pleasure he did so, and that he could not refrain from expressing his own feeling of good will. He (Mr. C.) had had a good deal of experience in bank affairs, and he could truly say that he never had such pleasure, since the removal of the Commercial Bank, as he had in doing business with Mr. Eastwood in the Ontario Bank. He regretted very much his removal, but was pleased that he was promoted to a more extended field of labor.

THE ADDRESS.

To R. S. Eastwood, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—We, the undersigned, before your final departure from Peterboro, take advantage of the present opportunity to convey to you this expression of our regret at your removal from among us, and our earnest wishes for your success in the more extended sphere to which you have been called.

Your urbanity of manner and kindliness of heart have endeared you to us socially; your well known business qualities have made our business relations with you most gratifying and satisfactory, and the active participation and lively interest you have always taken in everything calculated to promote the public good, have gained for you the esteem and respect of all classes of our community.

While, therefore, aware that a just appreciation of your merits is the principal cause of your leaving us, and sincerely pleased that you will hereafter have a wider field for the exercise of your abilities, regret the loss we shall sustain by your withdrawal from our midst.

It only remains for us to tender you our heart-felt congratulations upon your well deserved promotion, and to ask you to accept our united and cordial good wishes for your success in your new position, and for the happiness and welfare of your family in their new home.

MR. EASTWOOD'S REPLY.

To Messrs. Nicholls & Hall, W. Clinton, N. Shaw, Esqs., and others.

GENTLEMEN,—

You will please accept my hearty thanks for your kind and flattering address, presented on the eve of my departure to a new field of labor. I am deeply sensible of the fact that in your kindness of heart you give me more credit than is my due.

If I have succeeded in discharging my duty with satisfaction to you, when we have had business relations, or in our social intercourse, I have, after all, but done my duty, in the one case to the institution whose servant I am, by treating its clients with that courtesy which is their just due, and which I would be censurable in not according to them, and in the other as a man trying to recognise and discharge the duty towards his fellows to the best of his ability.

My life in Peterboro has been pleasant in all its relations, and wherever my future lot may be cast I shall ever look back to the time of my residence therein as a "green spot," in a somewhat chequered life. My family and myself have received nothing but kindness from the many friends we have made while here, and it will ever be a source of pleasure to know that we depart from amongst you with your sympathetic good wishes for our future happiness and prosperity.

It only remains for me to thank you again, in behalf of myself and my family, and to say that we most cordially reciprocate the hope that your future may be marked by prosperity and happiness, and that Peterboro may continue to thrive and flourish, and bear in future that same high character for commercial stability and enterprise, without rashness, that she has in the past.

Mr. Eastwood before reading the reply said that during the past 16 or 18 years he had been in many places east and west of Peterboro, but in no place were his relations of a more pleasant character. On personal grounds he regretted leaving Peterboro, but for private reasons did not feel at liberty to object to the appointment of the Directors. He invariably, in his relations with the Bank, felt it his duty to obey, and go where sent, and believed that such was his duty as long as he held the position he did.

Mr. Clinton remarked that many friends wished to offer something more substantial, but the majority were of opinion that the address itself would be more congenial to his (Mr. E.'s) wishes.

Mr. Eastwood again expressed his thanks for their address, as he believed that it was more substantial than other tokens which some might prize more, but he felt that the barren to the address would not be there unless the expressions contained in it were real, and for this reason valued it highly as an expression of their good will to himself and family.

Few men connected with banking institutions have earned such a hearty good will of all classes of citizens as Mr. Eastwood, has, and his tact and knowledge of those with whom he did business have been to the advantage of his bank. Our best wishes accompany him and his family to his new sphere of more extended usefulness.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING.

We again invite special attention to the Educational Convention to-day and to-morrow, and to the evening lectures and readings in particular. To-night there will be a lecture on education as a Civilizing Agency, delivered by James H. Dixon, Principal of the Union School, and a reading by Mr. Haggart. To-morrow evening there will be two lectures, one on The Higher Life, by Fr. J. Macmillan, L. L. B., of Boston; and one on The Teacher, his work and its reward, by Mr. Stratton, Local Supt. of Schools.—No admission fee will be charged, and the public are respectfully invited to aid this new and praiseworthy enterprise by their presence. Place of meeting Music Hall.

The Montreal Gazette remarks that it is said that Sir Francis Hincks will remain some months in Canada, and that he is on a confidential mission for the British Government.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In last week's issue of the Examiner there appeared a letter from "Another Catholic" in defence of J. W. Fitzgerald and the Rev. O. Kelly in all that has been said and done by those gentlemen, respecting the "Protestant House," and the unfair manner in which the Catholics of the town have received their quota of the public charities. I need only refer them and a discriminating public to the able and statistical letter of James Edwards, Esq., and also Mr Doherty's, both of which appeared in last Friday's Review, detailing facts and figures which neither Messrs. Kelly, Fitzgerald & Co., or any of their important scribes can controvert.

The Catholics pretty generally look upon Mr. Kelly's letter in defence of his bosom friend, J. W. F., as a paltry subterfuge, which instead of defending him, as he no doubt meant to do, raised a side issue respecting Mr. Fe. benevolence, and which did not bear directly on the question at issue at all. I deny and flatly contradict that Mr. Kelly has been made the agent, time and again, for dispensing charities to the poor of his own church. I never knew any such thing to be done—in fact we have no regular system in our church for relieving our poor—whenever they apply for aid they are told to go to the Council and there the matter ends.

Why did not Messrs. Fitzgerald, Kelly & Co. co-operate with the benevolent ladies and gentlemen, who have well known to be the founders of the Protestant Home. Col. Haultain and Sheriff Hall stand in public before a meeting of the Council, to which they appealed for aid to sustain such an institution in our midst, that they had written to Mr. Kelly on the subject of co-operation in the matter, as there were several Catholic inmates in the institution receiving daily support. Col. Haultain said in his speech before the Council and in my own hearing also, that Mr. Kelly did not even condescend to answer their letter, and thus the matter ended.—Since that time, however, notwithstanding the opposition given to the "Home" by Mr. Kelly, numerous Catholics have been assisted and cared for in it.

Mr. Doherty, when seconding Mr Stevenson's resolution in the Council, spoke the unanimous sentiments of his co-religionists; they were well-timed remarks, "words fitly spoken." Mr. D. is a man of broad and liberal views, and a man of sense and integrity; he is looked upon by us as the exponent of Catholic affairs in the council; he may always rely on our unanimous support in future at the polls.

With regard to "Another Catholic's" letter in last week's Examiner, I need only say that we fling back in his teeth and those whom he is vainly endeavoring to defend, all the foul names he makes use of. We will not take them to ourselves; they are not applicable to us.—We would advise "Another Cath lic" to use more decent language in future. But, perhaps, he has been inspired by his master, J. W. F., whose second letter was in part made up of foul abusive names against all Catholics who differ from him—such as "Flunky," "Refractory Catholics," &c. The first term "Flunky" is only peculiar to bar rooms, and those who frequent them—such as Mr. F. himself. If Mr. F. and the Rev. "O. K., V. G." were more obsequious in their habits the public would not be annoyed by such a controversy as the present one.

Messrs. Kelly, Fitzgerald & Co. may well talk of charity. I say they are both deficient of such a heavenly trait of character, inasmuch as said gentlemen were the means both directly and indirectly of hounding Mr. Carroll out of Peterboro, because he differed from them at the last election, and for this reason (if it be a reason) a public meeting must needs be called and a set of resolutions, cut and dry beforehand, be pulled out of the breeches pocket of one of the leaders, and Messrs. Jos. Dick & Harry, previously appointed, moved and seconded said resolutions, and Mr. C. in their a doomed man immediately follows a complaint to the government against Mr. C., because he used his influence for the Reform candidates. For the charges just mentioned Mr. C. is relieved of his office and another gentleman succeeds him. Mr. Editor, I say it is wicked in the extreme for those individuals who were the cause of taking the bread and butter out of the mouths of Mr. Carroll's children in the shabby manner above described, to prate about charity. They are strangers to such a virtue. Mr. Carroll was a good patriotic Irishman and co-religionist of an independent turn of mind, such as could not be controlled by undue influences and intrigue.—We Catholics look upon the foregoing as "anti-christian and anti-catholic" in the extreme, but Messrs Fitzgerald, Kelly & Co. do not.

Doctor Poole, too, played a conspicuous part in this game, so much so, that it became the indirect means of driving him out of town to seek a more congenial atmosphere elsewhere. "Dame Rumor" has it through town that Mr. F. is about to emigrate to the "Saskatchewan Valley," to enter on a large survey in that distant region. It is to be hoped he will have mercy on the government. In the interim he is employed in writing a series of abusive letters, samples of which we have already sent broadcast through the country, in order that his "Flunky" co-religionists may ever keep him in remembrance.

How very different are Mr. Pitzpat ld's ideas from those of his late intimate friend—T. D. McGee. What a pity Mr. F. did not copy a few useful ideas from the comprehensive and liberal views of that lamented statesman. I think Mr. F. can hardly be a scion of the great Fitzgeralds, of Limster and Munster, whose deeds of chivalry and genius so beautifully grace the pages of "poor Ireland's" history, and whose study should lift any of Ireland's children above the superstitious which haunt them from the cradle.

Now, Mr. Editor, permit me to say in conclusion, that it behoves us all, Catholics and Protestants, as we are all together in this our New Dominion and country of adoption, to live at peace with each other. Our common interests are identical and interwoven one with another; this our new country, and the man or men who may be found base enough to sow the seed of discord between us, and our earnest wishes for your success in the more extended sphere to which you have been called.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the survey will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, which has deservedly known for the past ten years, and failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly attended, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a family medicine, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pleurisy or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scratches, horses, or cuts, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, occasional convulsions, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are pleasant and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a pure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, purposing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells that congestible trash or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the disordered vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangement of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

DON'T YOU KNOW.

Especially unless the following conditions exist, as it is a newspaper correspondence and about women:—

Whatever you have to say, my friend,
Whatever writing, or prose, or pay,
Condenses as much as ever you can,
And say it in the smallest way,
And whether you write of rural affairs,
Or particular things to town,
Just take a work of friendly advice—
Boil it down.

For if you go splattering over a page
When a couple of lines would do,
Though it may be original, you see,
It is rather tedious, that is true.
But the sensible readers plainly through
So think you have a story to tell,
And would like a little removed,
By little quite some of your wish, my friend,
Boil it down.

When writing an article for the press,
Whether poem or verse, just try
To utter your thoughts in the fewest words,
And let them be crisp and dry,
And when it is finished as you suppose
It is done correctly brown,
Just look it over again, and then
Boil it down.

For editors do not like to print
An article lengthy long,
And the general reader does not care
For a couple of yards of song.
By putting your wits in the smallest space,
If you'd win the author's crown,
And every time you write, my friend,
Boil it down.

PATIENCE OF JOB.—Everybody has the latest or bragging on Job; and Job did have considerable bile patience, that's a fact, but did he ever teach a dentist chair for 9 dollars a month and board rolled, or run a business newspaper?

Did he ever reap 14 gold coin down till on a hot day, and bet all his gaiter buttons burst open at once?

Did he ever bet the jew pin tormentor and he made to feed the baby while his wife was over to Parkinses in a tea squall?

Did he ever get up in the morning awful dry, and fet it three miles before breakfast to get a drink, find that the man keep a temperance house?

Did he ever set onto a litter or kittens in the old rocking chare, with his summer pantaloons on?

Did he ever undertake to melt a kicking heifer with a bushy tail, in fature, out in the lot?—Josh Billings.

A tavern-keeper had recently erected a shanty in one of his rooms. One Irishman, who happened to be passing on a few companions, rose up drinking with the purpose of ringing for more liquor. Looking around the room for the bell-rope, his eye fell on the rope attached to the shower bath. 'By Saint Patrick I' said he, 'I have found the bell-rope at last!' and pulling it, he gave it a strong pull and a pull altogether;' in an instant he was drenched to the skin, and almost frantic with rage, to the no small amusement of the company.

One of the old style ministers who lives in Connecticut, recently preached a sermon an hour and twenty minutes long. But with kindly consideration for modern degeneracy, he had the doxology sung in the middle of the sermon so that those who were tired could go home.

Adversity exasperates fools, depirts cowards, draws out the faculties of the wise and ingenious, puts the modest to the necessity of trying their skill, arms the opulent, and makes the idle industrious. Much may be said in favor of adversity, but the worst of it is, it has no friends.

Talk and Action.—An exchange claims that—Women talk; well yet. Yes, some men set very badly, while many women talk altogether too much. A compromise between the two would be of service to the cause of humanity.

Romance and reality.—"Oh, I'm so glad you like birds. What kind do you most admire?" said a young wife to her husband. "Ahem! Well, I think a goose with plenty of seasoning is about as nice as any."

A parishioner inquired of his pastor the meaning of the loss of Scripture: "He was clothed with curses as with a garment." It signifies, replied the divine, that the individual had a bad habit of swearing.

A shrewd old gentleman once said to his only daughter: "Be sure my dear you never marry a poor man. But remember that the poorest man in the world is one that has money and nothing else."

Musing for being universally beloved—Lend, and never ask to be paid; make presents, give treats, bear and forbear, do everybody a good turn, hold your peace, and suffer yourself to be cheated.

Pompey, said a gentleman to his servant, I did not know until to-day that you were whipped last week. Didn't you, sirree? replied Pompey. I—I knew'd it just de same time it occurred.

A polite philosopher once thanked a lady who had been singing to a party for an hour by saying, Madam, you have wasted your time charmingly.

Why do you always buy a second-class ticket? asked a gentleman of a miser. Because there is no third-class, was the prompt reply.

Advice Gratis.—To a fool amongst philosophers.—Respect yourself in proportion to the contempt with which you are treated.

'A dreadful little for a shilling,' said a pessimist fellow to a physician who dealt out an emetic; 'can you not give any more?'

Why are your eyes like very intimate friends separated by distant climes? They correspond, but never meet.

It is a great waste of raw materials to put ten dollars' worth of beaver on ten cents' worth of brains.

Why is a selfish friend like the letter P? Because, though first in pity, he is last in help.

In accordance with the evident fitness of all things, a porter is always stout.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an intimate alphabet was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

In but this a reason to be so fearfully our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the ravages of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollcs, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Killer?" See his ad. in another column.

The Evening Telegram

Now, Monthly, Large Size, of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, and British Columbia.

Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every twelfth day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the consistently open editorial advocacy and maintenance of the public rights of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsectarian in party, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly readable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of delicacy." It will contend against all ship crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a gross Chaotic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully engage in honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

IT WILL faithfully advocate the cause of Temperance in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other quasi humbug and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

TERMS:—Per Annum, $3.00; per Week, 6 cents; Single Copies 1 cent.

CLUBS.—Temperance Organizations or others sending Clubs will be furnished at the following rates:—

THE SUBSCRIBER proposes to issue in SEPTEMBER, 1870, if sufficient support by SUBSCRIPTIONS and ADVERTISEMENT can be obtained to cover the cost of Publication, a CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY, comprising the Provinces of ONTARIO, QUEBEC, NOVA SCOTIA, and NEWFOUNDLAND and PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND. The Directory will contain the names of Professional and Business Men, and of the principal inhabitants in the Cities, Towns and Villages, together with a large amount of general information, including Alphabetical Directories of Post Offices and Postmasters, Banks, Governmental Departments and Employes, Houses of Parliament, Law Courts, Educational Departments Custom Houses and Officers of Customs, Ports of Entry, Tariffs of Customs, List of Patents of Inventions, Canals, Railways, Railway and Steamboat Routes, Benevolent and Religious Societies, Clergy of all Denominations, Registrars with their Divisions, Newspapers and Periodicals, &c., &c.; also, Statements of Imports and Exports Revenue, Expenditure, Trade, Population, &c., &c.

To be Corrected to August, 1870.

THE CANADA DIRECTORY for 1857-58, published by the Subscriber, contained the names of the Principal Inhabitants in 1,339 Cities, Towns and Villages in Upper and Lower Canada.—The CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY for 1870-71 will contain a short description of at least 3,500 Cities, Towns and Villages in the Dominion of Canada, and the Provinces of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, together with the names of the Professional and Business Men and of the Principal Inhabitants.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Dominion of Canada Subscribers	$12 Cy. per copy.
United States do	$16 Cy. "
Great Britain and Ireland do	£3 Stg. "
France, Germany, &c. do	£3 Stg. "

RATES OF ADVERTISING will be made known on application to the Publisher.

No Money to be paid until the Work is delivered.—This notice is given for the reason that unprincipled men have, on several occasions canvassed for, and collected moneys in advance, on account of Books which they falsely represented me as being about to publish.

Persons desirous of aiding in the Publication of the CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY for 1870-71 will please send in their Orders for SUBSCRIPTIONS and ADVERTISEMENTS to

THE LAST OF THE SARPENTS.

The serpents, as all must confess to reply
Sure, every body has heard tell of the blessed Saint Patrick, and how he drove the serpents and all manner of venomous things out of Ireland—how he bothered all creation entirely; but for all that, there was a few small serpent left who were too small for the natural eye of the country, and so thought Saint Patrick would leave him to manage the fellers, who were doing great havoc; tell at last he bethought himself, and got a strong big chest made with three bands, upon it.

The next time meeting he talked a spell to where the serpent used to keep; and the serpent who doesn't like the Saint in one least, and small blame to him for that, began to show her teeth at him like anything.

'Ohl' says Saint Patrick, says he,
'where's the use of making such a mess of work about a gentleman like myself coming to see you?—'tis a nice house I have ma to for you again the winter; for I am going to overhaul the whole a entry, nice and broad,' says he, 'and you can come and look at it wherever you please, and 'tis myself will be glad to see you.'

The serpent, hearing such smooth words, thought, that though Saint Patrick had drove all the rest of the serpents into the sea, he meant no harm to himself; so the serpent wishin fair and easy up to see him, and the beast he was speaking about. But when the serpent saw the same great beetle upon the chest, he thought it was sealed, and was for making off with himself as fast as ever he could.

'Tis a nice warm house you are,' says
Saint Patrick, 'and 'tis a good trine' I am to you.'

'I thank you kindly, Saint Patrick, for your civility,' says the serpent—' but I think it's too small it is for any reasoning it for an excuse, and away he was going.

'Too small?' says Saint Patrick,' stop,
if you please says he; 'you're out in that,
my boy, my boy—I am sure 'twill fit you completely; and I'll tell you what,' says he
'I'll bet you a gallon of porter,' says he,
'that if you'll only try and get in, there'll be plenty of room for you.'

The serpent was as thirsty as he could be with his walk, and 'twas great joy to him the thoughts of doing Saint Patrick out of the gallon of porter; so swelling himself up as big as he could, in he got into the chest, all but a little bit of his tail. 'There now,' says he, 'I've won the gallon, for you see the house is too small for me, for I cant get in my tail.' When, what does Saint Patrick do but he comes behind the great heavy lid of the chest, and, putting his two hands to it, down he slaps it with a bang like thunder. When the rogue of a serpent saw the lid coming down in west his tail like a shot, for fear of being whipped off him, and Saint Patrick began at once to bolt the nine iron bolts.

'Oh! murder! want you let me out, St.
Patrick?' says the serpent—'I've lost the bet fairly, and I'll pay you the gallon like a man.'

'Let you out, my darling?' says Saint
Patrick, 'to be sure I will, by all manner of means, but you see, I haven't time now, so you must wait till to-morrow.' And so he took the iron chest, with the serpent in it, and pitches it into the lake, there, where it is to this hour for certainty, and 'tis the serpent struggling down at the bottom that makes the waves upon it. Many is the living man, continued Picket, besides myself, has heard the serpent crying out, from within the chest under the water. 'Is it to-morrow yet?—Is it to-morrow yet?'— which, to be sure it never can be: And that's the way Saint Patrick settled the last of the serpents sir.'—Croker's Legends of Killarney.

MORE USES FOR PAPER.—Of late years the part played by paper in the manufactures of household goods has been amazingly extended. We have had paper collars and cuffs, paper waistcoats and wash-bowls, paper pails and pipes—indeed, when it comes to paper race-boats, which are successfully rowed, and even paper "calculi," as they are sometimes called, habitually trodden upon—what limits are there to this industry? But now Mr. Parr's new process for paper-making promises to carry the uses of this substance far beyond anything hitherto looked for. He compounds it of several sorts of animal and vegetable substances hitherto not employed, and these being reduced to a pulp and bleached, the completed fabric is a sort of felt, or, as it is said, something much resembling what the Japanese use for handkerchiefs, and absolutely as wide in its application as the paper. It has pliancy, flexibility, strength; it can be sewed with the needle as easily and as tightly as any of the woven fabrics which it is designed to displace. Already they have made of it tablecloths, quilts, shoes, petticoats (price 6d), and hundreds of similar articles known to domestic economy.—New York Times.

DR CHALMERS beautifully says: 'The little that I have seen in the world and known of the history of mankind teaches me to look upon their errors in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the best of my own heart that has passed and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it passed through—that brief palpitation of joy; the tears of regret; the feebleness of purpose; the snares of the world that has little charity; the desolation of the soul's sanctuary, and threatening voices within; health gone; happiness gone—I would fain leave the erring soul of my fellow-man with Him from whose hands it came.'

EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHARLEBOIS & PEAKE, Coroner P.S. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

YAMACHICHE, County of Maskinge, Province of Quebec, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the system which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my loins, and I became so weak that I could not walk, that was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I consulted medical advice, and physicians, at different times, three doctors, and apothecaries of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Canadian Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. By the time I had begun to find the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Dandelion Renovator, and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I speak only to say try the Dandelion Renovator. I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOHERTY.

Sworn to before me at Maskinge, County of Maskinge, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEBB, J. P. Co.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doherty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her assertions in the true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was deemed hopeless; and I know that after her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Dandelion Remedy. Whether may be the peculiar properties of the medicine, and thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine has any remedy been so universally relied upon for the cure of pulmonary complaints as has the Cherry Pectoral during the past few years. As the public have learned its virtues, and the wonderful cures it is daily making, even of cases supposed to be beyond the reach of medicine, it has become the staple remedy of every community, and the best antidote that can be had for those fatal diseases of the throat and lungs which destroy more lives than all other maladies combined. Nor is it in these diseases alone that the Cherry Pectoral has proved its great superiority over all other medicines. Wherever there is a cough, cold, or any affection of the throat, lungs, or chest, it will be found to afford prompt relief. Even in the most desperate cases of Consumption, where the patient is supposed to be in the last stage of the disease, the Cherry Pectoral will frequently give unexpected relief, and prolong life for months and years. Many such cases are known, and publicly recorded, in which this remedy has performed cures that were regarded as almost miraculous. Indeed, so complete is the mastery which it has obtained over the most dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs, that it has astonished the oldest inhabitants of every section where it has been employed.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For the speedy cure of Fever and Ague, and also Intermittent Fever, or Chills and Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, and indeed the whole class of diseases originating from the malarious poisons of Miasmatic districts. In the treatment of these complaints, the Ague Cure has proved itself to be a most perfect antidote. Containing neither arsenic nor mercury, it is entirely harmless upon the constitution, and may be taken with perfect safety by the most delicate child. Not only does it cure the ordinary Fever and Ague, but it counteracts the disposition to it, and thus protects the system from the future development of disease. Those who live in the midst of miasmatic exhalations, or who are obliged to visit such districts, will find in this remedy a perfect safeguard against attack. Travellers, Settlers, Soldiers, Sailors, and all exposed to malarious influences, should be provided with it. Its timely use on the first approach of the disease will save them from the dreadful consequences that will follow if they neglect to do so. Even when all other remedies have failed, this has cured the most inveterate cases, and restored the shattered victim of disease to perfect health.

PRICE, $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

BOULTBEE & LYMAN, Newcastle, General Agents for Ontario.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of feeding the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Poetry.

A FABLE.

If to be cruel not to raise the beast fallen under his burden, what excessive cruelty is it not to do for the human soul of a brother what you would do for the body of a beast.

Once, on a hot and dusty road,
A horse fell down beneath its load;
The driver cursed, the driver swore,
Till crowds were gathering, more and more.
In vain the beast strove hard to rise,—
A piteous look beamed from his eyes,
And blood and foam fell from his nose,
Beneath the brutal driver's blows.
A wealthy man was passing by,
And when the scene he did espy,
Up to the crowd he quickly ran,
And cried, "Drive! you brutal man!
The horse can't rise, take off the load,
And lead him back to your abode,
And I shall see, inhuman wretch,
Just what other loads he shall not fetch
For you, who thus have clearly shown
You don't deserve a horse to own."
The rich man went up to his store,
A trembling wretch was at the door,
And said, "Give me work," the poor man cried,
"And I will work, not beg my bread;
I once was rich, as high as you,
I'm fallen now, my friends are few;
Treat tenant brisk has thrown me down,
An arrear will help me in the town.
Give me one chance, I yet may rise,
It not, the soul and body dies;
For, oh! beneath this load of sin,
Unhelped, to rise I can't begin."
The rich man eyed him sternly o'er,
And sent him quickly from his door.
"I want," said he, "no drunkards here;
Be off, and come back if you dare;
To wags, your looks, your very face,
On human nature bring disgrace;
Be sober work, your money save,
Then wash yours if and have a shave,
Get on new clothes so, looking neat,
Some good employment you will meet."
The said church man closed the door;
The poor man crawled towards the shore.
Some heard a splash, where, none could tell,
A human soul went down to hell
The rich man loves to drive a horse,
And tell his story round the course;
"Good-hearted man," the world doth cry,—
They did not see the drunkard die.

ONE WHOSE LOAD WAS LIFTED, AND A HAND GIVEN HIM TO RIDE BY.

V.

MISS O'NEIL.

M. de Ferias, who was of the opinion that the moral instruction of children should be commenced from the cradle, had made no haste to begin the intellectual education of his granddaughter.

'The soul,' said he, 'is like the tender heart of these young trees—it needs to be supported and trained from the beginning; but we must wait, as nature does, for a certain degree of strength and of maturity before expecting any fruit. The more of gifts and happy talents this little brain gives promise of,' he added, caressing the blonde head of the child, 'the more does it require to be cared for and respected in its flower.'

Nevertheless, there came for the Marquis and the Marchioness de Ferias, when at last they thought it proper to intimate Sibylle into the mysteries of the alphabet, an hour of doubt and bitterness, which to Madame de Beaumesnil was an hour of extreme jubilation. The intelligence which had seemed so quick and so open to the world of fancy—the only world it had yet known—because, in presence of the positive science of reading most lamentably incapable. Neither tenderness nor severity could overcome the disgust for any regular application evinced by this dreamy spirit. The poor Marchioness took a world of pains for naught, and almost lost her angelic patience. She called to her aid the curate of Ferias, who likely to be more imposing. A conscientious man, and impressed with a profound respect for the family of Ferias, he applied himself to the task with religious zeal, but with no better success.

'I wears the flesh off my bones,' said he.

The time was coming when she would cause him grave vexations.

'The poor little child will be an idiot,' reported Madame de Beaumesnil. 'They have stupefied her by their ill treatment. I was sure it would be so. At five years old Clotilde could read perfectly, and could even recite fables.'

'Nothing but a miracle,' said the curate, 'can ever get us out of this predicament.' The miracle took place; not perhaps in such a way as the curate had intended, but such a miracle as it is always permitted us to hope for from the divine beneficence.—Miracles are even yet performed in the heart, and it is there that they are possible and even frequent. Sibylle knew that she was an orphan, and she knew too the sad meaning of this word; but as on the painful subject Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, fearing to present two distinct objects to her quick sensibilities, had always refused to answer the details which the cruel curiosity of the child sometimes demanded.—That her father and mother were in Heaven was all they would say. The servants had received, and executed faithfully, the order to make to all questions the same answer. It had especially been forbidden them, by one word or any sign, to direct the attention of Sibylle, who accompanied her old grandparents every Sunday to the parish mass, at last discovered, doubtless from their expression or the direction of their eyes, as they passed before the two graves, something which seemed to her peculiar; and one day, on coming out of the church, she went straight to the two tablets, inscribed with gilded letters, and turning to her nurse, who had followed her affrighted said:—

'What is it that is written there?'

'Nothing,' said the nurse.

'There are letters there,' said Sibylle, with frowning eyebrows; 'read me what they say.'

'It is in Latin, Mademoiselle.'

Sibylle slightly shrugged her shoulders and passed on; but from this day forward the good curate hardly recognized his former pupil; he rubbed his hands with delight, he congratulated himself.

"I know I should get through it," he said, "by dint of patience."

A month later, under the pretext of inquiring after the health of her professor, who had a touch of the gout, Sibylle had herself taken to the presbytery. On the way she entered the churchyard, stopped before the tombs, was quite silent for a moment, her eyes fixed upon the gilded letters, then knelt down and wept. The miracle was accomplished—Sibylle could read.

Once in possession of the elementary key to all human knowledge, Sibylle, as it often happens with minds of the temper, made use of it with an impatient ardor which thereafter needed more to be restrained and moderated than to be excited. This eager desire to learn which reached after every thing without choice or discretion, had two remarkable effects: the first was to embarrass extremely on various occasions Sibylle's humble preceptor, and the second was to force M. de Ferias to put away the key of his library. But the old Marquis had too much judgment to be contented with this common precaution. He was not much disturbed by this fermentation, on which mystic reveries and positive curiosity seemed to be mingled pell-mell together. To neglect nothing, to stifle nothing, but to disengage the confused elements which were seething in this young brain, to regulate its aspirations, to discipline its powers, and to make fruitful its chaos by introducing order, was a course of conduct to which his principles naturally led. But M. de Ferias felt that the government of an intelligence so active could no longer be entrusted to the feeble hands and to the pedagogical routine of the Abbé Renaud: he resolved to employ without delay an instructress, who, in the education of his granddaughter, should take charge of the temporal part, while her spiritual instruction would naturally be confided to the care of the priest. The Abbé was modest enough to acknowledge the propriety, and to recognize the necessity of this combination.

"The child" said he with simplicity, "shows a kind of whimsical little genius of which I am quite incapable of disentangling the skein. All that I can do, Monsieur le Marquis, is to teach her the catechism, and this," he added, sighing, "only by the grace of God."

In the selection of an instructress, M. de Ferias thought he could trust to the solicitude of his cousin the Count de Vergnes, the maternal grandfather of Sibylle, whose residence in Paris and extended relations with society would facilitate this delicate task. He wrote to the Count a serious and touching letter, explaining to him fully the disposition of his grandchild, and begging him to neglect no means of obtaining an instructress who should be worthy of such a pupil. A month afterwards, just as he was beginning to be uneasy at the silence of the Count, M. de Ferias received from him the following answer:

'MY DEAR COUSIN: By dint of diving like a pearl-diver in the Parisian Ocean, I believe that I have at last put my hand upon the desired treasure. The person does not possess a very seductive physiognomy. She has no wings, though said to be an angel. My idea of angels was quite different; but no matter, I forward her to you with this letter. Send your carriage to the station at —— for the evening train.—She has just completed, very successfully, one education, and has been recompensed rather meagerly. Your servant will know her by the following description: Miss O'Neil (Augusta-Mary), thirty years old, complexion a flaming blonde, Irish, of a very ancient noble family; speaks all languages, living and dead; limits, paints, plays on the harp, and rides on horseback. No end of excellences. A shower of kisses to Sibylle. I languish at the feet of the Marchioness.'

Such a letter, under circumstances, to his view so interesting and so important seemed to the Marquis an unpardonable inconsiderate; and although accustomed to the worldly and giddy ways which in M. de Vergnes concealed such a rare reflection and sensibility, it was not without apprehension that he went himself to the station at —— to receive the instructress whose arrival was announced in such equivocal language. The first sight of Miss O'Neil, descending from the railway-carriage, carpet-sack in hand, was far from dissipating the anxiety of the Marquis. He recognized her without difficulty, in spite of the obscurity of the deepening twilight. The identity of Miss Augusta-Mary O'Neil admitted of no question. She was a tall, thin, angular girl, walking with the precision and the stiffness of an automaton. On each side of her face, and against her high cheek-bones, long curls of a fiery red hung down like branches of willow. A summer hat of brown straw, in shape bearing a vague resemblance to an overturned milk-dish, surmounted the whole like a dome, and completed this ungraceful structure.—The heart of the Marquis died within him.

"Really," murmured he, "De Vergnes is much to blame."

But as he came nearer to the poor girl, and saw shining in her pale blue eyes a light like that which beams from the stars, so pure so clear, so tender, and yet so sad, he was at once affected and half consoled. Miss O'Neil, with the timidity due to a conscientious consciousness of her unlucky exterior, replied to the courteous compliments of the old Marquis with some awkwardness but with propriety and simple elegance. Her voice had a musical sweetness. M. de Ferias was ready to believe with M. de Vergnes that she might be an angel, even though her wings were not visible. He seated her beside him in the carriage, which took the road to Ferias, and at once proceeded to describe the character of the young maid about to be entrusted to her care. The Irish girl listened with devout attention, and without interruption, until he had completed his discourse by a brief summary of his ideas in the matter of education.

"Monsieur," then said Miss O'Neil, "I see what the child is, and I am glad to see it. Your ideas and my own are in complete accord. It is a duty, and never a danger, to develop and cultivate natural intellectual gifts—as long as it is done in such wise that the thought, of God rules over and sanctifies all."

The Marquis at this phrase drew a long breath. He nodded his head several times with a satisfied air, and a cloud of perfumed powder filled the carriage.

"My dear Miss O'Neil," he began again "I would beg of you now, if I dared, to tell me something of your history, for I feel avow to you that my cousin, De Vergnes, has given us but very slight information about you; but do not, I entreat you, Miss O'Neil, mistake the motives of my indiscretion; it is solely because of the interest you have inspired in me that I solicit this favor of your goodness.

It would be hard to tell how new and delicious a thing the affectionate curiosity of the old Marquis seemed to Miss O'Neil. Poor and absurdly plain society, it is needless to say, had not spoiled her. Always surrounded by an icy atmosphere which chilled her, always stiff, embarrassed, and nervous, like a person who is the conscious object of cool violent and ironical glances, her pride, which was just and honorable, had suffered greatly. For the first time in her life she felt herself appreciated; this charming old gentleman addressed her in a language which she had never hoped to hear, except, perhaps, in Heaven, from the lips of the elect her brethren, they who know and love no other than moral beauty and moral splendor. Screened by the darkness, she let fall from her eyelids a few tears, which she wiped away with her black silk glove, then briefly told her story—a very simple one.

The only thing upon which she laid much stress was the ancient origin of her family. She was descended from the former kings of Ireland, who were not only, in fact, she added, chiefs of clans; but one of her ancestors, Fergus the Red, found historically among the Irish chiefs whose boards Prince John Plantagenet (Miss O'Neil pronounced this name with undoubtful bitterness) had solemnly pulled at some public ceremony.

Miss O'Neil's father had bequeathed to her a pretty fortune but she had two brothers who had managed the family estates with very little prudence. Monsieur de Ferias comprehended that Miss O'Neil's fortune had been horridly consumed by the extravagance and disorderly conduct of her brothers. However, the occupation to which she had been forced to devote herself had been extremely pleasant to her, and had given her much happiness up to the day when she had been obliged to part with her pupil; but this had almost broken her heart. She had offered to remain with her in a capacity which was somewhat repugnant to her feelings, but which she thought might still be acceptable (as lady's maid, probably, poor girl), but the family had declined her offer for conventional reasons whose force she herself was willing to recognize.

'Miss Augusta,' said the Marquis, 'allow me to assure you that you need never fear in my family so painful a separation.—So long as I shall live, my dear Miss O'Neil, you shall live under my roof, and I shall be much mistaken in the sentiments of my granddaughter if she fail to honor, after I am gone, the formal recommendation which I mean to leave her in this regard.'

Miss Augusta could only murmur some indistinct thanks; but she passed again her black silk glove over her bony cheeks.

With this good understanding, Monsieur de Ferias and Miss O'Neil alighted from the carriage in the court of the chateau.—A few moments later, the Marchioness, forewarned by her husband against her first impressions, completed the delight of the Irish girl by the tender kindness of her reception.

It was late. Miss O'Neil was led with cautious steps into the chamber of Sibylle, who, beneath the white curtains, an arm under her head, and almost hidden by her silky curls, was sleeping with the grace peculiar to her charming age, even to its slumber. The nurse brought a lamp, and Miss O'Neil watched for some time the sleeping child, whose breath seemed almost suspended, while the Marquis and Marchioness leaned over her, their faces wreathed with ecstatic smiles. At a sudden movement of Sibylle, Miss O'Neil laid her finger on her lips, and withdrawing cautiously a few steps raised her mustached and beaming eyes upon the two attentive old people and said, with a tone of mystery:

'She is an archangel! I adore her!'

In her own adjoining apartment, spacious and elegant much beyond anything to which she had been accustomed, the descendant of Fergus the Red, in spite of the fatigues of the journey, remained awake the greater part of the night, gazing with emotion upon the figured tapestries which adorned the walls of her chamber; in sylvan bowers wandered shepherds in small-clothes and shepherdesses in hooped petticoats. All seemed happy, but were certainly much less so than Miss O'Neil. It is terrible to think that at the very moment in which the honest creature was taking such delighted possession of her paradise, the flaming sword which should drive her forth was already suspended over her head.

The next morning, Madame de Ferias, after a conversation with Miss O'Neil, which had increased the kind feeling her husband's words had already excited toward her, presented the instructress to her pupil. Sibylle, who possessed, to a degree seldom seen at her age, a discerning sense of harmony and beauty, at first regarded Miss O'Neil with some disquiet, and responded coldly to her advances, like a person who feels insufficiently informed by exterior circumstances and reserves his judgment.—The Marchioness left them long that they might become acquainted more easily, and went down to the parlor. She found there M. de Ferias recounting the merits of Miss O'Neil to the Abbé Renaud and to Madame de Beaumesnil, both of whom the importance the event had brought to the château early in the day.

'Well, my dear,' said the Marquis, 'what do you think of Miss O'Neil?'

'My friend,' replied the Marchioness, 'so far as I am capable of judging, she has a cultivated mind and a Christian heart.'

'You see,' said the Marquis, addressing his guests; 'you see she is a jewel, and I mean she shall be a family jewel—I have promised it to her already. It must be admitted that De Vergnes, under his appearance of levity, conceals no extraordinary tact nor infallibility of judgment. She is not handsome, that's true enough; but I am glad of it. It will be for Sibylle another lesson; we can demonstrate to her by this living example of how little value are physical advantages compared with that moral adornment which shapes to Miss O'Neil like a rich gown—I mean her nobility of feeling, her purity of soul, her cultivation of mind.'

'Her gentle virtues of character' said the good Marchioness.

'Her firm religious principles,' added the curate.

In the midst of this concerto, the door of the parlor flew violently open, and the nurse, called Madame Rose in the chateau, entered hurriedly, her face so strangely bewildered that her very eyes seemed to announce a catastrophe.

'In the name of Heaven, nurse, what is the matter?' cried the Marquis, rising.

'Monsieur le Marquis,' said Madame Rose, catching her breath with difficulty, 'she isn't a christian!'

'What? What? Miss O'Neil? Not a Christian? Impossible! You are crazy, nurse! [illegible] am amazed.'

'She isn't a Christian,' said Madame Rose, emphatically. 'And I am sure of it, because she just asked Jean if there was a Protestant minister in the neighborhood, and if she could easily go to the meeting on Sunday.'

'A Protestant!' said the Marquis, falling heavily into his chair; 'a Protestant!' Then after a pause: 'Madame Rose,' said he in a work voice, 'that will do; you may leave us.' There were some moments of perfect silence; the Marchioness exchanged with her husband some painful glances; the curate and Madame de Beaumesnil had closed their heads and turned their eyes to the ceiling with a look of consternation.—Sincere in the curate, but feigned on the part of the lady; for, in fact this bomb, which had exploded among her neighbors, only threw upon her own heart, always corroded by envy, a shower of flowers and dew.

'It must be owned,' said, at length the Marquis, with emphasis; 'it must be owned that there is no excuse for De Vergnes! Here you see the result of his Persian frivolity and indifference! Such an important point! and he doesn't even inquire about it! He might have sent me a Jewess or a Mahometan! just as likely! Just like De Vergnes! As for me, how could I have foreseen—how could I have imagined such negligence? How could an idea so absurd, so wild, ever have passed through my mind? I knew she was Irish, and I supposed, of course, certainly there's some particular faculty in the case. But for that matter, I shall be instructing no one here, when I say that the nurse, in decreeing to Miss O'Neil the title of Christian, spoke like an ignorant, foolish peasant. Miss O'Neil is not a Catholic, that is true, and, unfortunately, that is quite enough; but aside from the deplorable error of her creed she is none the less a woman worthy of interest, worthy of consideration and to tell the truth, I feel, with respect to her, terribly embarrassed. What is to be done?'

'It seems to me difficult, Monsieur le Marquis,' the curate said timidly, 'it seems difficult to allow a Protestant instructress near Mademoiselle Sibylle, especially at a time when the child is preparing for her first communion.'

'O Lord!' cried Madame de Beaumesnil in a transport of indignation, which was soon converted into concealed hilarity.

'It is impossible,' said the Marquis; 'I don't entertain the idea for an instant, Madame, I beg you to believe; but my heart is sick, I confess to you, for I cannot give up without bitterness the opportunity of allowing my granddaughter to profit by the talents, and—I will say it, whatever may be thought—by the virtues of this person; and besides all this, I tremble at the thought of the wound I must inflict upon a heart so delicate and so sensitive as that of Miss O'Neil seems to me to be. I have myself too, by the imprudence of my language—but I was carried away by my feelings—indeed in making the mistake more painful. Yes, I would at this moment give my right hand if I could spare to her and spare to myself also the explanation and the separation which now seem necessary.'

'It is very hard, certainly,' said the Marchioness; 'but if you know it to be necessary.'

'The sooner, the better,' brutally interrupted Madame de Beaumesnil.

'I beg your pardon, Madame,' quickly rejoined the Marquis; 'you certainly do not pretend that I ought to drive out this young woman like a thief, no matter though she be a Protestant?'

There was another pause, broken by the Marchioness, who said gently:

'I was going to say, my friend that if you desire it, I will myself acquaint Miss O'Neil with your intentions.'

'No, my dear, no. You always wish to take all our troubles upon yourself. It is not just. In Miss O'Neil alone now, do you know?'

'Sibylle is with her.'

'Let the child be called.'

Lewis and Sam D——, a couple of real down of Long Island, who loved rum and hated snakes, some years ago went down to the saltmarsh to mow. They hung their scythes and were about commencing work, when Lewis proposed to Sam that they have a drink of the quart furnished for the occasion. Sam agreed, of course, and it was a hot day, and they concluded to rest a while under the shade of a tree, and then take another drink in order to get ready on. The bottle had been passed two or three times, when Sam said to Lewis:—'Let's drink the dreaded off up, and we won't be hankering after it.' It was a bargain, and between the two the balance was soon disposed of. A pause ensued.—Lewis rose to his feet, threw his scythe over his shoulder, declaring: 'I'll be darned if I will mow without rum.' 'Darned if I will either,' said Sam, and with that they trudged home without cutting a swarth.

The North-west Territories.

The Rev. Thomas Baldwin lately arrived in Red River, has sent the following to the Ingersoll Chronicle:—No doubt many of your readers have a desire to know something about the journey which the Rev. Dr. Davidson, and myself have taken to this point. We made the trip in two weeks to a minute, which time includes stoppages of one hour at Detroit, three hours at Chicago, half a day at St. Paul, and half a day at St. Cloud. The weather was wet and cold during the first days, but on the whole favourable to our journey. The country north of Chicago in Illinois for the first twenty five miles appeared cold, and many crops are killed with constant rains. The south part of the State looks much better. The State of Wisconsin is more undulating and wooded, still, for hundreds of miles, the scarcity of wood for fencing, building, and fuel must be apparent to any one who passes over those fine prairies.

The State of Minnesota possessed several days of our travel. It is a tract of hundreds of miles of arable land, more undulating than any other country we saw in our whole journey. Its many lakes and rivers are fringed with trees, and adjacent of heavy timber of seven or eight miles in width, runs south-east of the rising town of Alexandria. The American Government understand how to settle a country. The manner of dispensing of forty acres of wood land to families who are actual settlers on the prairies for several miles out, and the fixing of the homestead free grant system, at the very expense of the survey, attended with exemption from taxation for five years, must be matters of great weight to families who are seeking for homes in the far west. The American people appear not to think more about making a railroad than of making a common waggon road in Minnesota, and but for their rearguards the country could never be settled as it is in many places.

On Friday the 25th we crossed the Red River at Georgetown, and pitched our tent on the open prairie of the territory of Dacotah. To the west it is one boundless field of grass. Our road lies along the banks of the famous Red River, which can be traced for many miles in the distance by the trees which grow upon its banks, varying from a few scattered trees to a half mile in depth. Pembina, the frontier city, is built two miles south of the boundary line between the United States and the British north-west territories, at the point near the confluence of the Pembina and Red Rivers. The city consists of four small log houses, thatched with straw and a very adhesive clay which is found at the foot of the banks of the said rivers. At this point, or about two miles to the north we found near the traders' road the boundary post, marked 'U. S.' on the south, on the east and west '49°,' and on the north 'H. B. Co.' With a good Canadian and royal pencil I wrote the word Canada over the initials of the Hudson Bay Company, while Dr. Davidson wrote his name, after which we took off our hats and sent out three hearty cheers for the Queen, perhaps the first of the kind that ever broke the quiet solitudes of this far west, which cheers were followed by our national anthem which we sang with full hearts upon our own Canadian soil. From this point we travelled a distance of 130 miles and saw not the dwelling of man. We met three men and seven oxen and carts. It feels lonely, approaching the unattainable to travel all day long with your horizon bounded by one sheet of green without variation, and pitch your tent on this broad fair to rest and sleep only to awake to spend the day as before. To say that this whole western world is 'gone to grass' might be called a vulgar expression, but in many respects is a truth.

The first settlements on the banks of the Red River do not strike one as favorable. The country is settled by French Roman Catholic half-breeds. Their houses are small, built of small popular logs. The roofs are thatched with prairie hay and clay. They have not inclosed more than from two to five acres, and this they farm in a most careless manner. The land is most excellent, and we saw some places where wheat was growing as lux Reciprocity Rumours.

Where there is smoke there is always some fire. So we say of the visit of the Hon. John Rose, Minister of Finance, to the American capital; where there was so much talk of a new Reciprocity Treaty. That subject doubtless had something to do with the visit. We are not blind to the fact that our "Chancellor of the Exchequer" may have had other reasons for posting off to Washington—that, indeed, it is asserted he visited "the city of magnificent distance" in connection with an arbitration of an international character, in which he acts as the representative of the Imperial Government. But there is much a thing as killing two birds with one stone. And we strongly incline to the opinion that it will yet appear that Reciprocity was not the least of the reasons for Mr. Rose's visit to Washington. This view is strengthened by the rumour that the Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald will shortly proceed to conclude negociations for a new treaty with the American Cabinet. This report may, or may not, be true—but there can be little doubt of this, that public opinion across the lines is daily becoming more favorable to the establishment of freer commercial relations than now exist. There are good reasons, too, for believing that Mr. Secretary Fish is favourable to the adoption of a more liberal policy, and would like to signalize his administration by the enactment of a wise and statesmanlike Treaty of Commerce between the two countries. Other members of the Cabinet are said to share his views. But it is questionable if the Senate would agree to anything like a fair treaty in its present temper, and the people of Canada would sanction nothing which was not just and impartial to us. We have now fully gauged what effect the want of Reciprocity produces. The evil is comparatively little felt. No country, generally, has seldom, if ever, advanced more rapidly than since that treaty was abrogated, and we can continue to do so. But we recognize the fact that without any restrictions the volume of international trade would swell to larger dimensions, and that both the American and Canadian people would be benifitted thereby. And so we hope that Madame Rumour is not astray when she asserts that the Hon. Mr. Rose, Mr. Secretary Fish, and Mr. Thornton, the British Minister, talked over not only the propriety of negociating a new treaty, but those of the principal points which it ought to embrace. As it is now certain Mr. Rose is about to retire from the Cabinet, to take up his residence in London as a banker, Sir John A. Macdonal would be a suitable member of the Government to continue the negotiations, and it is to be hoped his rumoured appointment is not premature. It is quite possible that nothing may come out of these Reciprocity rumours after all; but as we said at the beginning of this article, where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire!—Trade Review.

After the Smoke.

The Free Press of July 15, says:—"Though the Hon. Donald McDonald did not meet with a favorable reception at the meeting of the shareholders of Royal Canadian Bank, put it will appear, upon reflection, that his action has had the effect of preserving to the stockholders the money they had subscribed. For, had the affairs of the Bank gone on in the way they had commenced to go, it is quite evident that issues of an various a kind would have come about as to have reduced the assets to a very low point. As to the origin of the dispute among the directors that led to the action taken by Mr. McDonald, the public may care very little. But the charges made were grave enough, and the shareholders marked their sense of them by sending the majority of the Directors to the right about. Their very action in this particular is Mr. McDonald's justification, even though in the best of the moment the shareholders, finding their stock depreciated for the time being, vented their rage against the author of the exposure. If Mr. McDonald's statement had not been in accordance with fact, the result would have been to censure him and sustain the majority of the direction. The shareholders, however, gladly availed themselves of the charges made to dismiss the old Directors, one or two excepted, Mr. McDonald also sharing in their displeasure. It is a dangerous matter for a single individual to place himself in antagonism to a number of colleagues, for, although he have right over so much on his side, he will find a coalition of interests and force against him which it will be difficult to withstand. Some may question the discretion of Mr. McDonald as to the mode he adopted to awaken the shareholders to the true state of affairs; but that it resulted in arresting a policy that would, in the end, have proved disastrous to the property of the constituents of the Bank there is very little doubt of.

TERRIBLE AFFAIR IN ST CATHERINES.—On Tuesday afternoon a terrible encounter took place in St. Catherines, on board the schooner Welland, between the captain and mate of the vessel. It appears that the captain, whose name is Cockburn, and who had been indulging pretty freely in liquor, went into the cabin about 5 o'clock to enjoy his evening repast. While seated at the table, the mate, whose name is Norton, came in, and was immediately ordered by the captain to take off his hat. The mate replied that he would not remove his hat at the command of anybody, or words to that effect. This at once raised the captain's ire, and he forthwith knocked a hole at Mr. Norton. The two men clinched and a slight scuffle ensued, without injury to either. The mate then sat down to his supper, when the cowardly captain stole up behind him, got his arm around Norton's neck, and held him fast in that position, savagely bit a piece out of his lower lip. The piece was entirely severed as though it had been done with a sharp knife, leaving a ghastly wound. The mate quickly freed himself from the deadly embrace of his chief, and ran to procure a weapon. He soon returned, armed with a revolver, and finding the door locked, fired several shots through it. Three of the bullets took effect—the captain being hit twice in the cheek and once in the leg. The mate then got an axe, smashed in the door, and gave Captain Cockburn a tremendous and well-deserved castigation, but did not make any further use of deadly weapons. The mate afterwards had his injuries attended to by Dr. Goodman, who skilfully restored the piece of flesh to the man's lip by sewing it on, and is sanguine that the operation may prove successful. The captain and mate were subsequently arrested.

We have a letter from a gentleman who has examined the "petrified human foot," recently mentioned in the Brockville Monitor as being in the possession of a person at Arnprior, and who says it is nothing but a water-worn piece of limestone, having a general similarity to a moccasined foot. Every one who has observed the fantastic shape in which this stone is found will not wonder at the mistaking it for almost any rounded object in nature.—Citizen.

INTENDED CLERICAL SYNOD IN IRELAND.—The postponement of the Irish Church for another year was supported, and perhaps prepared, by some who were not aware of the scheme for which it was chiefly intended to make provision. We are informed, on good authority, that the heads of the Irish Church have resolved to convene a Clerical Synod or Convocation in Ireland, from which the laity are to be entirely excluded. In the event of the bill becoming law, it is intended that this Clerical Synod shall be called on to give a secundatal and ecclesiastical sanction to the appropriations of the property of the existing Irish Church Establishment to the purposes directed by Parliament; so that by this device the property might not lose its character as a dondaud, and the Free Irish Church should receive it, not as the gift of a secular Parliament, but as coming under the sanction of a Clerical Synod claiming Divine authority. It is easy to trace the authorship of this scheme, which is the same as that which has been applied to Convocation in England with reference to the alterations in the subscription enthe.

It has been said that the postponement of the disestablishment, if irrevocably determined on, would be a very doubtful boon to the Irish Church. But if there is to be a Clerical Synod, the time for convening such a body and carrying out its decisions, would render it almost absolutely necessary to delay for another year.—Record.

THE SLAVERY OF FASHION.—The Daily News declares that "until women, pretty women, and a good many of them, acquire more independence of character and go 'gamost, this servile imitation of part and confident folly will continue. Some fashionable Parisian modiste, aided by some disreputable patroness, starts a new style of costume, and it is at once adopted by the French capital, soon to invade ours in turn. How is it likely that it should be resisted when all that we can show against it is some other fashion equally preposterous, which everybody is abusing, and of which everybody is growing tired? Just as there is nothing beautiful in fashions, so one there be nothing permanent. When every woman has arrived at that pitch of good sense that abetted by those who love her and those whom she loves, she gets herself up in the manner most suited to her particular bright, form, color, expression, and occupations and sticks to that, irrespective of all other considerations, the question we have been considering will be solved. Till then one nail will but drive out another, and on folly's head will follies accumulate."

EXPLOSION OF NITRO-GLYCERINE.—On the 28th ult., a frightful accident occurred near Carnarvon. A shipload of nitro-glycerine had just arrived from Liverpool and was conveyed ashore in loads. It was taken from the pier in boats. At about 6 p. m., a terrible explosion occurred. the horses drawing the cart, and three men were blown to atoms, and fragments of the cart wheels were thrown to a distance. In the village, nearly a quarter of a mile away, great injury was done. Roofs were knocked down, and windows were broken in At the spot where the carts were, two round holes, six feet deep and 7 feet in diameter, were made in the ground. The railway station, 40 yards off, was blown to pieces. The whole valley to the foot of Snowden, suffered a tremendous shock, and damage was done in every part of it. A very great shock was felt at Carnarvon and Bangor, and for miles around; portions of human remains were found 40 yards from the spot where the explosion occurred.—Three quarrymen who were 300 yard off were severely injured.—English Paper.

THE St. Catharines Constitutional is very severe upon the American speakers at the Owego Free banquet; and justly so, for taking the advantage to force Annexation sentiments upon their visitors. Our contemporary says: It seemed as if the great object of the Owegonans was to get a large number of influential Canadians together, for the purpose of presenting to them in glowing colors the beauties of annexation to the model Republic. We think it was in very bad taste to introduce such a subject as this at such a time, when the visitors were in a measure at the mercy of those who were entertaining them, and when they could not boldly resent the covert attempt at estranging them from their allegiance to the parent country, without being liable to the charge of rudeness. Possibly there may have been no intention on the part of the Owego people to use the occasion for proselyting purposes, and perhaps the reference to annexation was merely accidental; but however it occurred the impropriety of its introduction under the circumstances must be apparent to all; and we hope they will never again attempt to abuse hospitality in a similar way.

GONE.—The Oshawa Vindicator says:—"Certain rumors as to irregularities in the management of the Bowmanville branch of the Royal Canadian Bank, has turned out to be too true. It was stated at the annual meeting in Toronto that the losses there were only about $100, they now prove to be about $40,000. The saddest feature about it is that these losses are the result of fraud on the part of the late manager, Mr. R. Young. It appears that he has changed figures and forged names, and filled in blank notes which had been left with him for renewal to many times larger an amount than was intended, for the purpose of obtaining funds which he has used in grain speculations. Several farmers in Darlington will suffer considerably through the increased amounts which they left signed in blank for renewal purposes. We have not a list of the names. Mr. Young is supposed to be in the States."

The pastor of St. Patrick's church, Washington City, read from his pulpit on Sabbath lately, a charge from the Plenary Council recently held in Baltimore, directing the withdrawal of all Roman Catholic children from the public schools and the formation of schools of their own, alleging as the reason for the change the association of their children with those of other religious denominations in the occasion of far the greatest proportion of losses which their Church sustains in this country.

Two lads, Charles Doyle and William Jas. Neal, robbed the Journal office, St. Catharines, the other day of $60 in silver. On Monday Judge Lawder sentenced them to three years each in the Penetanguishene Reformatory.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of its peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestory. Dr. J. C Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble lab rers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1869.

In the daily Globe of Monday there is a very scathing article, condemnatory of Wall Street speculation by the managing director of the Bank of Montreal, Mr. King. It alleges that he has ventured into gambling on gold to the no small risk of the Bank, no less than $2,500,000 to $3,500,000 being ventured at once. It is said that his speculation this time has met with no reverse, but it is urged that the gold speculation in Wall street is not safe nor legitimate bank business, and may in an hour ruin the speculator. The following shows the risk incurred:

THE LAST NEW YORK DEFALCATION.—The defalcation in the Security Insurance Company of New York creates great surprise, as Mr. Ballard, the defaulter, has always held a high position among insurance men, having filled the position of Secretary in both the New York Board of Fire Underwriters and the National Board, and being an active man in religious matters. He has been Secretary of the company ever since November, 1866. For a long time before that he was Secretary of the Importer's and Trader's Insurance Company. The whole amount of the defalcation, $63,000, has gone to meet losses incurred by Wall street speculations. The Evening Post says the defalcation was managed in the most ingenious manner, and could have been accomplished only by an expert book-keeper. The company usually has a surplus of about $200,000, part of which is used to make call loans. The company never charges more than seven per cent., and receives only government bonds as collateral security. The collaterals were used by Mr Ballard for purposes of speculation. The great confidence reposed in Mr. Ballard by the officers of the company aided him in concealing the embezzlement. His crime was discovered while he was absent attending the Convention of Young Men's Christian Associations in Portland.—Boston paper.

Mr. King has been a very successful Canadian banker with the Dominion Government, where he had it all his own way, and consequently, could make his own terms; but Wall street brokers and bankers may learn to out-manoeuvre him. There is wisdom in confining bankers to legitimate bank business. In gold speculations a million may be lost in a day, and the chances are two to one in that direction.

The bank scheme of Mr. Galt paved the way for this kind of work, by enabling the bank to withdraw its bullion from the country, it not having to provide for the redemption of bills, and it will be well for the Dominion if a worse scheme than Mr. Galt's does not yet be forced upon the people, as Mr. Rose has not yet resigned entirely, indeed may not. His scheme would inevitably lead to an irredeemable paper currency which would ruin the trade of the whole country. The mismanagement of a few bank directors may hurt a few stockholders, but that is their own matter; but the establishment of government legal-tender-bills without provisions for redemption would end in the destruction of all foreign trade which requires a specie basis.

THOSE LETTERS.

We give the minutes of proceedings of a meeting of Catholics, held in Town, in reference to the letters that have appeared anent that charity grant, and J. W. Fitzgerald's letters. It is but reasonable that both sides should have a chance of self-defence, and as a doubt of the genuineness of the Catholic writers is set forth in the report, we take this opportunity of asserting that all the letters on this vexed question, purporting to come from Catholics, are genuine, written by men who all their life long have been and still are Roman Catholics, and we further more assure our readers that in the seat of the friends of Mr. Fitzgerald, they are seeming innocent persons. The real cause of this ado is the bigotry of some of the citizens of our good county, who are willing to take all but will give nothing in return. If the zealots would allow the people quietly to do their own business, there would be no expression of division of sentiment, although human nature is such that it does now and has always and will exist. Many men of many minds may be a school boy's phrase, but it is a truism nevertheless In reference to ferreting out those Catholics, now, in all common sense, why? Prudence would say let them alone. If thine enemy "hunger, feed him," says a good book, not ferret him out. If a man gives reason to doubt his Catholicism by speaking against priests, there are not a few of doubtful faith even in this country.

DR. STEWART.—This eminent Oculist and Aurist, whose advertisement appears in our columns, is now at Calsey's Hotel, in this Town, where he will remain another week. The Dr. devotes special attention to the treatment of diseases of the the Eye and Ear. Certificates from the Hon. Billa Flint, Belleville, Prof. Wilson, Cobourg, and the Rev. Mr. Wardrope, Ottawa, speak very favorably of Dr. Stewart's treatment. And as he will remain only till Friday 13th inst. All desirous of consulting him would do well to do so at an early date, so as to have the advantage of further advice, if required.

The editor of the Irish Canadian feels indignant at our remarks anent the silence of Father McMahon. We can assure him that the way just as well waste his breath in some other way. As to our supposed sympathies with Parson Lumsden, all we can say is that the Canadian editor must be much mistaken. We had no false sympathy with Lumsden as we have with the rampant rancour against Britain that appears in the Irish Canadian from week to week. With the editor of the Irish Canadian assert that there is not a "hostile feeling to everything British" in the minds of Irishmen, (not Irishmen) on Canadian soil? If he does we will point to the ravings of the learned editor of the Irish Canadian as proof to the contrary. We have neither time nor inclination to follow this classic editor of the Canadian through all the meanderings of his slimy ebullitions. We merely ask him to read the last sentence of his philippic and satisfy himself of its purity. Should not the Canadian journalist, who unstintingly refers to the "sickly sations of British connexion," be considered of doubtful loyalty? and what shall be said of those readers who swallow the trash weekly? In regard to the release of McMahon there is only one opinion in the country, except with those of his co-religionists, and that is, that lenience with commuted too soon: not a few would have been pleased had Lumsden been in with him awhile. His folly of joining a band of cut-throats deserved a few years in Penitentiary. The Cornwall, Freeholder, a thick and thin supporter of coalition quoad, cannot relish the McMahon pill. It says:—

"The administration of public affairs is often made to assume a strange medley of expediency and propriety. It must be hard indeed to observe the right at all times, when reasons so frivolous and so insufficient lead to the perpetration of an irregularity of such magnitude as the release of the convict, McMahon. To describe public feeling in a state of surprise at the announcement of McMahon's pardon would perhaps be an exaggeration. But the public ought to be surprised, and doubtless would be, were public feeling not blunted, not seared so as to be incapable of surprise, by the succession of irregularities—executive, administrative, and legislative, which have been witnessed within the last five years, and for which the two great political parties amongst us are responsible. We do not wonder at the present Government resorting to means unlawful, to secure a lengthened tenure of office, when its leader can hold ready on his tongue's end the conclusive answer given with great effect on a certain memorable occasion: 'Let him who is without sin among you cast the first stone.' But it is remarkable that one so astute as the Minister of Justice should be found trimming, at such cost, for popularity in a quarter which is more conspicuous for the fickleness of its attachments than for any other quality. The release of McMahon, in the absence of more substantial reasons for its execution, has all the features of a vulgar exchange of concession to national sympathies and prejudices for political support.

After referring to John A's published reasons for recommending McMahon's discharge. He further says:—

Elsewhere in his somewhat lengthy report on the subject, the Minister of Justice says:

"The case of McMahon, in itself presents no redeeming features, and, judged on its own merits, there could be no reason for extending to him any exercise of the royal mercy."

A case that on its own merits presents no redeeming features and affords no reason for the exercise of the royal clemency is precisely the case that should undergo the penalty which the law has assigned it. McMahon, it will be remembered, was sentenced with others, all for the same offence. If his case presented no redeeming features, then his associates were in no worse position than he, and equally entitled with him to the exercise in their behalf of that mercy which has been extended to him alone—Until a general pardon had been declared we could not see any justification of the course pursued by the Minister of Justice in the case of McMahon—a case which, in his own words, "presents no redeeming features."

The fact that "there were two clergymen, one a Protestant, the other a Catholic, the former found guilty, the latter acquitted," was not of the merits of the case. That McMahon was a clergyman only aggravated his offence; and the circumstance that Lumsden, a Protestant, was acquitted does not in the least degree affect the guilt of McMahon, a Catholic, who was found guilty. Justice may have failed in the case of Lumsden; but no reason is thereby afforded for its suspension in the case of McMahon.

A majority of the jurors in both cases may have been Protestants, but unless they were Orangemen, which they were not, there was no reason to believe that the religion of the prisoner would have the slightest weight upon their minds. Upon this point the report of the Ministers of Justice is not in good taste. The report further states that "it is especially advisable that any contrary impression" (that is any impression of the partial administration of justice) "should be removed from the minds of the Irish Roman Catholics of Canada." We think there is no ground for the existence of any such impression. We do not believe that such an impression exists in any well-informed mind. There is therefore no reason why special effort should be made to remove it. It ought to be an insult to the intelligence of the leading Irish Catholics of this country to be told that they are jealous of the administration of justice—that they cannot trust their Protestant fellow citizens in the jury box. And the implication of the Minister of Justice, that to appease this feeling of jealousy, of suspicion, and to secure Protestant good faith, it was necessary to release another Barabbas, should meet prompt and emphatic repudiation.

The second and principal reason of the Minister of Justice for the release of McMahon, that "Her Majesty's Government and Canada owe a debt of gratitude to the whole body of the Roman Catholic clergy" is probably one of the empiest reasons of all.—Like other good subjects, they did their duty; and we are sure, whatever other class a may claim, it can never be urged on behalf of the clergy that they deserve special concessions, special consideration, for doing their duty. It is certainly anything but complimentary to the Irish Roman Catholic clergy to put them in a position of having received a quid pro quo for their efforts to suppress Fenianism—to place them where their enemies will be enabled to say of them that they erected a reward for their loyalty.

This obeisance to national distinctions and sectarian jealousy is the meanest characteristic of our Government. When will it rise above that sort of thing? When shall we abandon our wretched pelting, jobbing, higgling practice of striving to please everybody, and take our stand on the broad and dignified ground that our administration is based upon the eternal principle of right.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.—We have received the first number of a little monthly, of the above title. It is published by F. E. Grafton, Montreal, and Edited by the Rev. L. A. K. Dickson, London, Ontario. Its object is "to set forth the Glorious Gospel in its simplicity and Divine fulness and freeness," without reference to sect or the Church. The selections of piety in this first number are very interesting, and pointed. Sinners are referred to the Savior, in very affectionate and suitable terms. The Messenger has our best wishes for its success in the good work. It costs 50 cents per annum, to be ordered from Mr. Grafton, Montreal.

Indignation Meeting of Catholics.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Roman Catholics of the Parish of Peterboro' was held on the 2nd inst., to protest against the aspersions thrown out in certain letters which from time to time have appeared in the Peterboro Examiner, and especially against one over the nom de plume of "Catholic No. 3," in the Examiner of the 29th ult., reflecting on the reputation of the Very Rev. Oliver Kelly, Vicar-General. Mr. James Ryan was called to the chair, and Mr. J. B. Dunn appointed Secretary. The chairman, in a few prefatory remarks, explained the object of the meeting, when the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

It was proposed by Mr. John Moloney, and seconded by Mr. Thomas Burk,—That having read in the last issue of the Peterboro Examiner a letter over the signature of "Catholic No. 3," and in previous numbers of that journal letters of a similar nature, which reflect most grossly and unwarrantably on the reputation of our parish priest, Vicar-General Kelly, the undersigned Catholics of this mission embrace this, the first opportunity, to ignore and repudiate in the most emphatic and indignant terms, this so called Catholic and his emanations; and if there be such a person living amongst us (which we doubt) we call on him in the name of an outraged congregation to make himself known, and thereby relieve other Catholics from the foul stigma which his silence must attach to them.—Carried.

Mr. Moloney, in proposing the above resolution, observed, in warm and well-timed remarks, that in view of the abusive and un-Catholic letters which have lately appeared in the Examiner newspaper of Peterboro, disparaging to the reputation of our Rev. Pastor, it was time that the Catholics of this mission—and he felt sure he was speaking the sentiments of every one of them—it was time they should assume the duty of wiping out from amongst them all connexion with the author of these letters, and of making an effort to maintain intact and unsullied the fair fame of the Catholic congregation of Peterboro.

The next resolution was proposed by Mr. Michael Redmond, and seconded by Mr. John Sullivan,—That in the opinion of this meeting our Rev. Pastor, Father Kelly, has, by his solicitude and zeal for the education of his flock and his anxiety for their spiritual and temporal welfare, earned for himself our warmest and most hearty approval and support, we hereby endorse our Rev. Pastor in all the acts which have brought his name into question, and sustain him against all vile and malignant slanders that have been levelled against him.—Carried.

Mr. Redmond, in rising to address the meeting, said he was happy to propose this resolution, and that he fully endorsed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Moloney. He would go further and say that no effort should be spared to ferret out this evil spirit who seeks to sow amongst us the seeds of dissention and discord, and that it behooves at length the Catholics of Peterboro to disclaim all participation in, and connexion with, the author of these vile and calumnious letters. (hear, hear.)

Mr. Sullivan, in seconding the above resolution, said it afforded him great pleasure to be present, not to vindicate the character of Father Kelly, for thank God he did not require that, but to raise his voice against the person who calls himself a Catholic, yet reviles and endeavours to blacken the character of his priest, a thing that to any one familiar with the attachment that has always existed everywhere between priest and people, has something of the brand of inconsistency, not to say of spuriousness, on its face, (applause.)

It was finally resolved, on motion of Mr. Lawder, seconded by Mr. Tierney,—That copies of the foregoing resolutions, with the appended signatures, be sent to the Peterboro Examiner and Review for insertion in their next issue.—Carried.

The meeting was then dissolved. The following is the list that subscribed to the foregoing resolutions, on behalf of the parish:

Peterboro, August 2, 1869.

We are called upon to record the decease of a very old and respected inhabitant of the Township of Otonabee—John Haslitt, Esq., at the advanced age of 92 years. Deceased was a native of the County Armagh, Ireland. He, at one time, was actively engaged in the linen drapery, before that business failed in his native country; but afterwards he settled down on his farm, attending to the more quiet, but no less respectable, duties of husbandry. He was a very active and energetic man, and highly respected in the neighborhood where he was born and resided for over 70 years of his life. In a loyalty where, by many, attachment to Britain and British principles was considered almost a crime—deserving of murder, Mr. Haslitt was the respected and acknowledged leader of those who were not afraid to declare their adhesion to the crown of Great Britain. His son, the Rev. Wm. Haslitt, having died shortly after his entering on the active duties of a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and another son, Mr. John Haslitt, now of Otonabee, having returned home to visit his parents after a sojourn in Canada, he induced the whole family to come to this country, which they did about 22 years ago. They settled in the Township of Otonabee, except Mr. T. G. Haslitt, who is so well known in Peterboro for many years. The remains of Mr. Haslitt, who had indeed seen a good old age, were followed to their last resting place, on the 1st instant, by a very large concourse of friends and acquaintances.

The body of Hall, who was reported to be on the spree, at Colborne, while the good people of Coburg were searching for him in the harbour, was found, and an inquest held by Coroner Brady. Verdict, no doubt, "found drowned." The result of intemperance which has had a rich harvest lately.

SCHOOL BOARD.—There was no meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening. No quorum.

A report of the Teachers' Association will be given next week.

Royal College of Dental Surgeons.

REGULAR MEETING OF THE BOARD.

FRIDAY, July 23, 1869.

The Board of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario continued its sittings this afternoon.

The following gentlemen having passed successful examinations were granted the degree of L. D. S. and a license to practice dentistry in the Province of Ontario, providing they comply with the established rules of the board:—S. Smiley, S. B. Welch, J. R. Irish, E. Bonsall, W. C. Webster, W. M. Foster, G. S. Thomas, J. W. Coyne, W. C. Jewell, F. Frank.

The Finance Committee presented their report, showing a balance on hand of $1,119 98. The Committee also recommended the payment of several amounts.

The Secretary reported the names of about fifty persons who were practising in the Province without license, and recommended the licentiates in each locality to give information to the proper persons, in order that the offenders may be prosecuted. The suggestion was accepted; and it was hoped that each licentiate would perform his duty in every case.

Mr. O'Donnell moved, seconded by Mr. Wood, "That application be made to the Legislature of Ontario, at its next session, (in accordance with a motion given yesterday) to add a clause to the Act respecting dentistry, empowering the Board to confer the degree of Fellow of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario on dentists entitled to the same by merit, living out of the Province and being subjects of Her Majesty; also to amend clause 19 of the Act, so that the penalty shall be for the first offence $50, second and subsequent offences $100, or in default six month's imprisonment; and that the President, Mr. Callender, and the mover and seconder be a committee to make further amendments thought necessary, and report to this Board to-morrow morning."—Carried.

SATURDAY FORENOON.

The Committee appointed to report on the amendments thought necessary in the Act, reported as follows:—"That in clause 3 the word twelve be substituted by seven, so that seven members constitute the Board; instead of twelve; that clause 11 be amended so as to read "every subsequent election shall be held on the Monday following the first Tuesday in the month of May in every second year." In clause 11 the word one be substituted for two, and to have the sitting to commence on the first Tuesday in May in each year; that clause 14 be amended so 11 pointing May in the place of January and July, and make one sitting only in each year. They also recommend that the following clause be added:—"For services performed by any licentiate within this Province the same privileges conferred upon physicians and surgeons by the various Acts relating to the practice of medicine and surgery in this Province, be afforded them."

The report was received and adopted.

Mr O'Donnell moved, seconded by Mr. Meacham, "That this Board appoint the following persons to prosecute parties practising dentistry without license in their respective localities:—Toronto, T. J. Patterson; Hamilton, C. A. Sadlier; Kingston, C B. Price; Brockville, Joseph Deacon; Ottawa W. H Walker; Cobourg, Wm. Kerr; Perth, Mr. Hall; Pembroke, H. H. Loucks; Cornwall, J. Bergin; Picton, Allison & Gibson; Belleville, L. H. Henderson; Peterboro, J. Burnham; Seaforth, J. M. Benson; Goderich, Ira Lewis; London, Mr. Greyden; Guelph, D. Gutherie; Galt, C. A. Durand; Newmarket, A. Boultbee; Prescott, McNeil Clarke; Brantford, the County Attorney; Woodstock and Stratford, the County Attorneys."—Carried.

It was also moved that in towns where no persons were appointed, the licentiate forward the name of the person he wished to the Secretary, who would put him on the list.

It was also moved that into consideration the advisability of opening a College, reported in substance as follows: "That they have given the subject every consideration, and have concluded that a College should be opened immediately, and that the following gentlemen be appointed Professors, and that they have power to select or recommend all Jones, viz: F. G. Callender, operative dentistry; J. O'Donnell, mechanical dentistry; J. O'Donnell, Institutes of dentistry. That the chairs of anatomy, physiology, chemistry and materia medica be given to gentlemen connected with some of the Universities of the city. Arrangements to be made hereafter, and that $100 be the fee for the course; matriculation fee $5 extra.

(Signed.) B. W. DAY,
Chairman."

The report was received, and the Board went into Committee of the Whole on the same.

Mr. Callender stated that he had not expected the position offered him, neither did he desire it, and it was only at the almost unanimous desire and urgent solicitation of the Board that he accepted it.

Mr. O'Donnell stated that with respect to mechanical dentistry he occupied the same position, and it was only accepted by him because after the arguments used he could not help but accept it.

Mr. R. G. Trotter was appointed an adjunct professor of operative dentistry.

Mr. W. Myers was appointed an adjunct professor of mechanical dentistry.

The Committee rose and reported, after which the report was adopted.

Mr. Meacham moved, seconded by Mr. Lalonde,—"That the thanks of this Board are due, and hereby tendered, to the managers of the Queen's Hotel for the uniform kindness extended to the members during this and former sessions, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the Secretary to Mr. McGaw."—Carried.

Necessary funds were voted the Professors to furnish the College; also instructions were given them, to open it some time during the month of October next.

After the transaction of other preliminary business the Board adjourned.

ANNORNHAM.—There will be a meeting of the Council on Monday next, 9th instant, at the usual hour. There was no quroum on Monday evening.

We learn by a Chicago paper that the Hon. Isaac Buchanan, of the firm of Buchanan, Harris & Co., of Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton, Canada, and of Liverpool and Glasgow, in Great Britain, who visited China and Japan lately, with the view of enlarging the trade of the house with these countries, returned by way of the Pacific Railroad, in order to satisfy himself as to the advantages of this route in the transport of commodities from the East, in comparison with the Cape of Good Hope and Suez Canal routes. So impressed was he in favor of the Pacific route, that he intends making use of it by establishing a branch of his partile house in Chicago, as a distributing centre, for the sale of Chinese and Japanese products.—Witness.

ELOPEMENT.—A young man named Samuel Willis, eloped with his brother's wife on the 16th inst., and wended their way as far as West Moreton, she taking her youngest child, leaving three small ones in care of the forsaken husband. She shortly became homesick, however, and deserted her new companion. On her way home she overspoke her husband, and came home agreeably with him. Samuel returned also on the next day after her arrival, and still remains about the neighborhood. They were absent only two days. Whisker, it appears, is a very common thing amongst them, which will probably account for such disgraceful conduct.

BOLD WORDS BY A ROMISH PRIEST.—Father Hyacinth, of Paris, one of the most influential Roman Catholic priests in France, a few days ago delivered an address before the Peace Society, in which, among other bold and noteworthy utterances, he said: "There are three religions in this world, the Jewish, the Catholic, and the Protestant, and all three are equal in the eyes of God." A correspondent writes that "thunders of applause" greeted the eloquent priest as he then declared against the infallible assumptions of his Church.

THE ARMENIAN OUTRAGES IN IRELAND.—L'Orne, July 20th.—To the Board of Lords in the course of the opening, the Marquis of Clanricarde called attention to the ineffectiveness of the present and magisterial arrangements in Ireland for the prevention and detection of crime. He read the out-cast recurrence of agrarian outrages in that island was a disgrace to the country, and the impunity with which murder and outrage were committed showed that the Executive were powerless and sometime powerful. He urged the necessity of having a more efficient constabulary. Lord Dufferin and Her Majesty's Government deplored the recent outrages in Ireland, and was ready to consider any proposal for their repression. It was now considering the desirability of establishing a secret police force. He added that no measure had been neglected to bring the perpetrators of outrage to punishment.

The American journals are busy representing that there is a terrible "Fenian scare" in Canada just now. This they infer from the fact that orders have been given to get the gunboats on the Lakes into trim. There is really no ground for any alarm, although it has been stated, but cannot be shown, that the Fenians contemplate another raid. The calling out of the gunboats is simply for the purpose of keeping up their efficiency, and has no connection with anything the Fenians may do, as nobody believes they will ever be able to get together again for the purpose of making a descent upon this country.—Spectator.

Travelers come in contact occasionally with strange bed-fellows. The Cornwall Freeholder, in years that are past, did brave duty in denouncing Mr. Cayley as an incompetent Receiver-General. His political journey now brings him in contact with the same incompetent, and the Freeholder devotes three columns to prove that he has "swallowed the lark," and is confident that Cayley is just the man for the office of Auditor of Ontario. This is really humiliating, but it all comes out of "Patent Combinations."—Recorder.

It appears that Louis Napoleon finds it very hard to resign any portion of real power into the hands of the representatives of the people. He is willing to make a great appearance of doing so, but thus is all. He has prorogued the Chamber of Deputies, and is going to consult with the Senate, consisting of his own nominees, as to what he shall concede,—the reforms proposed for discussion by that body not being very comprehensive. The Lower House and France may, however, have something to say on the subject.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholera, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no Works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine; well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, associated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, fainting, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away entirely the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 12

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstructions from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, one taining Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or thin secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural tissue and thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, restoring the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Lord Lovell and Lil Velocipede.

(A new Version.)

Lord Lovell he stood by the garden gate
With his shining velocipede,
And whispered kind things to Lady Bet,
Who wished for his Christmas speed.

"Speed will you to-day, Lord Lovell?" she said,
"Yes, fair lady to-day," he said;
"Then will you to-morrow be my bride?"
"I may," the fair maid replied.

Then Lady Bell cried, in fanatic chorus,
"What a monster my Lord is, indeed,
To ride three days, from his loving young wife,
On that horrid velocipede!"

Lord Lovell returned, broken hearted and sore,
Broken-hearted, sad, broken-kneed;
For he struck on a post, quickly gave up the ghost,
And smashed his velocipede!

MORAL.

Remember the fate Lord Lovell has met,
Let this be your warning and creed:
Stay at home with your wife, for the sum of your life,
And beware of the velocipede.

VELOCIPEDES.

WHAT JOHN BELLINGS THINKS OF THEM.

The velocipede is a wise instrumentality, with two wheels, placed consecutively, one behind before the other, and also other wheel to hold the first wide.

They revolve on their own, similar to the world, and have already received the 1st-ft colon.

They are about as easy to ride as a grindstun.

They will undoubtedly do away with the use of steem, and in fifty years from now will be the only means of intercourse known to man.

The ladies will use them just as soon as they can settle the question, to what manner they shall occupy them.

Just now there is a dispute, whether they shall occupy both sides of the velocipead at once, or whether they shall remain on one side or them at once, similar to the sentinel custom of occupying the mule animal, the hoss.

It is to be hoped that this matter will be laid before the 'womin's right committee,' and that nothing or a one-sided nature should be allowed to hinder a woman from filling her destiny.

I believe in throwing everything wide open to a fair competition between the two sexes, velocipead, as well as medicin, and may the best man win!

It might look a little odd (for the first day or two) to see the ladies divided by a velocipead, but, in the grate advance or prices and morals, which are now at work in the world, nobody but a phool or fogy would object to it—if we are ever to reach perfectshun in the world we all or us got to have a fair chance at both sides of things.

I hav examined the scientific principals or the velocipead, and find that it is just as simple as bread and milk.

The rotaty conveniences which exists in ex-cumbentary gratitudhus, pekting in conjunction with the simple law of attraction, preserves the moshun or the velocipead within its proper and natural rayshun.

Nothing can be more simple and yet more beautiful than this law in science; the philosophers are as well acquainted with it as they are with the 10 commandments, and perhaps better.

There is one improvement in the velocipead which I am looking anxiously forward to, and that is to stand still till you mount them.

Nothing is more annoying than a hobit they have got into or lying down on their sides if you undertake to endorse one or them standing still.

I hav seen the noble animal the hoss, when they wanted to getrid or their rider, lay down sideways and roll over, and kick up their heels. This is a trick which the velocipead has stole from the hoss without giving him credit for it.

If my memory serves me right, the moshun of the velocipead is purely a crank moshun, similar to grindstun, and is produced the same way that the scissor grinder stirs up his macheen.

I hav thought if the pioneer wheel or the velocipead could be made out or whetstone, it might be used while in progress, for sharpening razors and carving knives, and then become a means or grace as well as beauty, but this would take the poetry all out or it and degrade it down to the level of usefulness.

If you want tew take the starch out or a novelty, just put it to work at something useful, it becomes indegent at once.

The moshun or the velocipead is produced bi the action of the leggs (or rather or the pedal extremetys, the word legge is altogether too obscene for every man to use, whoever expects tew run for the legislature, or be caught in the society or refined people).

This fact is sufficiently explained to the latin skollar, who understands that 'velocipede' is manufactured out or 2 forrin words 'velox' and pedes' which vulgarly means 'pedal swiftness.' If a man don't understand latin now a days, he hant hardly enjoy the conversashun or a hod carrier.

The velocipead is not a modern discovery; long before the days or Adam and Eve was they in use.

The heathen gods had them, with one wheel to them, and history tells us on a grate expert, one Union, who got into the side or one or them and traveled all over the Olympian country.

I have seen them mixed with only one wheel on them, these had two beadles, which protruded out behind, and were propelled by a shave moshun.

These were first discovered in Ireland and I think are called 'wheel-barrows,' or sumthing that sounds like that.

This is all I know about the velocipead.

Nothing can be done well that is done in a hurry, consekently deslored a certain pompous passenger in a railway carriage one morning a few weeks ago. How about catching a train? asked a wag at his elbow. The oracle was silenced.

Cheap matrimony.—A country clergyman says he has married but one couple in a year, and that they paid him nothing, stayed to dinner as it was a rainy day, and then borrowed his umbrella when they left, which he has never seen since.

Has your husband got naturalized? inquired an energetic politician of the New York Fourteenth Ward of a recent female. Get natural agen, was the response in an indignant tone, yes, bagarra, and natural bath, too!

A sharp old gentleman, travelling out West got a seat beside a wife in a crowded car by requesting the young man who sat by her to "please watch that woman while he went into another car, as she had fits."

An old author quaintly remarks: Arguments with ladies. In spinning yarns among silks and satins a man is sure to be worsted and twisted; and when a man is worsted and twisted he may consider himself wound up.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to Truth, Christianity, Temperance, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the maintenance and moral elevation and advancement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall stand in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and cheapest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly reliable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of defeat." It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

The News Department will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world.

The Religious Department will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

The Literary Department will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

In Politics it will be strictly independent, seeking an favor from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not entitle it to any favor from either party, but will secure for it the confidence of both.

In social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of Temperance in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

Advertising and Subscribing will deserve special attention.

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

How Grandma Rests.

"I wish that grandma would rest," said a little boy who stood at a window looking down the road.

"What would you do with him?" asked his brother.

"Ride him," said the first; "I'd do."

"All day long?"

"Yes, from breakfast to night."

"You'd have him for two rides sometimes," said the brother.

"Why would I? You'd have no right in him if he were mine."

"Father would make you let me have him part of the time."

"No, he wouldn't."

"My child-ren," said the mother, who had been listening, and now saw that they were beginning to get angry with each other, and all for nothing, "let me tell you of a quarrel between two boys, no larger nor older than you are, that I read about the other day. They were going along a road, talking together in a pleasant way, when one of them said—

"I wish I had all the chickens I see in the world."

"The other said, 'And I wish I had all the cattle in the world.'

"What would you do then?" asked his friend.

"Why, I would turn them into your pasture land."

"No you wouldn't," was the reply.

"Yes I would."

"But I wouldn't let you."

"I wouldn't ask you."

"I should."

"You shan't."

"I will;" and with that they seized and pommeled each other, like two silly, wicked boys, as they were."

The children laughed, but their mother said:

"You see in what trifles quarrels often begin. Were you any wiser than these boys in your half angry talk about an imaginary pony? If I had not been here, who knows but you might have been as silly and wicked as they were."—Museum.

The man who wrote "I'll no Sweet Home" never had a home.—Exchange.

No, of course not. All his folks at home says he didn't. Nobody who writes about anything ever has it. If a man is out of anything, he immediately goes and writes about it. No one writes so many "headings" as the man who is out of his head.

The author of "Take me back to Switzerland" never was to Switzerland. The nearest he ever came to it was sitting in the William Tell saloon eating Schweitzer kase—Asw why, that was the best he could do.

"Mother, I've Come Home to Die," hasn't spoken to the old woman for years—wouldn't go near the house; besides, he is one of that class of spiritualists who don't believe they ever will die. His health was never better. His mother is putting out a mother-in-law, and she is dead asphow.

There is the author of "Old Oaken Bucket," to; there wasn't a bucket on the whole farm, water being drawn with a tin pail and a cistern pole.

"If I had but a Thousand a year" stated privately to his friends that he would be perfectly contented with half that sum, as he was doing chores for his board and six months' schooling in the winter.

"Sloth of Ocean" is a humbug. The celebrated quot represents himself as wondering, one summer's eve, with neatest thought on a pensive shore, was raised in the interior of Pennsylvania, and never was ten miles from home in his life. "Gathered shells," did he?—egg shells, back of his mother's kitchen.

The man who wrote "Song of the Shirt," hadn't a shirt to his back, wearing a wampus for the most part.

"Off in the Stilly Night" used to get on the spree, and make the stilly night howl till daybreak.

The author of "We met by chance" knew very well it was all arranged beforehand. He had been weeks contriving it, and she admired his contrivance.

The author of "I Know a Bank," &c., didn't know where he could get his notes discounted. The only check he ever held was a white "check" on a freshcask. He never had a red check in his life.

"What are the Wild Waves saying?" knew very well that they were reproaching him for running away from Long Branch without paying his hotel bill.

"Hear me, Norma" was deaf and dumb. He could not make his pa hear, nor ma.

The author of "Rain upon the Roof" always slept in the basement, except when he slept out of doors.

"Let me Kiss him for his mother" got mad because his mother wouldn't have him, and whipped her little boy within an inch of his life.

"I Dreamt I dwelt in Marble halls" used to cheat at marbles when a boy, and his dreams was a horrid nightmare, brought on by remorse at the recollection of fraudulent marble hauls.

"I'm saddest when I Sing," was tickled almost to death when invited to.

"Happy be thy Dreams" a la benzine whiskey. You can fancy what kind of "dreams" were produced.—Cincinnati Times.

A countryman, walking along one of the streets of the city, found his progress stopped by a close barricade of lumber. "What is that for?" he said to a person in the street. "Oh, that's to stop the cholera." "Ah, I have often heard of the board of health, but I never saw one before."

At a medical examination, a young aspirant for a physician's diploma was asked: "where does mortification cause?" "When you propose and are rejected," was the reply that greeted the amazed questioner.

The boy who, when asked to what trade he would wish to be brought up, replied, I will be a trotter, because ever since papa has been a trotter, we have had pudding for dinner, was a wise child in his generation.

Women are not so much greater talkers than men after all. We frequently hear of a woman who will talk a man blind; but it must be recollected that a man once "jawed" a great many Philistines to death.

A lady in Paris, impatient at hearing nothing but French spoken day after day, exclaimed one morning on hearing a cock crow: At last I hear somebody who speaks English.

Make yourself a good man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world.

Yarker, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, and physicians, at different times, three doctored and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonean Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have [illegible] of the Shoshonean Remedy and [illegible] pills and I am entirely [illegible] I never expected to get better, [illegible] tried the medicine as a sort of [illegible] Then case of mine was not a [illegible] known to all my neighbors and [illegible] to any one affected as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonean Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

Mary Ann Doolittle.

Sworn to before me at Madoc County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doolittle for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her sister was dreadful hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonean Remedy. [illegible] this thing is certain, that is her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This preparation has attained unbounded celebrity in curing all diseases originating in impurity of the blood. Its effects upon the system are powerful and searching. By expelling the foul humors which breed and develop disease, it purifies and enriches the blood, and thus implants the seeds of health in every part of the body. Hence, when taken as directed by the following symptoms, it will prove invaluable in curing them: Scrofula, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sores, Boils, Blotches, Tumors, Tumors in the Throat, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Female Weaknesses, Suppressions, Irregularities, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Diseases of the Bladder, Gravel, Diseases of the Womb, Uterine Diseases, Leucorrhœa, Sterility, Barrenness, Impotency, Diseases of the Prostate Gland, Pains in the Back, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Mercurial Diseases, Mercury in the Bones, Blood Poisoning, Ulcers on the Tongue, Throat, or other parts of the body, Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Bilious Fever, Typhus Fever, Scarlet Fever, Yellow Fever, Canker, Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Hoarseness, Pain in the Side, Breast and Lungs, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Headache, Piles, Habitual Costiveness, Dropsy, Worms of all kinds, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Nausea at the Stomach, Sick Headache, Diseases of the Kidneys, Affections of the Heart, Nervousness, Debility, and Nervous Prostration.

Sarsaparilla or Pretended Blood Purifiers may be sold by the thousand bottles, and extol as they may by their partisans, but the days of imposition and deception are passing away. Hundreds of certificates, many of them from our most reliable citizens, are constantly being published, attesting the wonderful cures performed by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Such a remedy must be known, and when known, it will be used. Hence the enormous sale it has obtained, and the unparalleled cures it has effected. Other preparations may be had at less money, but the afflicted should remember that August Flower, Dandelion, Wild Cherry, Sarsaparilla, Extract of Roots, Barks, &c., are usually mere decoctions, weak in curative power, and cannot be relied on. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the concentrated extract of the choicest remedial roots, barks, &c., that can be obtained, and is the most powerful and effectual blood purifier that can be made. Its cures are the wonder of every community, and the public should not be deceived by unprincipled druggists who tell you they have something "just as good" as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, because they make more profit on the sale of it. Ask for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and take no other.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally acceptable to mankind. Being sugar coated, they are pleasant to take, and are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic. Prevention is better than cure. By purifying the blood and stimulating the vital organs into healthful action, they expel the seeds of disease which are lurking in the system, and thus check complaints in their forming stage. Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills speedily cure:

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dysentery or Bloody Flux, Foul Stomach, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Colic, Costiveness or Constipation, Piles, Worms, Erysipelas, Eruptions of the Skin, Scrofula or King's Evil, Dropsy, Suppression of Urine, Retention of Urine, Irritability, Want of Nervous Energy, Sinking Fits, Sick Stomach, Female Complaints, Hysterics, Tumors, Ulcers, Cancers, Canker, Liver Complaint, and Diseases of the Kidneys, and all derangements of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Blood, or Nervous System.

Sufferers from any of these complaints may rest assured that by a fair trial of these Pills, a perfect cure will be effected. Their sugar coating preserves them perfectly fresh in any climate, and they may be taken with safety by any person at any time. Being purely vegetable, they do not contain mercury, or any other mineral substance, and no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the blood, which they purify and cleanse from the impurities which cause disease. Hence a few doses will expel disease which has become fixed, and cure the complaint. They also act powerfully on the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first cause of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:

For Suppression of Intemperance, Headache, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dysentery or Bloody Flux, Foul Stomach, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Colic, Costiveness or Constipation, Piles, Worms, Erysipelas, Eruptions of the Skin, Scrofula or King's Evil, Dropsy, Suppression of Urine, Retention of Urine, Irritability, Want of Nervous Energy, Sinking Fits, Sick Stomach, Female Complaints, Hysterics, Tumors, Ulcers, Cancers, Canker, Liver Complaint, and Diseases of the Kidneys, and all derangements of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Blood, or Nervous System.

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dysentery or Bloody Flux, Foul Stomach, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Colic, Costiveness or Constipation, Piles, Worms, Erysipelas, Eruptions of the Skin, Scrofula or King's Evil, Dropsy, Suppression of Urine, Retention of Urine, Irritability, Want of Nervous Energy, Sinking Fits, Sick Stomach, Female Complaints, Hysterics, Tumors, Ulcers, Cancers, Canker, Liver Complaint, and Diseases of the Kidneys, and all derangements of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Blood, or Nervous System.

For Dysentery or Bloody Flux, but one dose is generally required.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Bilious Fever, Bilious Colic, Pain in the Side, Jaundice, Dyspepsia or Sour Stomach, Dullness, Drowsiness or Grogy Sickness, Nausea, Loss of Appetite, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Liver, and Indigestion, these pills should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Bloody Flux, but one dose is generally required.

For Fever and Ague, or Intermittent Fever, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Fits of Shaking, Chilliness succeeded by Heat, and Pain in the Head, Back and Limbs, they should be continuously taken according to the directions, as they will soon cure the poison in the blood and purify the whole system. With such things these complaints cannot exist.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Tic Doloureux, Sciatica or Lumbago, Pain in the Back, Kidneys and Loins, they should be continuously taken, according to the directions, as they will purify the blood, which is the cause of the complaint, and thus remove the disease.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to put the whole system into a healthy action, when the water will disappear, and the cure will be certain.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the worst cases of Dyspepsia or Indigestion.

As a mild purgative, they are the best medicine ever used, as they do not gripe or sicken the patient, but produce the desired effect by stimulating the stomach and bowels into healthy action, thereby purifying the blood, and invigorating the system. Hence in all cases requiring a purgative medicine, these Pills are the best to be employed. One who feels miserably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills produces him four times better, from their thorough cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Poetry.

ACROSS THE RIVER.

When for me the billows roar
I'm'ro the other river,
And I stand upon the shore
Of the strange Forever,
Shall I miss the loved and known?
Shall I vainly seek mine own?

Can the hands that make us here
Know parted Immortal,
Drop away like filings rare,
At life's leave portal?
What is broken below
Must forever live and grow.

Be who on your earthly path
Ride to help each other,
When the well-Beloved hath Crossed over the River
Will not clasp the dear to love
Closer, when we meet above.

Therefore do not dread to go
O'er the Silent River;
Death, thy hastening oar I know;
Bear me, thy Life-giver
Through the waters to the shore,
Where mine own have gone before.

MISS O'NEIL.

CHAPTER V.—CONTINUED.

Poor Miss O'Neil, when she was left alone with Sibylle after the departure of the Marchioness, had read without difficulty in the eyes of her pupil the unfavorable impression she had produced. Instead of seeking to overcome the antipathy by an appearance attentions or caresses, she did not even kiss Sibylle, though her desire was strong; but smiling upon her as sweetly as she could, she led her into her chamber, under the pretext, always pleasing to children, of desiring her aid in the unpacking her trunks. Miss O'Neil began by exposing to the light her humble wardrobe, which she laid carefully away in a closet. During this part of the operation, which was not very long, Sibylle remained standing in the middle of the room, her hands crossed behind her back, with a thoughtful face, contemplating in advance and with some dislike the movements of the busy Miss O'Neil, who seemed to her to be taking a deal of pains about a very small matter; but her pretty features relaxed and were lighted up with the liveliest interest when she saw coming from the trunk Miss O'Neil's bachaumon, then her palette, pencils, and easel, and finally a half dozen oil paintings—her own work. The child's questions now began fast and eager, but they were suddenly brought to a stop by a vision more splendid and more mysterious still; this was a harp that the Irish girl was disengaging from its case, and when, having placed the instrument upright upon its gilded base, she drew from it some chords of a dreamy air, the entire room of Sibylle for this wonderful stranger knew no bounds.

'You will teach me all you know, Miss O'Neil?'

'Certainly, my dear, every thing.'

'I shall know, like you, the names of all the flowers?'

'Of all the flowers.'

'I shall play on this beautiful instrument like the angels?'

'Like the angels.'

'And I shall paint pictures like yours?'

'Certainly, and better than mine, I hope.'

'I don't think that are be possible, Miss O'Neil, for they are splendid.'

And to show Miss O'Neil her respectful admiration, Sibylle took pains to render her all the little services which the occasion called for. She aided her as well as she could in arranging her clothes about the chamber; and when she hung up the pictures, Sibylle, mounted on a chair, handed her the nails. These pictures, it may be said parenthetically, without being so splendid as they appeared to Sibylle, were not altogether without merit, a merit chiefly of sentiment and color, but they were open to the criticism of a certain monotony of composition. Almost all of them, in fact, represented the same subject, with very slight variations, as was shown, moreover, by their titles, which Miss O'Neil had modestly judged prudent to put on the frames: 'Moonrise on a Lake' (by Miss O'Neil); 'The Lake Moonlight Effect' (by Miss O'Neil), etc.

The Irish girl having finished this task, with the aid of her efficient little friend, took from the bottom of her chest a last picture, carefully enveloped in an oilcloth cover.

'This one, my child,' said Miss O'Neil 'is not by me; it is the last souvenir of the young lady who before you was my only pupil. She worked secretly at this picture, the poor child, for the whole month before my departure, and when she gave it to me, begged me not to uncover it until I should have arrived at my destination. So it is not without emotion, my child, that I take it from its envelope."

The cover was detached with a trembling hand. The picture upon which Miss O'Neil fixed her eager look represented an apple-green lake, lighted flamingly by a monstrous moon, and in the middle of the lake, floating on a cradle like that of Moses, an infant, whose features, grossly caricatured, bore a grotesque resemblance to those of Miss O'Neil. On the frame was inscribed: 'Both of Miss O'Neil upon a lake. Moonlight effect." Miss O'Neil's pupil, a young person of roguish humor, it would seem, had thought it very ingenious, very amusing, and very amiable to leave, as a farewell gift to her instructress, this piquant allusion to her pastoral predilections. Miss O'Neil unfortunately was not of the same mind with her pupil, for she burst into tears and fell sobbing into a chair.

'Oh!' said she, 'how cruel! It is true then. I have tried not to believe it. She has no heart. Ah! how I suffer! You can't understand, my poor child,' continued she, pressing with superb Sibylle's hands, who did not indeed understand, but looked at her with sympathizing emotion. 'You can't understand; but listen. I will explain to you: This young girl, whom I have reared, saved, for, entranced for ten years like a cherished flower—for ten years day and night, she was my life, my ideal my passion. Not to leave her, I refused to become the servant of her servant and the servant of her children. Her last thought, her last word in a mockery, a cruelty, an insult! You cannot know what I suffer, my child—you cannot know it unless—but! Think that I am alone in the world, more alone than any one else, because I am plain and homely, and that this condemns me to be always alone, without affection, without husband, without children! And I would have been such a good mother, Sibylle, such a tender mother! She knows it well that unhappy girl, and nevertheless she loved her more than her mother ever loved her. And see, she breaks my heart.'

The poor girl hid her face in her hands.

'Do not weep, Miss O'Neil,' said Sibylle, trying to take her hands. 'You won't be alone any more now. My mother is in heaven and you must take her place. Will you?'

'Dear, dear child,' said Miss O'Neil, sobbing.

'We'll never leave each other; will we, Miss O'Neil?'

'No, never.'

'What is your name, Miss O'Neil?'

'Auguste-Mary,' murmured Miss O'Neil, through her tears.

'Then, Auguste-Mary, we'll never leave each other, never?'

Miss O'Neil could no longer restrain herself; she raised the child in her arms, pressed her convulsively to her heart, and overwhelmed her with tears and kisses.

The nurse found them in this position.

'Mademoiselle is wanted in the parlor,' said she in a dry tone.

Sibylle followed the nurse, but not without sending from the doorway a last kiss to her friend.

'Your eyes are red, my darling. What has been the matter?' said the Marquis, on seeing Sibylle enter.

'I have been crying with Miss O'Neil. Her pupil, the other one, has played her a wicked trick, and she has been very sad about it; but I console her by promising to be her daughter and never to leave her.'

'Excellent!' said the Marquis; 'this was all that was lacking! You must give up that idea, my dear child; an unforeseen circumstance obliges us to discharge Miss O'Neil.'

'You won't do that, grandfather, I beseech you. She would die of it. Think how she is alone in the world, and how she is plain and homely. You won't do it. Besides I love her with all my heart, and I think I should die too.'

'Perfect! Better and better!' said the Marquis. 'I am as sorry as you are, my dear,' continued he, 'but unfortunately we cannot hesitate. We have just been informed that Miss O'Neil belongs to the Protestant religion—a bad and false religion.'

'I can't believe that Miss O'Neil's religion is bad, grandfather. You may be sure that isn't true. Her heart is good, I know, and, besides she plays on the harp like Saint Cecilia.'

'No matter about the harp,' said M. de Ferias rather impatiently. 'I repeat, and you must believe me, that Miss O'Neil has the misfortune to live without the pale of our religion, the only true and good religion.'

'Well, then, you must teach it to her, grandfather. I am sure she will be grateful to you. The curate must teach her. Won't you, dear curate?'

The curate moved uncomfortably in his chair.

'Ah! if only that could be hoped for,' murmured the Marchioness.

'Besides,' went on Sibylle, who had thrown both arms around her grandfather's neck, 'besides, she will see so well, if she lives with you that your religion is the best and that there can't be a better one in the world. She will see it so well, grandfather, I know she will.'

'Hush, hush,' murmured the poor Marquis, casting a timid look at the curate.

'God sometimes, Monsieur le Marquis,' said the curate, sighing and smiling, 'speaks his truth by the mouth of babes you know.'

The Marquis clutched at this means of escape.

'Do not insist, curate,' said he; 'you see my weakness for this unhappy person. Another word, and I keep her.'

'We might at least,' said the curate, 'try for a little while.'

'She will stay! she will stay!' cried Sibylle. 'Thank you, curate; thank you, grandfather.'

And she bounded out of the room.

They called after her, but she was already in the arms of Miss O'Neil, who thus learned all at once her danger and her safety from the sweet lips of this seraph whose wings had protected her.

VI.

SIBYLLE WITHOUT THE PALE OF THE CHURCH.

But the generous decision of Monsieur de Ferias, with respect to Miss O'Neil, at once spread through the country, was commented on by the double tongue of Madame de Beaumesnil, and gained, for the most part, but little honor for the judgment of the old Marquis, or for that of his archpolice, the curate. And it must be acknowledged that the public, which takes no account of details, and judges every thing from an absolute standpoint, was agreeable in thinking peculiar and irregular, at least, the act which was now submitted to its adjudication.

Monsieur de Ferais himself, after his first burst of enthusiasm had passed, could not help feeling some solicitude under the responsibility which he had assumed in giving to his granddaughter a heretical instructress.

As for the curate, in addition to public censure, and the alarms of his own conscience he had the vexation of receiving on the occasion the compliments of the justice-of-the-peace for the county, an old man without religious faith, who looked up to Voltaire as a God, and upon himself as his prophet.

The Abbe Renaud was going to the chateau two or three days after the arrival of Miss O'Neil, when, on the road, he had to submit to the equivocal praises of this Voltairian magistrate. He kept on his way, his head bent toward the ground, absorbed if not with God to help him, and we must neglect no means, you and I, my worthy friend, which may enable us to accomplish, with honor to ourselves, the delicate task upon which we have entered—that of preserving for Sibylle the sound and varied education which Miss O'Neil seems so capable of giving her, and, at the same time, of protecting for the child in all its integrity the faith of her fathers.'

In order to accomplish with greater certainty this double object, although two years were still to pass before the time fixed upon for Sibylle's first communion, it was agreed that the Abbe Renaud should commence on that very day a series of conferences, with the object of establishing upon an immovable foundation the orthodoxy of Mademoiselle de Ferias. Concurrently, Miss O'Neil would proceed, without danger, it was to be hoped, with the intellectual and moral education of Sibylle-Anne. Miss O'Neil would comply faithfully—M. de Ferias did not for an instant doubt—with the request, already made to her, that she would refrain from treating religious questions with her pupil, except in so far as they were questions of general morality. But if—for all chances must be considered—Miss O'Neil, yielding to the ardor for proselyting which distinguished her sect, and grievously disappointing the hopes of Monsieur de Ferias, should take it into her head some fine day to produce a Bible from her pocket and engage in polemics, would not the Abbe Renaud be at hand, with watchful and suspicious eye, ready to ratify the first appearances of Miss O'Neil's defection?

Monsieur de Ferias added to these precautions that of attending regularly for some time upon the lessons of the Irish girl, or the Marchioness would take his place; but he soon abandoned this surveillance, which seemed to him both useless and an indignity, the more he was able to appreciate, in the intimacy of family life, the scrupulously honest character of Miss O'Neil.

'Really,' said the Marquis, 'one might as well expect to see the delicate ermine wallowing in filthy mire, like the vile tenant of a sty, as to fear, on the part of Auguste-Mary the shadow of a dishonorable action.'

Both the Marchioness and the curate shared in this conviction. These three honest people, now freed from any conscientious scruples, could enjoy with unalloyed satisfaction the rapid advances which the rare talents of Sibylle enabled her to make when directed by the magical wand of Miss O'Neil. This quick intelligence leapt indeed toward the light with an ardor which would have been not without danger if it had not been tempered and guided by a sure taste and a prudent method; but Miss O'Neil was quite equal to her task.

'By urging her a little I could make a prodigy of her,' said she to the Marquis, 'but I prefer to restrain her zeal to make of her an elegant and noble woman. And I shall not deserve much credit; for this little head, with its golden hair, is like a nest full of eager birds—I have only to permit them to fly.'

Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, enchanted with the zeal and the progress of their grand-daughter, were not less pleased with the agreeable change in her character, which dated from the day when her thoughts had begun to be occupied by regular and positive studies. Although still a remarkably grave and serious girl, Sibylle had lost her taste for those confused reveries to which she used to abandon herself with such singular pleasure, and which gave always to her countenance a look of melancholy quite foreign to her age. Her clear, girlish laughter, fresh as the sound of a forest brook, now more often awoke the echoes of the old corridors. She even allowed at times, in the intimacy of the family, a jesting temper and a fondness for burlesque. These sudden bursts of jollity contrasted strongly, and not ungracefully, with the habitually grave expression of Sibylle's countenance.

The trait of her character, if it had not been tempered by a great deal of native kindness, might, perhaps, have degenerated into a sentiment, for Sibylle, a keen and quick witted child, despite her discreet and tranquil eyes, had the talent of perceiving with a quick sagacity the little pedantries and foibles of those she knew. The ridiculous was as quickly apprehended by her pure taste as a discord by an acute ear.

Hardly had she begun to handle a pencil when the trait showed itself in lively drawings but comically expressive sketches. Monsieur de Ferias was once obliged to scold her with some severity, a propos of a genre picture in which the chaste moustaches of Madame de Beaumesnil and the Roman nose of the Chevalier Theodore had assumed unjustifiable proportions.

Madame de Beaumesnil, although ignorant of the incident, shrank but slightly, it may be supposed, in the joy which the success of Miss O'Neil's teaching had brought to the chateau of Ferias. Not but that she was truly delighted, if she might be believed, that the poor had shown her patience at fault; but really there were people better than they deserved. Besides, no good deed was ever strained by bad means, and, after all, the last word wasn't spoken yet.

'And you'll see, curate, some day or other, something will happen. I don't know what it will be, but something will take down those Ferrases' pride; for, after all, God is just, and what justice would there be in permitting such ill-assorted obstinacy, such indiscreet charity to be rewarded? As for you, curate, I don't blame you. Your motives were pure enough, I know. You hoped to convert this wretched creature; but between ourselves, your hopes have gone down the stream long ago. Eh, curate, haven't they?'

The curate assented. With the rare instinct of malice, Madame de Beaumesnil had laid her finger upon the open wound of this honest heart. It had been with deep bitterness that the Abbe Renaud had been forced to renounce the glorious dream that had for a moment beguiled him, wherein he had seen himself crowning Miss O'Neil with a catechumen's veil; but two or three conversations with the Irish girl had sufficed to reveal in her a developed knowledge and a firmness of principles with which his modesty had declined a contest.

Monsieur de Ferias had confirmed the opinion of Madame de Beaumesnil, saying to them with politeness that there was no occasion for hate, that it was better to let matters restore a little, and that Miss O'Neil was not a person of ordinary character. This last phrase appeared to mean in M. Ferias' thought that the curate's character was not extraordinary.

But this worthy man, free from all the illusions, with respect to Miss O'Neil, which had at first flattered him, applied himself with more industry than ever to that part of Sibylle's education with which he was charged. On this side, at least, he met with consolations. He had limited the object of his lessons during the first year, to the teaching of sacred history, reserving for the second year the doctrinal instruction of the catechism. Now, the Oriental grandeur of the Bible and its touching legends, the early ages of Christianity, their martyrs and their saints, impressed the imagination of Sibylle and awoke in her a religious fervor which little by little took the place of the vague poesy of her infancy. It was no longer golden-robed fairies, magic castles, and princely hunters that she evoked from the forest solitudes, but in their stead, austere Thebaide, pale hermits, and saintly shepherdesses; and, above all, that mysterious and imposing God whose power and goodness, shining forth on every side and in all the scenes of nature, budding with the grass, thundering with the tempest and glittering with the stars, disturbed her thoughts and charmed her heart.

The religious enthusiasm of Sibylle, although generally for the curate and her grandparents a source of satisfaction and a delicious subject of conversation, sometimes caused them much embarrassment by the strange forms which it assumed. One day it had been necessary to severely scold her, because, when walking in the avenue in frosty weather, she had thought it sublime to deprive herself of her cloak to the advantage of a little beggar-girl, and had taken a severe cold in consequence. Another time she was kneeling at her prayers upon the vowels of a pair of spurs by way of imitating the mat rites of the saints of the deserts. But it was not difficult to rectify a judgment naturally so correct as Sibylle's, and a few sensible words soon got the better of the excess of zeal. It even happened more than once that Monsieur de Ferias had occasion for surprise at the elevation and purity which marked the transports of this budding piety. About a year, after the arrival of Miss O'Neil, the old Marquis, always up with the dawn, was breathing at the window the wholesome air of a fine April morning, when he perceived Sibylle walking alone toward the park.

'Where can Sibylle be going so early in the morning, my dear?' asked Monsieur de Ferias, turning toward the Marchioness.—'I didn't think she was out of bed, and here she is out of doors. She seems to avoid being seen, too. What has she in that basket?'

'I don't know, my friend, what she is plotting,' said the Marchioness; 'but she has had several meetings with Jacques Feray within a few days. Yesterday she shut herself up in her chamber for two hours, and this morning she has borrowed my perfume-burner. I don't know any thing more.'

'We must follow her, my dear,' said the Marquis.

Monsieur and Madame de Ferias had no difficulty in discovering, upon the well-smoothed gravel of the paths about the chateau, the traces of Sibylle's steps, and this slight trail led them, after a walk of some minutes, to the edge of a clearing which occupied the highest point of the park. This site was famed throughout the country, and justly. Enclosed by a wall of magnificent trees, it opened toward sunset upon a series of gentle declivities formed by two ranges of green hills. Between the parallel ridges of these hills, which touched each other at the base, a vast ravine extended to the sea, forming at the horizon a triangular bay filled by the ocean sometimes with radiant azure, sometimes with a silver sheen. In the centre of the clearing a colossal and time-worn oak arose in solitary grandeur. It covered with its shade one of those rare monuments of Celtic worship, found upon the Norman coast, an enormous table of rough stone, of a strangely savage appearance. The tree and the stone seemed contemporaries. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, as they approached the clearing stopped suddenly on hearing the sound of Sibylle's voice at a little distance. The child seemed to be speaking in a tone of animated and even reclaiming reprimand; then she ceased, and an instant after an odor of incense filled the air. The Marquis and Marchioness, whose curiosity was much excited, left the path, and entering the wood, soon reached the level of the clearing. They perceived Sibylle kneeling at the foot of the oak before the stone table, her eyes directed toward that part of the horizon where the sea and sky were mingled. Her half-opened lips seemed to be uttering a prayer. To the trunk of the tree were suspended some large letters, formed of wild violets twisted together, composing the word 'GOD.' The perfume-burner was upon the granite table, and gave forth a little cloud of smoke, which arose in a spiral column against the distant blue of the ocean. But the most striking figure in the picture was that of Jacques Feray, who was seen cross long under a tree at a little distance, and watching Sibylle with a wild yet timid look, like that of a dog who has been beaten.

At this sight, Madame de Ferias could not restrain her tears, and kneeling on the sod, she joined her earnest prayer to that which ascended to heaven from the pure heart of the child. But Monsieur de Ferias stood motionless, with a serious and anxious face.

'Why are you troubled, my friend?' said the Marchioness, rising.

'It is nothing said he. 'Let us go and embrace her.'

Sibylle, at the sound of their approach, leapt on her feet, red as a rose.

'My child,' said the old Marquis, folding her in his arms, 'then is very well, only next time remember that we should recollect the goodness of God, as well as his power.'

'It is time,' said Sibylle; 'I will put up a crown.'

'And did you make those beautiful flower-letters all alone, my darling?' said Madame de Ferias.

'Yes,' replied Sibylle, 'but Jacques picked the flowers. And, do you believe it, I can never make him pray with me—he is a sinner.'

Sibylle accompanied this last objurgation by a frowning movement of the eyebrows, which seemed to equally affect Jacques Feray. He bent his haggard eyes upon the ground, and murmured with a timid voice:

'There is no God!'

'Wretch!' cried Sibylle, and suddenly pushing him by the shoulders, he lost his equilibrium and fell down at the foot of a tree. Seeing him thus in an attitude of frightened awkwardness, she burst into a sweet peal of laughter, which rang loudly through the woods; then shrugging her shoulders.

'Great, stupid fellow!' said she; and Jacques seemed enchanted.

Whom do Great Men Marry?

Women, of course. But they show the same diversity of taste that is seen in the lower ranks, and on the whole make worse mistakes. They, however, generally show the same sense in choosing wives that they show in managing other people's affairs, whether it be good or bad.

Robert Burns married a farm girl with whom he fell in love while they worked together in the plow field. He, too, was irregular in his life, and committed the most serious mistakes in conducting his domestic affairs.

Alfieri married the daughter of a country squire, but lived with her only a short time. He was austere, exacting, a literary recluse; while she was a rosy romping country lass that could not endure the restraint upon her, so they separated. Subsequently however, she returned, and they lived tolerably happy.

Queen Victoria and Prince Albert were cousins, and about the only example in the long line of English monarchs wherein the nuptial vows were scrupulously observed and sincere affection existed.

Shakespeare loved and wed a farmer's daughter. She proved faithful to her vows but we can hardly say the same for the great bard himself. Like most of the great poets, he showed too little discrimination in bestowing his affections on the other sex.

Byron married Miss Millbank to get money to pay his debts. It turned out a bad shift.

Benjamin Franklin married the girl who stood at her father's door and laughed at him as he wandered through the streets of Philadelphia with rolls of bread under his arms and his pockets filled with dirty clothes. She had occasion to be happy when she found herself the wife of a good and great man.

Washington married a widow with two children. It is enough to say of her that she was worthy of him, and that they lived as married folks should, in perfect harmony.

John Adams married the daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman. Her father objected on account of John being a lawyer; he had a bad opinion of the morals of the profession.

Thomas Jefferson married Mrs. Martha Skelton, a childless widow but she brought him a large fortune in real estate. After the ceremony she mounted the horse behind him and they rode home together. It was late in the evening, and they found the fire out. But the great statesman busied around and rebuilt it, while she seized the broom and soon put things in order. It is needless to say that they were happy, though Jefferson died a poor man, on account of his extreme liberality and hospitality.

John Howard, the great philanthropist, married his nurse. She was altogether beneath him in social life and intellectual capacity, and besides that, was fifty-two years old, while he was but twenty-five.—He would not take 'no' for an answer, and they were married and lived happily together until her death, which occurred two years afterwards.

Peter the Great, of Russia, married a peasant girl. She made an excellent wife and a noble empress.

Humboldt married a poor girl because he loved her. Of course they were happy.

It is not generally known that Andrew Jackson married a lady whose husband was still living. She was an uneducated, but amiable woman, and was most devotedly attached to the old warrior and statesman.

John C. Calhoun married his cousin, and their children fortunately were neither diseased nor idiotic, but they do not evidence the talent of the great States' Rights advocate.

Edward Lytton Bulwer, the English statesman and novelist, married a girl much his inferior in position, and got a shrew for a wife. She is now insane.

Facts about the North West.

Notwithstanding all that has been written about the North West Territory, very incorrect ideas exist in many quarters regarding it. To dissipate some of these erroneous impressions, we propose to make a few brief but correct statements regarding its climate productions, minerals, animals, &c., which we trust will prove interesting as well as useful.

Most of the inhabitants of what we may now call North-Western Canada, are located in what is known as the Red River Settlement, Fort Garry being the principal village. The number is set down at 16,000 souls, but when this season's accessions are all in and counted, the number will not be far from 15,000. Most of the population are Scotch and French, but the Canadians and Americans are steadily increasing.

The climate at Fort Garry is very much like that of the Province of Quebec. The winters are colder by the thermometer than in the neighborhood of Toronto, but in consequence of the aridity of the atmosphere, the cold is said not to be felt so much.—The snow fall is generally less than with us. As you proceed West, towards the Rocky Mountains, the climate becomes milder and better. Near the mountains, snow seldom ever exceeds 10 inches in depth, and the winters are comparatively mild. On the Upper Saskatchewan, horses and cattle sometimes feed out all winter! Sleighing sets in about the first week of December, and the ice on the rivers breaks up about the last week of April. Spring comes in very rapidly. The farmers generally sow about the 15th of April, and the growth of the crops is exceedingly rapid There is no fever and ague—the curse of the American prairies—and the character of the climate cannot be excelled for healthfulness.

It is calculated there are 250,000,000 of acres of magnificent farming land. The fertile belt is from 150 to 200 miles in width (north and south) and 900 miles in length (east and west.) It is almost all prairie land, and soil, according to a local authority, "of a rich, black, vegetable loam, with a clay subsoil." Regarding the great depth and richness of the soil, all authorities concur.

This is a query in which all are interested, and one, fortunately, which can be most satisfactorily answered. Wheat, barley, oats, peas, rye, Indian corn, similar grains, attain to great perfection. Wheat averages 65 lbs. to the bushel! Flax and hemp thrive well. As an agricultural country it is certain it is not excelled on this continent. Potatoes often yield 30 bushels for one planted. Almost every kind of vegetable grows luxuriantly. Such fruits as the wild plum, cherry, gooseberry, red and black currents and cranberry, are to be found in abundance. Before ten years, the North West Territory must become one of the largest wheat-producing districts in the world. This is a flattering prediction. But it is impossible to consider the almost unequalled fertility of the soil, and the ease with which such lands can be cultivated, and come to any other conclusion.

We know no better chance to make a fortune than by going to the Red River district and commencing the raising of stock. A country abounding in natural grasses, which make the best of hay, and in the western parts of which cattle can secure food out of doors all winter, is a tempting field to the enterprising stock breeder. The gold mines of California or Australia do not afford so splendid an opportunity to secure wealth, as do these magnificent prairies to those who understand stock-raising, and who saw fit to enter into it on a large scale.

One great drawback to the American prairies is the want of timber. It is almost impossible to get lumber there for houses, barns and fences. But our Canadian prairies are happily different. Along the many splendid rivers and streams with which they are watered, are to be found the pine, oak, ash, white and black spruce, the balsam, basswood, poplar, tamarack and ash-leaved maple. The timber is not probably of the best qualities, but there is quite sufficient for all the want of the district itself.

The trade in furs will doubtless be continued by the Hudson's Bay Company and by hardy pioneers for decades yet to come. In the animal kingdom, there are the buffalo, bears, wolves, moose and reindeer, lynxes, otters, foxes, minks, beavers martens, fishers, and many other species of minor importance. The pelt ries of these animals have been for centuries the only medium of exchange in the North-West, and have been a mine of wealth annually to the fur monopolists. Hereafter many hardly adventurers will no doubt take part in the fur trade, and share the spoils of this lucrative calling. The larger animals such as bears and wolves are becoming scarce, but in the more remote accessible localities, the beaver, otter, mink, fox, &c., are still to be found in abundance.

In addition to its other attractions, the North west possesses great mineral wealth. Gold, copper and iron are to be found in several localities, but whether in paying quantities or not, has not been ascertained by actual experiment. Coal exists to almost unlimited extent, plaster of Paris, mineral paints, sulphur, asphaltum, and alum, have been discovered. Granite, slate, lime and sandstone, are abundant. The salt springs of the the territory are among the richest in the world, and in some cases they throw up natural salt of good quality.

The North-west contains many magnificent lakes and rivers. The principal lakes are Winnipeg, Lake of the Woods, and Great Slave Lake. The Saskatchewan, Mackenzie, Red and Assiniboine are the chief rivers, and the extent of the country may be known from the fact that some of these streams are thousands of miles long! It is calculated that there are ten thousand miles of navigable water within the territory.

Red River district is not free from the hardships inseparable from a new settlement, but all the advantages of modern civilization are being rapidly introduced.—There are two schools and a classical college for boys, and two schools for the education of girls. The Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists and Roman Catholics, have each several churches. Up till recently, the wants of the community in regard to imported articles, were not very well supplied, but improvement is rapidly taking place in this respect. There are very few mechanics there yet, and a wide field is open for carpenters, masons, shoemakers, tailors, blacksmiths, &c.—a few manufactories—particularly those who make woollen goods and farming implements—would inevitable succeed well. In a very few years, every branch of industry will be represented in the Red River district, and its inhabitants have placed within their reach all the advantages which we enjoy.

The only practicable way to Red River at present, is by way of St. Paul, Minnesota. From that city, part of the way is by stage, but mainly by carts over the plains. Hundreds of carts are constantly employed in this. Some Canadians have gone to the head of Lake Superior, and there made their way by a route formerly used by voyageurs. We would not advise any one to try this road. Next year, we hope our Canadian road will be opened, and then our people will not require to pass through the United States at all. We have no doubt that as soon as our route is open to travel, a great revolution will take place in the trade of and travel to Red River, and that the people of Canada will then realize the immense value and importance of the North-West in a way never yet experienced.

These disjointed facts about our North-western possession can be relied upon as correct, and are worthy of attentive consideration, not only by those who may think of trying their fortune in that favored land, but by every one who takes an interest in Canada's prosperity.—Trade Review.

ROW BETWEEN BISHOPS.—The row which Bishop Duggan, of the Roman Catholic Church in the State of Illinois, had with some of his clergy a few months ago, and which resulted in his going mad, is being nicely supplemented by the one which Bishop Whitehouse, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, is waging against the Rev. Mr. Cheney, of Christ Church, Chicago. And his quarrel with Bishop Cummins of Kentucky, who, at the invitation of the vestry of Trinity Church, Chicago, preached a sermon in opposition to ritualism. Bishop Whitehouse forbade the vestry to admit Bishop Cummins to the pulpit again, but that body disregarded his injunctions, and now the Rev. father in God, full of wrath declares that he will lay the matter before the house of bishops, and meantime protests "against acts and temper so derogatory to the dignity of our office, our confiding brotherhood, the peace of the church, and the well-being of the portion of it committed by the great head to my unworthy charge." If it were possible for our voice to reach these dignitaries of the church, we would exhort them to dwell together in unity and brotherly love.—Ex.

Outlook "the wickedest man in Cincinnati," feeling aggrieved at some reference to his Sixth street den that appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, a few days since, visited that office on the 26th of July, for the purpose of obtaining an apology and retraction. The fighting editor not being in, Mr. Collins blew a mighty blast of defiance on his horn, and then disappeared in the Atlantic Beer Garden, adjoining the office of the paper that had so fearfully abused him. Here the Wickedest Man met Tom Ryan, the fighting printer of the Enquirer office, who "took it up," and gave him one of the most complete thrashings that it was ever the Wickedest Man's good fortune to receive. After receiving the whipping Collins was arrested on a charge of threatening personal violence, preferred by the local editor of the Enquirer.

One day last week, as Mr. Vean of Webster Falls, Arkansas, was ploughing, his plough struck something, stopping his mule. Supposing it to be a root, he struck his mule with his lash, and it gave a sudden pull, when up came five old Spanish dollars. Mr. Vean returned to the spot where the coin appeared, and on examination found a keg full of the coin. The staves of the keg were rotten, but the dollars were as sound as when coined at the old Spanish mint. On digging up the keg he found it contained $5,000, all in Spanish dollars of the date of about 1806, and American half dollars of old date. The keg must have been buried twenty or thirty years ago. Since the finding of this money the whole field has been dug up in search of hidden treasure.

INFANT MORTALITY.—The terrible mortality, especially amongst children, goes on in this city, the largest item being nearly always that contributed by the Foundling Hospital. Of the children sent to the City News week after week, nearly the whole we presume, find their way into the bills of mortality within a very short time. They are farmed out, we understand, to women who, pretty regularly, take out live babies and bring back dead ones; and whose system of nursing, if correctly described to us, can lead to no other result. Is this slaughter of the innocents, year in and year out worthy of a christian city? Should it go on?—Montreal Witness.

THE WHEVIL IN BARLEY.—On Saturday last, Mr. Thos. Russell, of E bec, left at our office several heads of bar ey gathered from a field on his farm, which were literally covered with the larvæ of the weevil. Every second grain presented a yellowish tinge, which, on removing the outward covering, showed the cause to arise from the presence of three or more of these pests.—Stratford Herald.

ACCIDENT AT HARWOOD.—We regret to notice that on Thursday last a man named Wm. McLean was very seriously injured in McDougall's saw mills, Harwood, by the falling of a pile of timber, injuring the spine, and probably resulting in death On Friday another man names Jas Hogan, was injured in the same way at Campbell's mills. In this case recovery is probable. —Sun.

FIREMEN'S EXCURSION.—The firemen of Port Hope, Peterboro, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Whitby, and Cobourg, are making arrangements for an excursion to Rochester by the Bonanza Norseman some time in the month of September, as say some of our exchanges.

WHAT'S THE MATTER.

The Leader of yesterday hints that Mr. Richards, Crown Lands Commissioner, "lacks that dash and determination which are necessary to settle speedily and satisfactorily the disputed cases which are constantly arising in his department." He lacks, moreover, that broadness of view which is essential in the Crown Land Commissioner of a new country.

What is the matter? Is Mr. Richards to be foisted as soon as possible? Does John Sandfield contemplate going over out rely to his new friends. In the same paper there is currency given to the rumor that Mr. R. W. Scott, M. P. P., is to be Commissioner in Mr. Richards' stead. "The public at large would appreciate any change (italics ours) which would place the Crown Lands' Department in other hands than those of Mr. Richards."

Poor Richards, he forsook his former friends, and allied himself with his political enemies, and now he is to be discarded, any change would be acceptable. Mr. Richards is not pliant enough, his views are not broad enough, he has not the determination necessary for his office, in fact he is an incapable kept in office on sufferance, because no other old woman can be got to take his place. What a position to be in?

"There are very strong reasons why the Crown Lands should be entrusted to other hands." As Mr Richards shaped his course he must travel. He chose his companions, he fell among dishonest men, anti-coalitionists at heart, they were never sincere, but accepted their position rather than give up the spoils. The Crown Lands Commissioner became their pliant tool, and now is to be cast off because incapable.

Mr. E. B. Wood will go next, and then all will move smoothly. All offices at the disposal of the Legislature of Ontario have been given to Conservatives, and the Crown Land's Department must follow. John Sandfield must remove Mr. Richards, who must be sacrificed at the shrine of coalition in order to grant a longer lease to the corruptionists to consolidate Confederation.—Mr. Richards is not extravagant enough for the Leader and its friends. Economy in departmental affairs is a disgrace not to be tolerated, and poor Mr. Richards must be removed to make way for one "whose sense of honesty and fairness and justice" will be of a more indefinite character. Many pitied the weakness of the Commissioner of Crown Lands in accepting the office; few will feel for him in his present humiliating position. As a man makes his bed so he must lie.

NO RAILROADS FOR GALWAY.

A correspondent informs us that the Council of the Township of Galway have refused to let the by-law, to grant a bonus to the proposed Haliburton railway, go to the people. They must not be very fair-seeing men, or they have very little confidence in the judgment of the ratepayers, when they refuse to allow them to have a vote in the matter. We cannot see any valid reason for the action of the members of the Council, or the majority, for we cannot suppose that all were of one mind in this matter. Every man of sane mind who understands that Galway is one of the richest townships of the County, in minerals, must see that to open up railway communication will induce capitalists to go in and work those mines, and the thousands of dollars that would be thus spent must go largely into the pockets of the inhabitants of Galway. Villages must be built, produce brought into them, a large field for labor opened up, and perhaps fortunes made in the sale of mineral lands now supposed to be worthless. Surely the councillors who voted against submitting the by-law to the ratepayers do not wish the present state of Galway to continue forever, nor can they imagine that they are not to receive some benefit. We cannot believe that they wish to retard the progress of the country, and of their own townships in particular. Their present costs per year of getting to market, over and above what it would be if they had a railroad, would more than pay their annual rate for a railroad bonus. They should not allow their old fogy notions to get the better of their judgment. Let them call another meeting, and at least have the people's opinion.

We notice, too, that some of the good people of Minden think that a railroad would injure them, and of course the, Country, for we do not believe that they are so selfish as to oppose progress on the score of self alone. In a communication in this day's issue, a correspondent feels aggrieved that his views have been represented as refuted. There is nothing more common for speakers and public men than to find that there are others who do think that one set of arguments are stronger than another set. This is an every day occurrence, but this does not make the arguements of either better or worse, stronger or weaker, more logical or less logical—not at all—it only points out the tendency of different minds.

But there is one side our friend forgets, and that is, that even suppose one car load of goods would supply all the back country now, does he wish the back country to remain so forever. Improve the country, and people will go in and settle, if it is fit for settlement, if it is not, those who think so should be honest enough to say so, and let intending settlers know it; they should not put their candle under a bushel. If there is land fit for settlement, then open up means of ingress, and it will be taken up, there will be two purchasers instead of one, and although profits may be less, there will be twice as many asking their mites, and hence it will amount to the same thing.

A merchant is happier selling goods to ten purchasers than to five, because it keeps him busy, and it is evident that if the ten buy $100 worth of goods at 12½ per cent profit to the merchant, that he is richer at the end, than selling to 5 persons at 20 per cent profit, and if one car load will suffice 5 persons, it will require two car loads to supply twice as many, and let the settlers increase, and the car loads must increase in the same ratio. The present is but to-day; for a moment; men do not live for the present in any of their transactions; all live for the future, men do not wish the present state of things to remain, they look for, and work for better, and so in railroad matters. Fifty years ago an ox-cart would have carried enough stuff for all the inhabitants of Peterboro; it would not do so to-day, and fifty years hence, things undreamt of may be needed. One however long dates much for us, and for the surrounding townships. It is shallow policy to oppose progressive enterprise, because it may appear to injure a few. In every age, the reintroductions of the greatest gifts to man have been opposed by those who thought they would be losers, honestly opposed, but foolishly.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

The Teachers of the County have organized an Association for discussing matters connected with their profession. They met on Thursday and Friday, 22th and 30th of July, in the Music Hall, which Mr. Hill kindly placed at their disposal for their meetings at very moderate rates. About 30 teachers took part in the proceedings from time to time during the days of their meeting.

Thursday forenoon was spent in organising and arranging business, and discussing text books. In the afternoon, the question, "Which is the most effectual method of governing a school—physical or moral suasion?" was freely discussed by Mr. Hines, Mr. McFaul and several others. The prevailing opinion being in favor of a union of both, as best calculated to secure order and obedience. The membership of the Board of Public Instruction was next considered, when it was strongly urged that the Board should be a representative body and entirely free from political control.

In the evening, Mr. Dixon delivered a very interesting and instructive Lecture on "Education as a civilizing agency." Mr. McFaul followed with an exhaustive Essay on "Penmanship, and the best method of teaching it." This meeting was very well attended.

FRIDAY.

The members met on Friday forenoon and adopted a Constitution, By-laws, and Rules and Regulations, and selected the following officers for the year:

Mr. Stratton, President.
Mr. J. B. Dixon, M. A., 1st Vice Pres.
Mr. Wm. Wood, 2nd Vice President.
Mr. Smyth, Corresponding Secretary.
Mr. Jas. Hogan, Recording Secretary.
Mr. John Wood, Treasurer.

Messrs. A. Shearer, W. Renwick, A. S. McGuire and T. J. White, Directors, whose duty it is in part to arrange the time of next meeting, and also the subjects to be discussed at it.

In the afternoon, there was a very interesting meeting, when the best method of teaching Geography and Reading was discussed by almost all the teachers; also, how long should children be kept in the 2nd Book of Lessons. The new school books were condemned as not at all suited to the wants of our schools, and some of them unfit to be placed in the hands of children.

In the evening, part of a short essay was read by Mr. Stratton, on "The Teacher, his work, and its reward." Mr. McMillan, of Bosson, delivered a lecture, subject—"The Higher Life;" after which Mr. Haggart read "The Irish School Master," in his usually effective style, which closed the first meeting of the Association.

We believe it is the intention of the members of this Association to procure the services of some of the ablest lecturers for the next meeting, and to solicit the aid, of our citizens, by ticket, to defray expenses.

GAS.

There was a meeting in the Council Chamber on Monday at four o'clock, to take into consideration the propriety of forming a gas company in Peterboro. There were present: Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Helm, Mr. Romaine and the proposing contractor. From the attendance, we might draw the conclusion that the remaining citizens think they have gas enough.

"The profits" was the only subject discussed. The light or its cost compared with present light—important things to the people—was not dilated upon.

HOW TO DO WITHOUT GAS.

This is of greater importance to our citizens than even its cost. The present plan of keeping shops open to unreasonable hours is a great injury to those engaged in business. The merchant himself, his clerks and the community suffer because of it. Long hours undermine the constitution of all who are forced to keep them. From seven in the morning till ten o'clock at night, at business, cannot fail to affect the health and happiness of all concerned.

The plan of Ladies "shopping" at late hours has often been decried by clerks and even by proprietors. It is very much to be deplored that all having is not done at early hours, say in the forenoon, or at least before six o'clock in the afternoon. The merchants, we believe, have this, to a great extent, in their own hands. If they would shut up punctually at six o'clock, intending purchasers would find it to their interest to be there before that hour. The merchant and clerk would get home to his family, and would thus be enabled to make himself acquainted with them which it is to be feared he is not, and is not likely to be for some time. Clerks would have time for exercise, physical and mental, and there would be just as much business done in the season. This would save gas and oil almost entirely, a no small item in the year. Six, should be the hour in summer at least; seven o'clock might better suit in winter. Why is there not something done in this direction? It would be a great boon to those engaged in business; it would yield a large per cent in increased health and strength; the family and home would become more attractive, and there would be a little time for attention to family duties that are now neglected. Ten additional years of a happy life, of vigorous and healthy constitution, of a cheerful home, of time spent in parental oversight of children, of evenings spent in healthy mental recreations, would be a good interest on the investment—better than gas.

A CIVIC HOLIDAY.—Thursday, the 19th inst., has been appointed a general Holiday by proclamation of the Council, signed by Mr. Clarke as presiding officer. The firemen are to have a pic-nic on that day, down the Otonabee at Campbellcroft, near Rice Lake, of which many will avail themselves. Not a few petitions will be offered for a fine day. The "Forest City" will take the party and bring them back. Arrangements are made for music, &c.

CONCERT.—James Taylor and his Musical Burlesque Troupe will give two "Personation Concerts," the first of which will be given this evening, in the Music Hall. See advertisement.

Union School Board.

The Board met on Tuesday evening, all Trustees, Chairman, Messrs. Clarke, Cameron, Gibson, Dunlop, Lundy, Secretary and Rolls.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the County Clerk, informing the Board that the County Council had appropriated $150 to the Grammar School at certain conditions, namely, that of admitting pupils from the country free.

A communication was also read from Miss. Dowling, asking an increase of salary.

On motion of Mr. Tocle, seconded by Mr. Cameron, the Board refused to accept the appropriation from the County on the conditions.

On motion of Mr. Lundy, seconded by Mr. Cameron, Miss Dowling's salary was increased to £280, to commence with her second year.

Several accounts were then passed.

The Secretary submitted a statement, showing that $2,275 were necessary to be levied for the current year—$725 for the Grammar School department, and $1,550 for the Common School department.

There was no action taken in reference to the erection of Primary Schools.

The Toronto Telegraph says:—"We trust that the report is somewhat exaggerated which comes to us from Fort William—the report, that for every ten laborers employed in the construction of the wagon road to the North-West, there is an engineer and a commissariat officer under pay. The Accountant's office at the Government station, five miles from the Fort, we are told, pre-sents a clerical force as imposing as that of a first-c ss bank; the staff including the sons of Judges, and other high officials of indefinite degrees of social standing. If that is a wise beginning, the tax paying community need further information to make it clear."

This is just what may be expected from a Government that has mismanaged everything they have put their hands to. John Sandfield must appoint John A's. political hacks, &c. These are legion. They are too lazy to work, and strongly imbued with the idea that clever (?) trickery is more gentlemanly than honest industry. They have received an important lesson from their chief on this subject, and they are determined to profit by it, hence the number of hangers-on and worthless loafers that are sent to the West to get them out of the way. Perhaps, some of them, of "indefinite degrees of social standing,"—bad characters—are well out of the way.

THE CROPS.—From every quarter the most cheering intelligence reaches of the abundant harvest that is just being reaped. There is not a murmur to be heard from any one. The yield will be the largest per acre that has been for many years, and the quality unsurpassed, if this fine weather continues. There is also a large crop of barley in this County, and it promises an unusual yield Oats too, promise a full supply, which will prove very cheering after the short crop of last year. The root crops look well; and Prices look upward. Wheat is now $1.10 in Toronto, and a merchant of Port Hope informed us that American buyers are already offering $1.10 for barley.

STEAMER ENTERPRISE.—We have been requested to state the Enterprise will make her "Trial" trip" this day, and on Saturday will make her first trip to Harwood, after which she will continue to run her regular trips as advertised. The Enterprise has been completely refitted. Her entire machinery has been renewed, and paddles attached instead of screws; a Lady's Cabin, and other accommodations provided. It is believed that she will make Harwood in three hours. It may not be long ere the Enterprise will come up to the Town. A very trifling cost in fixing the dam and locks would enable her to do so. The company no doubt will move in the matter.

NEW WHEAT.—We have received a sample of a new kind of wheat introduced into Asphodel by Mr Jas. Fife, and known as the Treadwell wheat. It is a beautiful color, large head, and grain plump. Mr. Fife, last fall, sowed three bushels of this wheat, which he inspected, and feels confident it will produce 90 bushels. He also declares it to be the hardiest kind of wheat he has ever seen, and to be free from rust, just beside wheat that is rusted. He is satisfied that the Treadwell wheat is just the wheat for Canada. Mr. Fife has some of this for sale for seed. He has also a large quantity of fine Milwaukee Club wheat for sale.

In this issue we record the death of another of the very old settlers of this County, that of Mrs. Becket, at the advanced age of 88 years. Mrs. Becket was a native of Renfrewshire Scotland. She came to this country in the summer of 1820 with her husband and family, and settled in the township of Asphodel; she was also the first white woman who ever crossed the River Trent, to settle in that Township.—She leaves behind no less than eight children, eighty-three grand children, and ninety-six great grandchildren, or 188 in all.

FIRE IN PORT HOPE.—On Monday morning, Caisse's Hotel, Port Hope, was consumed by fire, and several buildings adjoining. The fire commenced in the stables connected with the Hotel. The loss is about $25,000, but some of this will be met by Insurance. There was an Insurance of $4,000 on the furniture in the Hotel.

CRICKET.—A return match was played on the Ashburnham ground yesterday, between the Belleville Cricket Club and the Peterboro Club, Belleville gaining by 4 runs. Belleville 1st innings 44; 2nd innings 62; Total 106. Peterboro 1st innings 17; 2nd innings 85; Total 102. It was too late to get the complete score.

RIFLE MATCH.—The Annual Rifle Match of this Battalion, will come off on the 31st instant, and the following day, September 1st. We understand that there will be a number of prizes for competition; further information will no doubt be given in good time.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to thank the undermentioned friends for donations in July: Mr. Fowler, cakes from North Monaghan Pic-nic; a Friend, basket of cakes, pork, ham and mutton; bread and cakes from the Baptist Sunday School pic-nic; Mrs. Beck, barrel soft soap; Mr. White, (Monaghan) joint of veal, and a piece of corned beef; Mrs. Romaine, dripping, and shoes and boots; Miss Nicholl's, parcel of clothing; eight loaves, and bread and butter from the Methodist Sunday School pic-nic; a Friend, butter full cheap grease; Mrs. W. Foster, basket of pears.

POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Annie Barrie, a Scotchwoman, was brought before Col. Boswell by Mr. Richard Holland, of the commercial hotel, Smith. Barrie was on her way from Bobcaygeon to Town, and had taken a little "forty rod." He went into Mr Holland's house, and finding all out at the time, appropriated the pants, and went on his way. Mr. Holland seeing the same go in at one door and out at another, mentioned the matter to his wife, when she looking round missed the pants. Mr Holland followed to Town, and by the aid of constable Hamden, found the missing articles, and Barrie at a Frenchman's boarding house kept by one Dubois. Begin was sent up for trial.

There living on the wayside, would do well to take a lesson from this, and watch struggling travellers.

VAN AMBURGH & Co's MENAGERIE.—This well known and popular establishment, the reputation of which is so well understood that it needs no special commendation from us, is now in the Province, and will visit this place soon. Since it was in Canada some years ago, large additions to its attractions have been modestly secured, especially from its agents in Africa, a number of animals which have never before been exhibited in Europe or America. The entire zoological collection numbers about five hundred rare animals, birds, &c., in the transportation and exhibition of which about four hundred men and horses are employed, it being larger and more comprehensive in all its departments than any establishment ever organized. It is the intention of Van Amburgh & Co to visit all the principal cities and towns in the Dominion, and we have no doubt it will receive most liberal patronage from the public everywhere, as it depends for support exclusively on its merits as a first class menagerie, unconnected with circus performances. A menagerie is one thing and a circus is another, and the two specialities being incompatible, they should never be put together. A few animals in a circus do not convert a circus into a menagerie, any more than the introduction of the pony and monkey-riding makes a menagerie a circus; and those who desire to see a complete and exclusive menagerie can only do so by visiting Van Amburgh & Co's establishment. See advertisement.

PETERS' MUSICAL MONTHLY.—This welcome visitor, for August, has been received, and contains several readable pieces. The musical part is unusually attractive. The contents are: No Name; God bless my Boy at Sea; Widow McGee, and Beside the Sea. Also, Golden Chimes; The Coming Step; Honey Suckle Waltz; Mother, Watch the Little Feet; and Near the Banks of that Lone River. Besides, Haste O Sinner to be Wise; and Sinners, will you Scorn the Message. Any of these pieces are worth 30 cts. each. The music given in one number is worth the subscription for a year. J. S. Peters, the publisher, 189 Broadway, N. Y. The Musical Monthly can be ordered through Mr. Kidd or Mr. Menzies, Peterboro.

Have Our Opponents Fled the Field?

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—It is not characteristic of Irish chivalry to exult in the defeat of a vanquished foe, but in the present case concerning the "Protestant Home" discussion, the writer and his colleagues feel that they are masters of the situation. Having driven the enemy off the field to take shelter behind his ramparts, we can now at least realize to ourselves that we have silenced him, and consequently gained the day. Backed up by a healthy public opinion in the justness of our cause, we feel that we are amply rewarded for having defended to the best of our poor ability a benevolent institution, and exposed the machinations and bigotry of its opponents. Stand forward gentlemen from behind the walls of the church and don't pollute the sanctuary of your faith. Come forth you "baker's half dozen," and discuss the question at issue peaceably, quietly and philosophically; the subject is not yet exhausted on our side. We pledge ourselves not even as much as to hint in future at the private character of any gentleman. We fall to see the names of any of our 'French Canadians,' or any of our Glengary 'Scots-Irish,' which constitute a large and influential element of our Catholic population, sign those cooked up resolutions which were prepared by a "master's" own hand, and sent to the "indignation"—bless the mark—an "enthusiastic" meeting. In reality there were present about eight or nine persons, scarcely enough to move and second the three famous resolutions, and if we are to credit reports now current in town, several of those names appended are forged ones. The great meeting in question partook of the character of a convivial affair more than anything else, in order to test the superiority of Mr. Tierney's "Irish Malt." No doubt Mr. Tierney would have no particular objections in a pecuniary sense, to have a meeting of these gentlemen at his tavern every night in the week.

For three "mortal" days, through sunshine and rain, did two of these worthies canvass the town, visiting every shop and place of business kept by Catholics, for the purpose of getting signatures to their resolutions, in order to make a little show in public, that they were sustained by a majority of the Catholics of this parish. The whole thing proved a failure, as the names procured for the "resolutions" do not in reality represent the Catholics of this extensive mission. These gentlemen should go and hide themselves from public view. They have lost all standing in this community by their own extreme and uncharitable conduct. Their ultramontane views will not take in this community. We want men who will endeavor to unite christians in the performance of good works instead of sowing the seeds of discord and dissension amongst us. Responsible men who do not act thus, fail to fulfil their mission. Sir, my language is considered bold by many, but freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of thought and action, are privileges which every British subject enjoys under the "flag of England"—that flag which sweeps the seas from north to south, which flashes like a meteor from pole to pole. The threatening "resolutions" of Messrs. Buck, Redmond, Moloney, Sullivan and others we set at nought. We defy them to harm us, the cowardly fellows! "Ferret out those writers, forsooth," and what would you do to them, "Michael Redmond?" Would you waylay them in some dark street or lonely alley, in the "shades of evening" when nature's dark mantle was thrown across the horizon, or would you do worse to the "Evil Spirit, No. 2?" Answer Michael.

Don't mistake yourselves, jolly fellows, it is "Greek against Greek" this time. Methinks I hear the voice of a Demosthenes or a Themistocles shouting "To arms, to arms, ye men of Greece." Belt on your armour, gentlemen, and fight the battle out; not on the "Plains of Marathon," nor in the "Pass of Thermopylæ," but in the "local press," who have given you hitherto more latitude than your bad cause deserves. Do not sully the fair name of your native land, Messrs. Moloney, Lawder, Doherty, &c., in defending what you all know in your hearts to be unjust and inhuman. Do away with those "hole and corner" meetings, and take an honorable stand in the broad field of controversy if you think you are injured men.—The press of Peterboro, I presume, will afford you ample opportunity of reviewing your popularity, and winning back perhaps a meed of the public approbation which you imagined you had to enjoy. In conclusion, sir, I would say to my opponents would thank your threats; the rights of the public are dictated upon you; the disinterests of the town have promised to keep a close eye on you. Now reader, gentlemen, you are living in a free country; if you lay a finger on us, or hurt a hair of our head, the law of the land will be strained to its fullest extent against you.

Peterboro, Aug. 10, 1869.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of the 22 inst. there appeared a communication concerning a meeting held in this place, in favour of the proposed Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway. In which it is said, that remarks made by myself at the meeting were completely refuted by Mr. S. S. Peck. Now I desire to take this opportunity of emphatically denying this statement made by your correspondent. The remarks instead of being completely refuted were not refuted at all, and I do not suppose any one thought an except it was your correspondent and Mr. Peck. Why could not your correspondent give an impartial sketch of the proceedings of the meeting, without giving a one side view, simply because, he is a strong advocate of the Railway, and no matter what arguments there arrayed who were in favour of the Railway it was all very nice, sensible and good to him. There is one of my remarks in particular which is held up to view, viz. that one train of cars would bring in sufficient goods to do us for a year. I am still satisfied it is correct, and I am also upheld in this view by all those doing business in the Village, except Mr. Peck. But it is not my intention to go into the merits or demerits, the feasibility or the profit connected with said Railway, unless I am compelled to; And for the present

I Remain Yours, &c.
F. MASON.

Minden, July 26th, 1869.

THE NEW RAILWAY CAR.—The magnificent new car manufactured at the P. H. L. & B. R. R Works, Port Hope, for the Lindsay train, was placed upon the track on Thursday last. It is really a splendid piece of workmanship, superior to any here before used upon the road, and reflects the greatest credit upon the workmen engaged in its construction. It is beautifully painted outside; but inside there is not a particle of paint—the woodwork, consisting of black walnut, maple and oak, being simply oil polished. The seats are nicely cushioned, and have locked backs, which prevents parties from changing their position for the purpose of putting their feet on the cushions. There are three thicknesses of flooring, which will greatly add to the warmth and comfort of the passengers in winter. There is in course of construction at the Company's works, a fine second class passenger car with arched roof and other improvements, which will doubtless be an excellent addition to the cars already in use on this road.—British Canadian.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—Rev. Mr. McMahon, the liberated Fenian, accompanied by Bishop Horan of Kingston, passed west on Friday per Grand Trunk evening express. His incarceration does not seem to have produced any bad effects on his personal appearance, for a member of the Queen's Own who assisted at his arrest on recognizing him in the cars, said he looked much better now than he did when captured. It is to be hoped Mr. McMahon will not fail to visit the graves of the murdered heroes of Ridgeway in the Toronto Cemetery, when he passes through that city. It might be well, too, to stop at the Burlington Cemetery at Hamilton, where he could s e further evidence of the bloody work done by the Fenian marauders. When he comes to settle down in his western home, it might possibly afford food for reflection, although the reminiscences would not be of the most pleasant character.

ATTEMPT TO UPSET A TRAIN.—A Millbrook correspondent informs us that on Thursday morning last, about two o'clock, the Lindsay train was nearly thrown off by a rail about 24 feet long, which had been placed across the track on the sharpest curve of the road, about 2½ miles this side of the summit. The embankment at this place is about 25 feet in height, and had the locomotive run off, we would have had a fearful disaster to record. It is to be hoped that the parties who made this dastardly attempt to destroy the lives of passengers may be discovered and brought to justice. British Canadian.

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to aid and assist the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving $10,000 to the Company by way of bonus, and to issue debentures therefor, and to authorize the keeping of such a rate as will pay the said debentures and the interest thereon:

WHEREAS by the act of the Second Session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, passed in the Thirty-second Year of Her Majesty's Reign, incorporating the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, it is provided that:—"It shall further be lawful for any Municipality or Municipalities through any part of which, or near which the Railway or works of the said Company shall pass or be situated, or which may be benefited thereby, to aid and assist the said Company by loaning or guaranteeing, or giving money by way of bonus, or other means to the Company, or by issuing Municipal Bonds to or in aid of the Company, and otherwise in such manner and to such extent as such Municipalities or any of them shall think expedient—provided always that no such aid, loan, bonus, or guarantee shall be given except after the passing of By-laws for the purpose and the adoption of such By-laws by the ratepayers as provided in the Railway Act."

And whereas the Municipality of the Township of Harvey has determined to aid and assist the said Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars by way of bonus, under the authority conferred by the said above recited Act.

And whereas to carry the last recited object into effect it is necessary for the said Municipality to issue debentures for the said sum of $10,000, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable in the manner hereinafter provided.

And whereas the amount of the whole ratepayable property of the said Municipality, according to the last revised assessment roll of the said Municipality, being for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, was one hundred and four thousand six hundred and ninety-eight dollars.

It is therefore enacted by the Council of the Corporation of the Municipality of the Township of Harvey, in the County of Peterboro', and Province of Ontario:

I. That it shall and may be lawful for the said Municipality to aid and assist the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars.

II. That it shall be lawful for the purposes aforesaid, for the Reeve of the said Municipality to cause any number of debentures to be made for such sums of money as may be required for the said purpose, not less than twenty-five dollars each, and not exceeding in the whole the amount of ten thousand dollars, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Municipality, and be signed by the Reeve and Treasurer thereof.

III. That the said debentures shall be made payable at the office of the Bank of Toronto, in the Town of Peterboro', and shall have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest at the rate and in the manner hereinafter mentioned. Such debentures being made payable for the following amounts, at the following times, that is to say on the thirtieth day of December in each of the following years there shall become due and be paid, namely: in 1871, Two Hundred Dollars.

1872, Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1873, Three Hundred Dollars.
1874, Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1875, Four Hundred Dollars.
1876, Four Hundred Dollars.
1877, Four Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1878, Four Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1879, Four Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1880, Five Hundred Dollars.
1881, Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1882, Five Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1883, Six Hundred Dollars.
1884, Six Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1885, Six Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1886, Seven Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1887, Seven Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1888, Eight Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1889, Nine Hundred Dollars.

Making in all the said sum of ten thousand dollars.

IV. That the said debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per cent per annum from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half yearly on the thirtieth day of June and December in each year at the Bank of Toronto in the said Town of Peterboro'.

V. That for the purpose of paying the said debentures, and the interest thereon as aforesaid, there shall be raised, levied and collected, a special rate in each year, in addition to all other rates upon all the rateable property in the said Municipality during the said term of twenty years, from the coming into effect of this By-law, unless such debentures shall be sooner paid, and such rate shall be sufficient to pay the debentures falling due, and all interest on the then outstanding debentures hereby authorized to be issued falling due within the year for which such rate is levied.

VI. That this By-law shall take effect on, from and after the thirtieth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

VII. That the debentures to be signed and issued as aforesaid, shall be delivered by the Reeve of the Municipality to the Trustees appointed (or to be appointed) in accordance with the Eleventh Section of the Act incorporating the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company.

VIII. And it is further enacted by the Municipal Council aforesaid that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken on the proposed By-law at the following place, that is to say, at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on the eighth day of September, A. D., 1869, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and closing at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, and that the following person shall be Returning Officer, for taking the said votes, namely: Wm. McCamus Hall, Clerk of the said Municipality.

Take Notice

That the above is a true copy of a proposed By-law, which will be taken into consideration by the Council of this Municipality, after one month from the first publication in the Peterborough Examiner, the date of which first publication was Thursday, the twelfth day of August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken thereon at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on Wednesday, the eighth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the morning.

GREAT GOLDEN MENAGERIE,

Will Exhibit in Peterborough,

WEDNESDAY, AFTERNOON AND EVENING,

AUGUST 25, 1869.

THE LARGEST AND BEST SHOW ON THIS CONTINENT.

In no other exhibition in America, and probably not in the known world, can there be found so vast a variety of wonderful animals as those owned by the great Menagerie Company

More African Elephants than any other exhibition in America.

More Two Humped Camels than any other exhibition in this country.

More Spotted Cattle from India than any other exhibition this side of the Atlantic.

More Mountain Lions than any other exhibition on this continent.

More Mammoth Anacondas than any other exhibition in existence.

More Australian Kangaroos than any other exhibition outside of Australia.

More African Zebras than any other exhibition in the New world.

More African Spring Bucks than any other exhibition ever in any country on the globe.

More South African Darkey Rocks than any other exhibition in the known world.

Were Cape Canaan than any other exhibition in North America.

Did our space permit we might mention many other animals that this great Menagerie Company have greater numbers of than any other exhibition in existence in the known world. It is emphatically the most colossal exhibition of the Nineteenth Country.

The Most Brilliant Show of any Age or Country.

The Performances.

In the Great Golden Menagerie are strictly of a Zoological character.

The Great War Elephant, Tippoo Saib,
The largest Elephant in the known world, will be introduced at each exhibition by
CHARLES JOHNSON, Esq.,
Formerly the friend and companion of that noted African explorer,

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

In his recent travels through uninhabited Central Africa.

Jocko, the Brazilian Ape,

And his Low Comedy Pony, FLYING SCUD, in miniature scene act. The grotesque and ludicrous actions of Jocko, as he mounts the Pony, and the manner he is thrown from his back, and the efforts of the Pony to throw Jocko, will cause shouts of laughter from the most serious.

HORACE GREELEY AND CHARLES DICKENS.

And the magnificent Abolition Blood Mare, PAULINE.

Also, the quizzical Lilliputian Mules, BARRY AND TORY, in their great Leaping and Ascension Specialties.

The Educated Cynocephalus,

Exhibited in Paris for upwards of twelve months to the most aristocratic and enthusiastic audiences.

WILLIS COBB, ESQ.,

Will introduce his accomplished and intelligent Canine Quadrupeds, giving an exhibition of dexterity and sagacity hitherto unparalleled. A pupil of

THE GREAT VAN AMBURGH,

The Dauntless and Daring King of the Lion Conquerors, will during each exhibition give a remarkable demonstration of his control over the brute creation, feeding them with RAW MEAT FROM HIS NAKED HAND.

THE ONLY COMPLETE MENAGERIE ON THIS CONTINENT.

EXTRAORDINARY AMUSEMENT.

JUST ADDED

To the Great Golden Menagerie A FULL CARGO FLYING ANIMALS brought by the Agent of the Great Menagerie Company direct from Africa, consisting of many animal never before seen on this continent. Some of the varieties were never on exhibition in any Menagerie in the known world, and are entirely new to naturalists, having ere only been discovered in the very heart of uninhabitable Central Africa by the Agent of this Great Menagerie Company while accompanying Dr. Livingstone on his recent tour of discovery through that unhospitable region.

Remember they are to be seen only in the Great Golden Menagerie.

A LIVING GIRAFFE,
A LIVING BLACK RHINOCEROS,

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentry, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away to death. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and may be administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 33

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Sir James Clarke's Female Pills are extensively COUNTERFEITED The genuine have the name of "JOB MORES" on each package. All others are worthless.

Sold in Peterborough by J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kemp, Wm. Coulter, and Ormond & Walsh. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased parts causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Bastonnaut O' the Bairn.

BY ROBERT LEIGHTON.

O, Andrew meet! I dout ye may be wrang
To hang the bairn's bastonnaut aff ane hingt
Jeopardin' the fever, or some quick mischance,
Or even the kinkhost, whup it aff at once
To fire God brimstone, in the black demaine
Of unbilievers and unchristened'd weans—
I'm sure ye never could forgie yersel'
Or rock your head in heaven, whit is—
Weesht, Maggie, weesht! name not the wicked place,
Though I'm wrang, but heaven will grant us grace
I haven been unmindin' o' the bairn.
Na, thocht can't till my bowls bigaun to yearn.
But woman, to my sorrow, I have found
O' minister is anything but owsad;
An' sooner break the half o' the commands
Than trust a bairn's bapteesment in his hands.
I mean nay ane minister's depraved;
In fact, in all respects he's weel behaved:
He weshis the hall parish, reek an' pair;
A worthier man, in worldly ways, I'm shure
Wee seldom hear: but och, woe's me, woe's me,
To deprive puir's ide head o' all agley.
Ye ken there's no Elect—all are the same;
An honest heart an' conduct free frae blame,
Is thinks mair likely, in the hour o' death,
To comfort ane than loads o' Bible faith;
And e'en the Atonements, women, be liebles
so,
I'm dooffe whether he believ't or no;
Puir sinnyfion, too, he almost sets aside,
He have no hopeless, wandering far an' wide,
And whether saved or damn'd we canna tell,
For every man must o'en redeem himsel'!
Then on the Resurrec ion he's clean wrang.
"I'll herefore," says he, "He in your grave ane lang?
The sperrit is the man, and it ascends
The very instant that your breathin' ends;
Yon body's buried, and will rise nae mair,
Though a' the horns in Heaven should rout and rair.
Sometimes he'll glint at Robbie Burn's deil,
As if he were a decent kind o' chiel,
But to the doon richt Satan o' Word,
Wha's nae I he deina pay the least regard.
An' thall he treats one brief and counts one nane,
That it amounts to nae sic place ava.
O dear I think our prayers an' holy chaunts,
And a' the self-denyin's of us saunts,
Are nat to be repaid by the delight
Of hearing from that region black as night
The yelling, gnashing, and despairing cry
Of wretches that in fire an' brimstane lie!
'Twill never do, guidwife, this daft divine Shall never lay hands on bairn o' yours and mine
Ye'er richt, guidman, rather than hands like his Bapteese the bairn, we'll keep it as it is—
For ayes an outlin' wi i a kilt and kla—
A hottentot, a heathen steep'd in sin!'
Sin did ye say, guidwife? ay there again
Our minister's the erringest o' men,
Original sin he almost lauchs to scorn,
An' says the purest thing's a babe new born,
Quite free from guile, corruption, guilt and all
The curses of a Necessary fall—
Yes, "necessary," was his very word!
Bapteese our bairns! 'tis morally absurd!
Then, Andra, we'll just let the bapteese be,
And pray to Heaven the bairn may never dee.
If providence, for ends known to itsel'
Has ower us placed this darkened riddel,
Let's trust that Providence will keep us richt,
And abilins turn our present derk to licht.
Meggie, my woman, ye'er baith richt and wrang;
Trust Providence, but diana sit ower lang
In idle hope that Providence will bring
Licht to your feet, or gay ither thing.
The Lord helps them that strives as weel as trust
While idle faith gets naethin but a crust.
So says this heather man—the only truth
We've ever gotten frae his graceless mouth.
Let's use the means, and Heaven will bless the end;
And, Meggie this is what I now intend—
That you and I, the morn, go forth,
Bearing the bairn along unto the north,
Like favoured ones of old, until we find
A man of upricht life, and godly mind,
Sound in the faith, matured in all its powers,
Fit to bapteese a weel-born bairn like ours—
Noo then the parritch—flesh maun e'en be fed—
An' I'll wale oot a chapter—syne to bed.

Josh Billings Papers.

DRIED FRUIT.

Error will slip thru a crack while truth will git stuck in a doorway.

The man who has just found out he kant afford tew burn green wood has taken big first lesson in ekonomy.

It is hard work, at first sight, tew see the wisdom ov a rattle-snak bite, but there in thousands of folks who never think of their sins until they are bit by a rattle-snak.

Take the bumbugg out ov this world and yu won't hav much left tew do bizziness with.

Advertising is sed to be a certain means of success; some people are so impressed with this truth, that it sticks out ov their tombstones.

There is this difference between ignorance and error; ignorance is stone blind, and error is near sighted; ignorance stands still and error only wores to run agin a post.

Ekonomy is a saving bank into which men drop penneys, and git dollars in return.

There is one thing yu kant put out and that is your conscience; you may smother it, but like a coal pit, it contains the charred remains.

The two richest men now living in America that I know ov is the one who has got the most money, and the other who wants the least; the last one is the happiest ov the two.

Ceremony is the necessity ov phools; and good breeding is the luxury ov the wise.

Tew be agreeable is simply to be easy pleezed—if this is so, how easy and pleasant it is tew be agreeable.

SOLLUM THOUGHTS.

Hope is a hen that lays more eggs than she can hatch.

I honestly believe it is better to know nothing at all, than tew know what ain't so.

If yu analize what folks call pleasure, you will find it is composed of one part humbug and two parts pain.

We have bin told that the best way to overcum misfortunes is to fight with them—I have tried both ways and recomend a successful dodge.

The art ov becoming ov importance in the eyes ov others, is not tew over-ate ourself, but cause them tew do it.

Conversashun should be enlivened with wit, not composed ov it.

Living on hope is like living on wind, a good way tew git plenty, but a poor way to git plump.

A naval officer being at sea in a storm, his wife, who was filled with alarm for the safety of the vessel, was so surprised at his composure that she cried out, 'My dear, are you not afraid? How is it possible you can be so calm in such a dreadful storm?' He rose from the chair he had to the deck, drew his sword, and, pointing to the breast of his wife, while he adjusted his life preserver, exclaimed, 'Are you not afraid of that sword?' She instantly answered 'No.' 'Why?' said the officer 'Because,' rejoined the lady, 'I know that it is in the hands of my husband, and he knows too well to hurt me—but if I die now, all my money will go to sister Bell.'

Archimedes, of Syracuse, declared that if the would give him a fulcrum and a sufficiently longer lever, he would move the world, but not knowing its weight he could not have formed a clear idea of the magnitude of the task. Supposing that he got his lever planted, and of sufficient length to move by exerting upon it a pulling force of thirty pounds; had he moved it through 10 000 feet per hour, for ten hours, a day the remote end of the lever would have to pass through an area which it would take 8,774,894,774,727 centuries to accomplish in order to raise the earth a single inch.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and improvement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children—and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly reliable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of dulness." It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world.

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada.

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a spasmodic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognise honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of TEMPERANCE in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention.

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

FEATHERS AT CHURCH.

Harper's Bazar is certainly not very Puritanic on questions of dress. Perhaps the good people who see there under headings to fine dressing things they suppose will [illegible] on this subject of dressing for church. It says:—"The best bred people of every Christian country but our own forbid all personal display when engaged in worship and prayer. Our church-es on the contrary, are made places for the exhibition of fine apparel and other vanity and flaunting complinaces with fashion, by those who boast of superior wealth and manners. We shall leave our gewgawed devotees to reconcile humiliation in worship with vanity in dress. That is a problem which we confess we have neither the right nor capacity to solve. How far fine clothes may affect the personal piety of the devotee we do not pretend even to conjecture; but we have a very decided opinion in regard to their influence upon the religion of others. The fact is, that our churches are so flattering with birds of fine feathers that no sorry fowl will venture in. It is impossible for poverty in rags and patches, or even in decent but humble costume, to take its seat, if it should be so fortunate as to find a place, by the side of wealth in brocade and broadcloth. The poor are so awed by the pretensions of superbly dress and the proud sinner's costume, that they naturally avoid too close a proximity to them. The church being the only place on this side of the grave, designed for the rich and the poor to meet together in equal prostration before God, it certainly should always be kept free for this common humiliation and brotherhood. It is so in most of the churches in Europe, where the beggar in rags and wretchedness, and the wealthiest and most eminent, whose appropriate sobriety of dress leaves them with a mark of external distinction, kneel down together, equally d by a common humiliation before the Supreme Being. The adoption of a more simple attire for the church on the part of the rich in this country would have the effect, certainly not of diminishing their own personal piety, but probably of increasing the dependence for religious observance on the part of the poor.'

A STRANGE GUEST.—A novel guest recently arrived at the Central Park of New York—a colossal female elephant named Andra, nearly twelve feet in height, and weighing nearly eighteen thousand pounds. She is but thirty-eight years old, and has a prospect of growing taller until fifty, at which age elephants attain their full stature. Even now, however, Andra is the tallest of her species that has been seen in the United States, although elephants sometimes grow to the height of fourteen feet. This huge animal consumes twenty five four pound loaves of bread daily together with three hundred pounds of oats and half that number of pounds of hay. She drinks twenty pails of water in the morning, and the same quantity each evening. As we were biking at Andra following her keeper in the meadow in front of the arsenal, and halting occasional to eat a little grass, two sturdy looking females, who were evidently new comers from the Emerald Isle, and were gazing for the first time on an elephant stopped near us, when one en ju ined to the companion, 'Dyee see the crayther a nibulin' up the grass wid his tail.

A RAGGED GENTLEMAN.—A few days since, a man, evidently down in the world with torn and ragged apparel, but yet with an appearance and manner that betokened better thing, was arrested on the levee in New Orleans as a dangerous and suspicious character. When informed by the officer that he should take him into custody, the tatterdemalion grew very indignant, and demanded of what he was accused.

'Of vagrancy, sir!'

'What, a I afer?'

'Yes, sir; or by whatever name you choose to call it.'

'And I'm arrested on this charge?'

'Yes, of having no visible means of support.'

The poor fellow contemplated himself ruefully for a moment, and then, with a sad smile, replied:

'Why, officer you must be insane. No visible means of support? Why look at me. My hands, feet, legs, even my body's visible.' 'Why, I'm the most visible person you've ever seen in your life.'

Sir Walter Scott said seriously, in his autobiography, "Through every part of my literary career I have felt pinched and hampered by my own ignorance." Such is true wisdom. The wiser a man really becomes the more he begins to feel, as the sage of old did, when he said, "The longer I live, the more persuaded I become that I know nothing."

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to a climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & FILER, Convey P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

TAMWORTH, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEBB, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

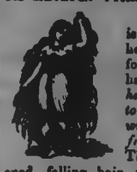
Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

As generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or state that assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the subsidious which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is nowise injurious any patient. The number and importance of its cures in these districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

"MAIST ONER DAY."

The following ballad lines (reminiscent of our sojourn in Perth, 1859) were composed by Thursday Swain, the youngest partner of the firm, and sent to his son, then a resident of Peterborough.

Ye lass, dear bairn, that we sinna part;
When death could doom, that bid us sinna
But when he'll send his dreadfu' dart
He can't say.
He we'll be ready for his ern
Maist onie day.

We'll keep a' right an' guide we'll,
Our mark will then be free frae sin;
Upright we'll step thro' thick and thin,
And when we can't say nay;
Deaf just ot a', the pike we'll win
Maist onie day.

Ye ken there's Ane who's just an' true,
Has said that a' his bairns should rin
An' tour at-ose the lofty skies,
And there shall stay;
Being well prepared, we'll gain the prize
Maist onie day.

When he who made a' things just right
Shall ca' us hence to realms of light,
Be it morn, or noon, or eve, or night,
We will obey
We'll be prepared to ta' our flight
Maist onie day.

Our temps we'll fill brankin' o' sel
That's guide an' pome— that evilus spell;
We'll keep them burning a' the while,
To light our way.
Our wark bein' done, we'll quit the toil
Maist onie day.

MISS O'NEIL.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED.

The day that Sibylle had commenced with this act of solemn faith was a Sunday, and, according to their usage, the family of Ferias, after a hasty breakfast, went to the parish church. They reached it a few minutes before the hour of mass, and the little nave was almost empty. The choir alone was occupied by a group composed of the Beaumesnil family and the curate.—Madame de Beaumesnil, noticeable from a more bustling and important manner than was usual, was giving the final touches to the decorations of a little table, placed in front of the principal altar, upon which lay a wax figure, with painted cheeks, eyes of enamel, and curled hair, enclosed in a framework of paper-flowers and chenille ornaments. About this image, the pious and spiritual gift of Madame de Beaumesnil, were exhibited sundry colored prints, which principally represented hearts of all dimensions, some pierced with arrows, some flaming, and some with wings. The curate, the Chevalier Theodore, and Mademoiselle Constance were contemplating this edifying work of art with delighted eyes, while Monsieur de Beaumesnil was indulging in a burst of stupid and vacant laughter.

'What is it?' said Sibylle, approaching curiously.

'My child,' said Madame de Beaumesnil, 'it's a new Christ, I have had brought from Paris.'

The crowd now entered the nave and put an end to the dialogue. Sibylle took her place upon the family bench; but the Marquis observed that she did not pray with her usual devotion. Sibylle's distraction was, for that matter, shared by all the congregation, who, during the ceremony, did not cease to cast inquisitive glances at the little supplementary altar, and to exchange with each other whispers and smiles. When the mass was over, the curiosity, so long pent up, and so painfully restrained, burst forth, and the crowd took the chair by assault. At the critical moment the Chevalier Theodore Desgrais, opposing his long arms to the invading wave, and raising above the sound of the tumult his chevalier's voice, succeeded in changing the rout into an orderly procession; then, adopting the part of cicerone, he explained to each curious group the graces and the merits of the waxen figure, whose enamelled eyes he took pleasure in moving both ward and forward by means of an ingenious spring. The impressions which this scene produced upon the minds of those present were of different kinds; some men, when hardly outside the door, laughed heartily at the Christ of Madame de Beaumesnil; some old women, seized with a sudden devotion for this image, vowed to it an offering of candles. Madame de Ferias, at the pressing invitation of Madame de Beaumesnil, had the politeness to join the number of these vulgar proselytes.

Sibylle, on returning to the chateau, was noticeably silent and sad. Had she been shocked by the indecent familiarities of such an episode, contrasted with the solemn rites she had conceived of the Divinity, and of the war-ship which was his due? Did the straight-forward and unbending logic which characterized the intelligence of children suggest to her on this occasion reflections of a nature more serious still? Whatever were her thoughts, the child kept them to herself.

But now the epoch fixed for her first communion was approaching. The Abbe Renaud came every day to the chateau of Ferias, dined with the family at noon, and, after dinner, gave Sibylle a lesson in the catechism. One afternoon, Monsieur de Ferias, who, a few moments before, had left his grandchild shut up with the curate, was surprised to meet her suddenly in the garden.

'What are you doing here?' he asked; 'has the curate gone already?'

'No,' said Sibylle, inconcisely; 'he is asleep.'

'Asleep!' said the Marquis; 'does he often go to sleep so?'

'Very often after dinner.'

'No matter,' said Monsieur de Ferias gravely. 'It was your duty to wait with patience until he awoke. I do not like either your assistant or your manner. They are not respectful.'

This was the first time that Monsieur de Ferias had addressed to Sibylle's mentor toward the curate and to her language a severely perceptible shade of irreverence, almost of disdain. He was alarmed at this singular symptom, as well as by the melancholy ways which he had recently observed in the child, and by the old inclination for solitude, which she again manifested. At the same time, strangely enough, he thought the perverted a sudden alteration in the character of the curate, whose health also seemed to be failing. This day's incident [illegible] a new impression to these observations. After the lesson, the Marquis and Marchioness met for the curate. The good man came on, panting under the weight of fifteen enormous quarts to refresh, which [illegible] when you there, Abbe?' said Monsieur de Ferias.

'The Father's Monsieur le Marquis.'

'Ah! the Fathers?'

'Yes, a few volumes of the Fathers that I have taken the liberty to borrow from your library, and that I am taking to the Presbytery.'

'Ah! you are re-reading the Fathers, Abbe?'

'Yes, Monsieur le Marquis. I propose to go over them again, and I am sorry I had not done so before. But I can give my nights to it if necessary.'

M. de Ferias coughed slightly.

'Ahem! What zeal Abbe, what zeal! And you are still content with Sibylle, my friend?'

A slight blush overspread the cheeks of the old priest.

'Certainly, Monsieur le Marquis, but the child is clever, you know.'

'Do you mean to say, Abbe, that she possesses upon her cleverness?'

'Dear me, Monsieur le Marquis, if any one is to be blamed in this matter, it is only myself. Before undertaking to discuss difficult questions with such a subtle intelligence, I ought to have brightened up my theological arsenal, for it has been somewhat rusty of late.'

'What! the child disputes with you, curate?'

'To tell the truth, Monsieur le Marquis, latterly she does on a good deal. To-day, particularly, she raised some really embarrassing objections.'

'Objections! what sort of objections, my dear Abbe?'

'To almost every thing. Monsieur le Marquis, and especially in relation to the Mysteries.'

'The Mysteries! But this isn't natural, Abbe. The Mysteries ought not to astonish the intelligence of a child, for to children all things are mysterious. There must be some purpose in her conduct.'

'In fact, Monsieur le Marquis, I have sometimes thought so.'

'Explain yourself, my worthy friend. Do you suspect Miss O'Neil of exercising any bad influence over the mind of Sibylle?'

The Abbe Renaud extended his arms and slightly shrugged his shoulders.

'Alas! I do not know to think,' said he. 'I must acknowledge that whenever Miss O'Neil has been present at our lessons, she has conducted herself with the most perfect propriety; but it is plain to see that I am losing every day the confidence and even the respect of the child.'

In the anguish which wrung the heart of the old Marquis, no circumstance could have been more disagreeable than the arrival of Madame de Beaumesnil, who was now introduced into the parlor. Madame de Beaumesnil, however, was inclined to show some moderation in her triumph at the trouble of her neighbors and the accomplishment of her prophecies. She contented herself with taking the attitude of a dejected sage for whom the hour of justice has at last struck and asked tranquilly if Miss O'Neil was still at the chateau.

'Certainly, Madame,' said the Marquis. 'Misfortune should not make us unjust. Miss O'Neil is as yet only suspected; but I will admit that a matter of such importance should be investigated without delay. Come with us, Abbe.'

Monsieur de Ferias, on leaving the parlor, met a domestic who had just quitted Mademoiselle Sibylle and Miss O'Neil under the old oak. Thither the Marquis and the curate directed their steps. On the way they agreed that it was now no time to listen to scruples of delicacy, and that the only way of ascertaining the truth was to overhear the conversation between Miss O'Neil and her pupil. So they cautiously approached through the thicket, and succeeded in reaching unperceived the fringe of trees and bushes which bordered the clearing. Miss O'Neil, seated upon the Druid-stone, was holding a celestial globe, and explained its mechanism to Sibylle, who knelt beside her on a cushion, and pointed, from time to time with her hand, toward the different quarters of the sky, as if she were lifted along upon the firmament some theological demonstrations. The lesson was just ending, for the Irish girl laid down the globe, and after some trifling remark upon the beauty of the day, detached from the trunk of the old oak some bits of moss, and put them into the hand of her attentive pupil. Miss O'Neil at first called Sibylle's attention to the delicate and complicated structure of these innumerable flowerets enlaced each detail with precision; then discovering in this velvety nest a whole tribe of small-winged insects, she told her the name of these microscopic creatures and described their peculiar habits.

'You cannot think, my dear child,' added Miss O'Neil, 'how much I love to descend into these mysterious and despised worlds, and to witness there the working of the Creator's hand; to see there, as plainly as in the majestic system of the universe, the goodness of his kind, paternal care. It does my soul good. It is sometimes necessary to me that a humble creature like myself, that her obscure life and her feeble prayer cannot hope to engage the interest of that God who reigns amid the stars. I look at one of these bits of moss, where His providence is as visible as in the sun itself, and I take heart again.'

'I love God,' said Sibylle.

'And He loves you my dear.'

'I don't know,' said the child.

Miss O'Neil looked at her fixedly.

'You have not thought lately, Sibylle.'

'Very sad, Miss O'Neil.'

And a tear rolled down the pale cheeks of the little one.

'And you don't confide them to me, my child.'

'You have forbidden me to speak to you of religion,' said Sibylle, timidly.

'Certainly, my child. There are indeed some grand religious ideas common to all thinking beings, and above all human controversy, such as the idea of a creative God, and these I can educate mingle with my teachings, since they are a part of all the subjects of my teachings; but to refer with you into questions of doctrine, or to discuss particular points of faith, would be a breach of my duty toward your family, and toward my own conscience, which gratitude, delicacy, and even common honesty, impose upon me. I shall never do it. Let us not talk then of your troublesome; they are connected with religion. But let me say that I do not bring to the consideration of these things enough [illegible] and [illegible] of which I am conscious.'

'I do not think you have, Miss O'Neil,' said Sibylle, with a kind of fright; 'but there is only one blessed Virgin, Madame!'

Madame de Beaumesnil reflected a moment, then said hesitatingly:

'Of course, of course; but no matter—try to go to sleep, Mademoiselle, instead of chattering without rhyme or reason, like a blind magpie.'

In obedience to this pressing recommendation, Sibylle sought for sleep with eager desire, but it was long before she could escape from the confusion of ideas which tormented her brain.

The days which followed this first day of trial were quite similar to it, and we will pass them by. After three weeks of this regimen, Sibylle, so gentle and silent as a dove, was ruled with pride by Madame de Beaumesnil as a most exemplary nephyte.

'From ten times forward,' she said, 'Mademoiselle de Ferias is as well prepared as I am myself for the highest duties of religion.'

Great, then, was the surprise of this lady when Sibylle came one morning to the arbor at the usual hour, and tranquilly stated her determination to take no more lessons. It was quite useless, she said as she had decided not to take her first communion this year.

At this astounding speech, Madame de Beaumesnil, who had suddenly turned as red as a peony, rose upright upon her feet-stool, like a pythoness on her tripod, and as only pythoness composed the commencement of the curate.

'And why will you not take your first communion, Mademoiselle, if you please?' said Madame de Beaumesnil in a hissing voice.

'I have thoughts that do not permit of it, Madame,' said Sibylle.

'What thoughts? Will you be good enough to let us hear them?'

'I cannot tell them.'

'Mighty well! Mademoiselle. Ah! the deceitful little wretch! Ah! what a whipping you would get, my pet, if I were your mother.'

'Fortunately, Madame, you are not my mother,' said Sibylle.

Madame de Beaumesnil descended from her foot-stool, looked at her for a moment, and then, not loving at liberty to kill her, withdrew.

A half hour later, the Abbe Renaud made his entry into the courtyard of the chateau of Ferias, accompanied by Sibylle, who had refused all explanation.

She stole unseen to her chamber, while the curate, wiping away the great drops of sweat which rolled down his face like tears, presented himself at the parlor. On hearing the strange determination of their grand daughter, Monsieur and Madame de Ferias were struck dumb. The blow had touched the most delicate and sensitive parts of their being; their tenderness, their consideration, their pride much suffered, each kind. Miss O'Neil who was present, shared their grief.

Sibylle was safe so far. She came at once. Her pallor was frightful. As she approached to embrace her grandfather, the old man shocked her by a motion of his head.

'It is nothing,' said he. 'I have been reading part of the night.'

After breakfast he was better, and finding himself in a satisfactory frame of mind, he led Sibylle into an arbor in the garden, placed on the table his cup of coffee, from which he took a spoonful from time to time and refused in a victorious manner all the theses objections which Sibylle had raised the evening before. Madame de Beaumesnil had taken her seat beside them with her knitting, and watched Sibylle with a severe eye. The lesson was concluded without a single question from the child, contrary to the usual custom.

As a reward for this docility, Madame de Beaumesnil set up at once in the Chinese parlor a little chapel, and adorned it with shells and images of devotion, and the chevalier began to chant vespers upon it as if he had been in the church-choir, while Sibylle looked on with amusement. To this edifying amusement a crowded some pious readings, performed alternatively by Madame de Beaumesnil and Mademoiselle Constance, in a psalm-singing tone, which was interrupted from time to time by a scolding administered, in their ordinary voices, to the beggars in the courtyard.—They did not seem to comprehend what they read, and might reasonably have given as an excuse that the books they read from were incomprehensible. For these women did not seek for instruction or consolation among the works so rich and so varied, of the great men and saints who in every age have come home to the Church and to the human intellect by lending to the cause of truth a style and language worthy of her. They needed something better.—They delighted in those silly mystical productions in which all moral and religious truths are hidden under the folded wings of a refined symbolism. The stilted and empty pharaseology of this debased literature had the advantage of gently flattering the foolishness of their minds, the languor of their souls, and the slumber of their consciences, while it seemed to sanctify them. Sibylle, after having in vain attempted to apprehend the meaning of this verbiage, had ended by going to sleep. She was suddenly awakened by the formidable voice of the chevalier, who was intoning a psalm, assisted by the contralto of Madame de Beaumesnil and the thin treble of Mademoiselle Constance. Sibylle joined by request the spiritual concert.

The same day, Monsieur and Madame de Ferias came to dine at the manor.—Madame de Beaumesnil informed them of the complete success of their experiment, and received in return their affectionate thanks. The dinner was without incidents. Sibylle expressed some astonishment that Miss O'Neil had not come to see her, and Madame de Ferias explained that she had been detained at home by a slight indisposition. Whereupon Madame de Beaumesnil thought proper to express the hope that Miss O'Neil might not die of her illness, for if she died she would go straight to hell, and it was painful to think of it. This proposition, sustained by murmured expressions of condescendence, made Sibylle open wide her eyes, and she evidently had some difficulty in picturing to herself Madame de Beaumesnil crowned with a halo of glory, among the elect, and Miss O'Neil over against her in the depths of the abyss.

That evening when Sibylle was going to bed, as Madame de Beaumesnil embraced her, she discovered on the folds of her night-dress a little silver medal, the gift of her grandmother.

'What have you there, my child?' said she, and examined the medal. 'Take off this,' she continued, 'and I will give you a better one.'

She opened a bureau and took from it a box full Madame de Beaumesnil had medals of all sorts; some were good, others better, and others again best of all. One of these last she hung around Sibylle's neck, and explained to her its particular virtues.

'But I should like to keep mine too,' said Sibylle.

'You may, my child, but you must not be surprised if yours becomes in a few days all tarnished like lead.'

'Why, Madame?'

'It is a miracle that often happens,' said Madame de Beaumesnil, 'when a medal is jealous of its sister.'

'What! of its sister? Of what sister?' said Sibylle, with a kind of fright; 'but there is only one blessed Virgin, Madame!'

Madame de Beaumesnil reflected a moment, then said hesitatingly:

'Of course, of course; but no matter—try to go to sleep, Mademoiselle, instead of chattering without rhyme or reason, like a blind magpie.'

THE COUNTY COURT.

At the sittings of the County Court of the County of Peterboro' held on Tuesday, the 17th inst., before His Honor Judge Dean, there were 20 cases on the list for trial, but only 5 were disposed of, the remainder being settled out of Court. The following are the cases disposed of:—

Thomas Hall vs. Thomas Hall, Sen., and Thomas Hall, Jun. Action for trespass to land. Verdict for plaintiff, with 40s. damages and costs.

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to aid and assist the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving $10,000 to the Company by way of bonus, and to issue debentures therefor, and to authorize the levying of such a rate as will pay the said debentures and the interest thereon:

WHEREAS by the act of the Second Session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, passed in the Thirty-second Year of Her Majesty's Reign, incorporating the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company, it is provided that:—"It shall further be lawful for any Municipality or Municipalities through any part of which, or near which the Railway or works of the said Company shall pass or be situated, or which may be benefited thereby, to aid and assist the said Company by loaning or guaranteeing, or giving money by way of bonus, or other means to the Company, or by issuing Municipal Bonds to or in aid of the Company, and otherwise in such manner and to such extent as such Municipalities or any of them shall think expedient—provided always that no such aid, loan, bonus, or guarantee shall be given except after the passing of By-laws for the purpose and the adoption of such By-laws by the ratepayers as provided in the Railway Act."

And whereas the Municipality of the Township of Harvey has determined to aid and assist the said Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars by way of bonus, under the authority conferred by the said above recited Act,

And whereas to carry the last recited object into effect it is necessary for the said Municipality to issue debentures for the said sum of $10,000, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable in the manner hereinafter provided.

And whereas the amount of the whole rateable property of the said Municipality, according to the last revised assessment roll of the said Municipality, being for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, was one hundred and four thousand six hundred and ninety-eight dollars.

It is therefore enacted by the Council of the Corporation of the Municipality of the Township of Harvey, in the County of Peterboro', and Province of Ontario:

I. That it shall and may be lawful for the said Municipality to aid and assist the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars.

II. That it shall be lawful for the purposes aforesaid, for the Reeve of the said Municipality to cause any number of debentures to be made for such sums of money as may be required for the said purpose, not less than twenty-five dollars each, and not exceeding in the whole the amount of ten thousand dollars, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Municipality, and be signed by the Reeve and Treasurer thereof.

III. That the said debentures shall be made payable at the office of the Bank of Toronto, in the Town of Peterboro', and shall have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest at the rate and in the manner hereinafter mentioned. Such debentures being made payable for the following amounts, at the following times, that is to say on the thirtieth day of December in each of the following years there shall become due and be paid, namely:—in 1871, Two Hundred Dollars.

1872, Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1873, Three Hundred Dollars.
1874, Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1875, Four Hundred Dollars.
1876, Four Hundred Dollars.
1877, Four Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1878, Four Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1879, Four Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars
1880, Five Hundred Dollars.
1881, Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1882, Five Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1883, Six Hundred Dollars.
1884, Six Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1885, Six Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1886, Seven Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1887, Seven Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1888, Eight Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars
1889, Nine Hundred Dollars.

Making in all the said sum of ten thousand dollars.

IV. That the said debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per cent per annum from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half-yearly on the thirtieth day of June and December in each year at the Bank of Toronto in the said Town of Peterboro'.

V. That for the purpose of paying the said debentures, and the interest thereon as aforesaid, there shall be raised, levied and collected, a special rate in each year, in addition to all other rates upon all the rateable property in the said Municipality during the said term of twenty years, from the coming into effect of this By-law, unless such debentures shall be sooner paid, and such rate shall be sufficient to pay the debentures falling due, and all interest on the then outstanding debentures hereby authorized to be issued falling due within the year for which such rate is levied.

VI. That this By-law shall take effect on, from and after the thirtieth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

VII. That the debentures to be signed and issued as aforesaid, shall be delivered by the Reeve of the Municipality to the Trustees appointed [or to be appointed] in accordance with the Eleventh Section of the Act incorporating the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company.

VIII. And it is further enacted by the Municipal Council aforesaid that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken on the proposed By-law at the following place, that is to say, at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on the eighth day of September, A. D. 1869, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and closing at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, and that the following person shall be Returning Officer, for taking the said votes, namely: Wm. McJames Hall, Clerk of the said Municipality.

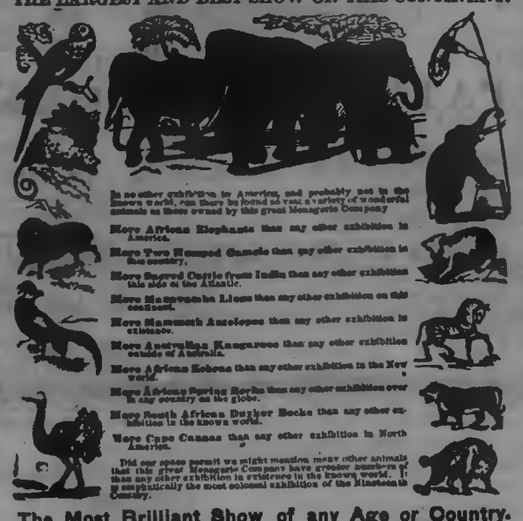
VAN AMBURGH & Co's
GREAT GOLDEN MENAGERIE,

Will Exhibit in Peterborough,

WEDNESDAY, AFTERNOON AND EVENING,

AUGUST 25, 1869.

THE LARGEST AND BEST SHOW ON THIS CONTINENT.



In no other exhibition in America, and probably not in the known world, can there be found so rare a variety of wonderful animals as those owned by this great Menagerie Company

More African Elephants than any other exhibition in America.

More Two Humped Camels than any other exhibition in the country.

More Spotted Cattle from India than any other exhibition this side of the Atlantic.

More Maneless Lions than any other exhibition on this continent.

More Mammoth Anacondas than any other exhibition in existence.

More Australian Kangaroos than any other exhibition outside of Australia.

More African Eclands than any other exhibition in the New World.

More African Spring Bucks than any other exhibition ever in any country on the globe.

More South African Dwarf Bucks than any other exhibition in the known world.

More Cape Canaan than any other exhibition in North America.

Did our space permit we might mention many other animals that this great Menagerie Company have greater numbers of than any other exhibition in existence in the known world. It is emphatically the most colossal exhibition of the Nineteenth Century.

The Most Brilliant Show of any Age or Country.

The Performances.

In the Great Golden Menagerie are strictly of a Zoological character.

The Great War Elephant, Tippoo Saib,

The largest Elephant in the known world, will be introduced at each exhibition by

CHARLES JOHNSON, Esq.,

Formerly the friend and companion of that noted African explorer,

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

In his recent travels through uninhabited Central Africa.

Jocko, the Brazilian Ape,

And his Low Comedy Pony, FLYING SCUD, in miniature scene act. The grotesque and ludicrous Shetland Ponies,

HORACE GREELEY AND CHARLES DICKENS.

And the magnificent Andalusian Blood Mare, PAULINE.

Also the quizzical Lilliputian Mules, DARBY AND TOBY in their great Leaping and Acension Specialties.

The Educated Cynocephalus,

Exhibited in Paris for upwards of twelve months to the most aristocratic and enthusiastic audiences.

WILLIS COBB, ESQ.,

Will introduce his accomplished and intelligent Canine Quadrupeds, giving an exhibition of dexterity and sagacity hitherto unparalleled. A pupil of

THE GREAT VAN AMBURGH.

The Dauntless and Daring King of the Lion Conquerors, will during each exhibition give a remarkable demonstration of his control over the Brute creation, feeding them with RAW MEAT FROM HIS BARED HAND.

THE ONLY COMPLETE MENAGERIE ON THIS CONTINENT.

EXTRAORDINARY AMUSEMENT.

JUST ADDED

To the Great Golden Menagerie A FULL CARGO OF LIVING ANIMALS brought by the Agent of the Great Menagerie Company direct from Africa, consisting of many animal never before seen on this continent. Some of the varieties were never on exhibition in any Menagerie in the known world, and are entirely new to naturalists, having recently been discovered in the very heart of unapproachable Central Africa by the Agent of this Great Menagerie Company while accompanying Dr. Livingstone on his recent tour of discovery through that unbounded region.

Remember they are to be seen only in the Great Golden Menagerie.

A LIVING GIRAFFE,
A LIVING BLACK RHINOCEROS,
THE GREAT AFRICAN ELAND,
The Only WHITE ZEBRA ever Captured,
A WHITE TARTARY YAK,
A ROCKY MOUNTAIN MOOSE,

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Sir James Clarke's Female Pills are extensively COUNTERFEITED. The genuine have the name of "JOB MOSES" on each package. All others are worthless.

Sold in Peterborough by J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, Wm. Coulter, and Ormond & Walsh. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

GOING TO SLEEP.

Happy stars, in pleasant places,
Will you turn your happy faces,
So that I can see you shine
In this little bed of mine?

When the shades begin to fall,
You come flocking, one and all,
To the pathway of the skies
With a smile in your sweet eyes.

And I wonder where you stay,
All the bright and tender day;
Why you never linger long,
When the bird begins his song.

If you hear the sweet brown thrush
Break the morning's starry hush,
If the sparrow's "chip she chee"
Reaches us to where you are?

While I go to sleep, dear star,
Will you stay just where you are?
So that I may find you there,
Not the sky all blue and bare?

With my little prayers all said—
Prayers for love and daily bread—
I may hear the songs you sang,
When the Heavenly Child was young.

SNUFF TAKING.

"What a moment, what a doubt!
All my sense is inside out—
All my thrilling, tickling caustic,
Pyramid ribbons eatic
Wants to sneeze, and can not do it!
How it seems me, thrill me, stings me!
How that rapturous torment flies me!
Now says, 'Sneeze, you goose, get through it!
Shoo—shoo—oh, 'tis most delishi!
Ishi—ishi—most delishi!
(Hang it, I shall sneeze till spring!)
Snuff's a most delicious thing.

DIDN'T WANT TO BE INSULTED.—A few years ago a recently married couple from the country—not Colborne, spent a portion of that romantic season denominated the 'honey-moon,' in our burg, and, of course, put up and enjoyed the hospitalities of the Cawnels house. During dinner, the young lady was observed to turn red and pale by turns, but this was laid to her new position as wife. But Scroggs, who was a sharp cur, heard her ask her husband:

'Is my face dirty?'

Dirty! No, why do you ask?'

'Because that insulting waiter insists on putting a towel beside my plate. I've thrown three under the table, and yet every time he comes around he puts another before me.'

A good joke is told of a young man who attended a social circle a few evenings since. The conversation turned on Californis and getting rich. To——remarked that if he was in California he would, instead of working in the mines, waylay some rich man who had a bag full of gold, knock out his brains, gather up the gold, and skedaddle. One of the young ladies quietly replied that he had better gather up the brains, as he evidently stood in more need of that article than gold. Turn subsided.

A Missourian informed a traveller who inquired about his corn that each stalk had nine ears on it and was 15 feet high. 'That's nothing to our corn,' replied the traveller. 'Up in Illinois, where I came from, we always had nine ears to each stalk, and a peck of shelled corn hanging to each tassel; but we would never raise any field beans with it.' 'Why,' 'Because the corn grew so fast that it always pulled the beans up.'

An Irishman's friend having fallen into a slough, the Irishman called loudly to another for assistance. The latter, who was busily engaged in cutting a log, and wished to procrastinate, inquired 'How deep is the gentleman in?'—'Up to his ankles.'—'Then there is plenty of time,' said the other.—'No there is not,' rejoined the first; 'I forgot to tell you he's in head first.'

At a late military dinner, one of the visitors proposed a toast—'May the man who has lost one eye in the service of his country never see distress with the other!' but the person whose duty it was to give the toast, by omitting the word 'distress,' completely changed the sentiment.

Lady (who is canvassing for a choir at the village church): I hope, Mrs. Giles, you will persuade your husband to join us? I am told he has a very sonorous voice, Mrs. G.: A sonorous voice, marm! A., you should hear 'im a comin' out of his nose when he's asleep!

A poor man, who had a termagant wife, after a long dispute, in which she was determined to have the last word, told her if she spoke one more cracked word he would beat her. 'Why then ram horns, you brute, said she, 'if I die for it.'

TOO HAPPY.—A newly married man Iowa East says if had as much more of happiness he could not possibly live. His wife is obliged to roll him on the floor and pat him with a brick-bat every day to keep him from being too happy.

A traveller stopped at an inn in a neighboring village, and finding the landlord and landlady fighting, cried out: 'Hallo, who keeps this house?' The wife replied: 'That's just what we are trying to decide.'

A dandy, at an hotel table, who wanted the milk passed to him, thus asked for it: 'Please send your cow this way.' To whom the lady replied as follows: 'Waiter take the cow down to where the calf is bleating.'

NONSENSE.—Teacher at Sunday School: Now, my boy, please to understand the meaning of the word Apostle is sent. Apt Pupil: Oh, yes! please, sir, I know—like Sent Paul, sir, and Sent Peter, and Sent Patrick.

'Nothing can be well done that is done in a hurry,' evenually declared a certain pompous politician in New York, one day lately, on the steps of the City Hall. 'How about catching fleas?' asked a wag at his elbow. The politician was floored.

The signboard of a tavern near Strasbourg, in France, bears the following inscription: 'Strong beer and wine of the first quality. Customers drinking more than twelve glasses will be sent home in a cab, free of charge, in case they are unable to walk.'

Warning.—'I must get married,' said an old bachelor to his married friend, 'for I never can find a button on a clean shirt.' 'Take care,' said the benedict, with a sigh 'or you may chance upon a wife who will not find you a clean shirt to button.'

Teddy, my boy just guess how many cherries there is there bag, and faith I'll give you the whole fire. Five, said Teddy. Oh bad luck to them as nothing.

In almost every instance where a man marries a sensible woman, it is after he has met with a severe disappointment in not marrying a fool.

To kiss a rosy-cheeked girl and find your mouth filled with Vesuvius red, and she gradually growing pale to it, is truly awful.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good, Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and advancement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsurpassed in purity, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly readable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of dulness." It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shams, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

THE NEWS DEPARTMENT will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world

THE RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and Canada

IN POLITICS it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a sycophantic support to all the Ministries of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognize honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of TEMPERANCE in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

AGRICULTURE AND HORTICULTURE will receive special attention

All advertisements announcing circus, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

TERMS:—Per Annum, $3.00; per Week, 5 cents; Single Copies 1 cent.

CLUBS.—Temperance Organizations or others sending Clubs will be furnished at the following rates:—

Ten copies one year (per copy) $2 50
Twenty and upwards 2 00

An Episode of Convent Life.

The telegraph lately made us acquainted with the fact of certain customs prevailing at Cracow directed against the directors of a convent in that city. The Neue Free Presse of Vienna now informs us of the cause of the angry feeling. The criminal tribunal of Cracow having received anonymous information that in a convent belonging to the order of Bernhardine Carmelites a man had been imprisoned for many years, a judicial commission, furnished with due authority from the Bishop, was appointed to ascertain the fact of the case. Having obtained admission to the convent, after some resistance on the part of the nuns, the commissioners visited the cells, which were found to be untenanted. Coming at last to an iron-barred door, they demanded the key, which was refused by the nuns on the ground that the door was never opened, and that the lock was completely immovable through rust. The commissioners insisting the door was at last opened, and a frightful a cetacle was presented to their view. In a space of less than four feet long and two feet wide, in complete darkness, lay an almost shapeless and repulsive heap, which was found to be a sick living skeleton of a woman, whose body was encrusted with a thick coating of dirt and filth of all kinds. This woman was Barbara Ubrick, born in 1817, who entered the convent as a nun in 1841. Since the year 1848 she had been confined in this hole. At the sight of human beings the unfortunate creature, drawing her hand across her forehead and eyes, exclaimed, "Why do you not give me the coffee which you promised me two years ago?" She then launched into an outburst of reproach, coughed up the grossest lotions. The Bishop en partibus, having been sent for, made his appearance, and was received by the unhappy victim with loud curses, but he managing his self as having come to release her she threw herself at his feet. The Bishop, indignant at the scene, questioned the females of the convent who declared that the poor wretch was an insane nun, who tore up all her clothing to which the Bishop replied that 24 hours of such imprisonment would make him insane. The miserable woman was removed to an hospital but the story of her treatment caused great excitement and led to threatening demonstrations against the convent.

Witchcraft in England.

A case of alleged witchcraft came before the Walsall magistrates. Mary Pursant, a married woman, was charged with having assaulted Ann Tipton. The complainant, who had been very kind to defendant, called upon her one day last week, she having been recently confined, and asked her how she was. The defend at replied 'I would a much better if you would pray for me.' The complaint said, "I wish you well, I am sure, but, as I am not a professed prayer, I can't think I could do much in that way.—But why do you ask me to do so? Surely you don't think I have done you any harm." Defendant said, "I do, for I saw you, that night you were throwing something in the fire while you were looking at my husband's watch. But if you will kneel down and bless me, I will be got better." The complainant then did as she was requested. A day or two afterwards, as the defendant ran at her own door, the complainant, who was passing, asked her to step into the house, and then said, "I have been to a man at Walsall, who told me that you have witched me, and I must draw your blood, in order that I may be cured. He also said you witched a blacksmith at Coalpool, and I have sent to Mr. Wray, bookseller, for two fortune telling books, to see if it is true." The defendant then darted at the complainant as scratched her face, and attempted to cut her with a knife, but she made her escape. The bench fined the defendant ten shillings and costs, or, in default, one month's imprisonment.

TEMPERANCE AND PAUPERS.—The New York Evening Times gives the following practical testimony to the value of taverns which don't sell intoxicating liquors, and of making paupers self-supporting, and thereby ceasing to be paupers:—

About thirty years ago, a few citizens of New Braintree, in Massachusetts, met together and resolved that the best interests of the town required a tavern in which spirituous liquors should not be sold, as the fact was patent to all that too many of the young men in the place would congregate at the "village inn," and were forming habits of social drinking. After talking over the importance of the matter and satisfying themselves that the enterprise they proposed would not prove a paying one they subscribed some $7,000 built a hotel, furnished it, and engaged a landlord to run it free of rent. Soon after this reform, the people of the town came to the conclusion that it was unprofitable business to farm out the poor of the town, as had long been the practice, to the lowest bidder; and at the town meeting they voted to buy a poor house farm, and put the poor at work. This was carried into effect.—Twenty-five years have passed away, and, going to that quiet, thrifty town not long ago, the stage driver said to us on passing the "poor-house farm," "There is a funny place." "Why so?" we asked. "Because it is the poor-house farm, and not a pauper in it. And I suppose the reason is, some thirty years ago a temperance tavern was started here—no liquors have been sold, and there is no drinking nor drunkenness, and not a pauper in the town."

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; unimmediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to tend the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our South-ern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance arose much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & BELL, Gurney P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

YAMA, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 8th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually, during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and used lots of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. P. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine has attained is derived from the many remarkable cures it has performed of chronic and apparently incurable diseases, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous humors, and diseases which were aggravated by the scorbutic taint, have been radically cured. Even those which they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in adult years in almost every section of this country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or pow.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism perverts the vital principles and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Accumulating in the lungs it induces consumption; and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by ovulcerous sore on the skin, or fatal ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the professional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and in many cases, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworms, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. In the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the female system.

Syphilitic or Pulmonal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for eradicating these obstinate maladies by any purgative. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the most inveterate. Leucorrhœa or White, Uterine Obstructions, and Female Diseases, are regularly seen relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of corruscous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also the Gravel, Calculous, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the same poisonous cause in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Tormented and Tortured, Prostrated, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one pestilence is so universally regarded by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally employed from one end of civilized man to the other. The obvious reason is, that it is a remedy reliable and for more effectual than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that when it does cure it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cases are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Being sugar coated, everyone knows how to take them, and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which they promptly cure:—

For the Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Sick, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Disorders, Bilious Fevers, Inflammation or Green Sickness, Jaundice, Dysentery, Colic and Spasmodic Pevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the disordered action or remove the cause—as in all cases it only does is generally required.

For Erysipelas or Blotches, Blotches, Eruptions of the Skin, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum and Ulcers, they should be continued till cured, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With each change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to purge from the system the cause of a dreadful malady.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

As a mild and gentle purgative for children and beyond their healthy influence upon the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it is often administered where no serious derangement exists. One who feels miserably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Poetry.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

She is counting, sometimes wildly;
Pass and repass, but not heed;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow,
Red one young and one not old;
Half trembling, half resolved;
Now retreating, and now shy;
There is mischief in her laughter,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is wise and he is very soft,
She has taken her diploma
At the university of heart.
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile;
She is quick to comprehend glances,
But a widow all the while.

Are you sad? oh! then how serious
Will her pretty face become!
Are you angry? she a wretched,
Sadly sad, friendless, fearful, dumb.
Are you watchful? how her laughter,
Silver sounding, will ring out!
She can lure and catch and play you
As an angler does a trout.

All old Beaufs, nearing fifty,
Who are plotting deep and wise;
And Adonises of twenty,
With the love-light in your eyes—
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Ovaid down the hall;
But I know a little widow
Who can win and fool you all.

CHAPTER VII.

THE BOAT.

The first days of autumn had come. It was Sunday, M. and Madame de Ferias, who were dining at the presbytery, had sent home the carriage in the morning, with orders to return for them after vespers. Some minutes before the hour the carriage stopped, as usual, in the little street of the village. Sibylle alighted to quit. She had taken advantage of the return of the carriage, and had come to observe from the top of the cliff one of the high tides of the year, the effects of which were much increased by a violent storm that had raged along the coast for the last four and twenty hours. The shield, now somewhat enfeebled ebbed with dull, oily, the slope of the pier, and arrived panting—as usual. She passed the wall of the churchyard, and reached a group of rocks which stood out prominently upon the extreme verge of the cliff. Among these rocks she perceived the familiar profile of Jacques Feray. Seated, with his elbows on his knees, and his head resting on his hands, he was looking out upon the sea. Sibylle touched his shoulder. The maniac, troubled in his dreams, turned upon her a furious look, that softened as soon as he recognized her. He moved a little to one side to make a place for her and then quietly resumed his former posture. Sibylle sat down tragically beside him. Before them rolled the livid ocean, furious, tenebrous, and terrible. Myriads of foaming billows covered their white crests against the cliff, and gnawed its base with confused and angry clamor. Mingling with it was heard the shrill screaming of the wind, and at intervals a storm of sacred music from the church hard by. A leaden autumn sky, over which were driving shapeless masses of dark lead, like the smoke of a conflagration, completed this scene of melancholy and desolation.

After some moments of silent contemplation, Sibylle gently took the hand of the madman, who turned upon her his restless eye.

'My poor Jacques,' said she, 'we are very wretched.'

Jacques Feray shook his head in sad assent.

'God has forsaken us, my poor Jacques.'

Jacques looked fixedly at her with an expression of profound surprise.

'You too?' said he in a low voice.

'Yes he has forsaken me,' said the child

Jacques, without rising, turned toward the little church and shook his fist at it; then shrugging his shoulders, he resumed his former attitude.

Sibylle drew her cloak about her bosom, for she was shivering, and sank into a somber reverie.

She was suddenly aroused by the cries of a woman who passed from the church yard behind her. Sibylle rose and saw the little group of church-goers who had not found room within the building, but had been standing about the porch, now moving about in apparent distress and alarm.

Some had climbed upon the tombstones others upon the churchyard-wall and all were looking out to sea with feverish curiosity. Sibylle soon discovered the cause of their anxiety. A large fishing boat had just come in sight around a point of the cliff, and was struggling violently against the wind and sea. She had lost a part of her sail, and showed other signs of distress apparent to the most inexperienced eye. She probably belonged to some neighboring port, as the little harbor of Ferias could not afford protection behind its rude jetty to any but boats of the smallest dimensions, and all of these had already sought refuge there the previous night.—But the mediocrity of Ferias offered some security, it was to a range of rocks and reefs extending far into the sea, and forming on one side a sort of natural breakwater. Although nearly submerged, this line of banks and reefs broke in some degree the force of the outer sea. It was the extreme point of the reef that the boat, now plainly to be seen, was endeavoring to double, with the obvious intention of seeking in the anchorage of Ferias the only refuge left.

At the report of the event, the church had been deserted, and a numerous crowd including the curate in cassock, and wearing the ornaments of worship, hastened to the edge of the cliff, and was massed, with a silent astonishment, on the uncovered of the opposite cape. The risen or four men who displayed the most experienced disquietude were trying to manage the rags of sail still left, others looking, and all display ing a conclusive apathy. It seemed as if their crew could have and them to land. Monsieur de Ferias and the curate, deeply moved by this spectacle, begged the fishermen of the village to launch a boat and to try to render some assistance to these unhappy men; but the most liberal promises of the Marquis were disregarded. The boat beat in the port, the fishermen answered him, could not hire a moment in such a sea; they pitied these poor men as much as he, but would not risk their lives to no purpose.

A long half hour had now passed and the weather-beaten boat had with difficulty reached the extremity of the little cape sufficient bring able to offer it, while all at once two or three fearful torrents carried her past the point which screened to meet the hunt between her and safety. A cry of joy burst from the cliff, but an instant after it was changed into an exclamation of terror and of pity, for the boat had stranded upon the very point of the cape. For two or three minutes she beat violently against the sharp rocks at the outer end of the reef, then lurched with a wave, fell suddenly upon her side like a wounded animal, and did not rise again. She was only preserved from immediate destruction by some hidden rocks which held her keel. It was plain that she could not much longer resist the violence of the waves that dashed against her and covered her with foam.

At this stage of the disaster, the crew of the boat could still be seen, one clinging to the gunwale, the others lashed to the rigging. That their long agony might soon be ended was now all that could be hoped for these poor castaways, perishing upon the wreck, with the seething ab ss which cut them off from the shore on the one hand, and, on the other, the wide and restless ocean, already darkening with the approach of night.

A deep silence pervaded the group who watched from the top of the cliff this painful scene—a silence only broken by the sobbing of the women. Suddenly one of these called aloud to a supplicating tone:

'Monsieur le Cure! Monsieur le Cure!'

Her thought was at once comprehended

A murmur of approbation ran through the group; the men uncovered their heads, and nearly all knelt upon the ground. Sibylle had followed with all the ardor of her soul the slightest details of the scene; she was now astonished at the imposing character which the mild countenance of the old curate assumed. He had ascended the rock upon which she had been sitting a few moments before; his thin gray locks streamed in the wind, as his pale face, turned toward heaven, wore a sublime expression of power and of faith. He supplicated his brethren the deliverance of the shipwrecked men, and said, with a strong but trembling voice:

'You who are about to die—you, whom I do not know, but whom God knows—I absolve you from your sins, in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost!'

When he had uttered these words, which thrilled the hearts of all, he knelt down upon the rock and remained for some moments in the attitude of prayer. As he rose and turned his eyes with anguish toward the wreck, he perceived that it still held together, though shaken violently at intervals by the shock of the waves.

'God grants them a respite,' he exclaimed; 'and can we, then, do nothing for them? Are you sure of it, my friends?'

A murmur of denial was heard him.

'At least,' said he, 'something could be attempted, it might be made sure. My friends, I beseech you, come down with me to the beach. We can see better, we can judge better there. I cannot endure the sight!'

And, stripping off hastily his sacred vestments, he began to descend the steep path which led to the village. The crowd followed him. Monsieur de Ferias and already once or twice endeavored to induce Sibylle to withdraw from the scene of such painful emotion, and she had felt more strongly than ever that she should return to the chateau.

'Oh! no,' said she 'I beseech you. Let me stay. I am so happy!'

Monsieur de Ferias looked at her with astonishment.

'Happy! my child!' said he.

'Oh! yes, very happy!'

And leaving her gratification to reflect with some anxiety upon the singularity, in such circumstances, of this expression, Sibylle ran after the crowd.

From the beach the appearance of the sea was frightful. It broke furiously upon the shore, and roared like a cataract. Even in the little basin, protected by the jetty, the sea was boisterous. The boats which had not been hauled up upon the sand were driven one against the other, and two or three had already sunk. The brave curate himself seemed for an instant discouraged, but he turned his eyes toward the wrecked boat, whose masts were still visible, and, inspired with sudden resolution:

'I will go,' cried he, 'alone, if I must; but I will go.'

And before any one had thought of restraining him, he leapt into a shallop which was fastened to the jetty.

This incident excited a murmur of applause among the bystanders, mingled with some cries of expostulation. A few men appeared to hesitate, but they were at once surrounded by weeping women and children, who clung to their garments.

Among the spectators was an individual of conspicuous, then for, for his perfect indifference amid the general agitation. An old fisherman, of stolid appearance, and being and coarse speech, he was reputed the best sailor of the port. He was pacing slowly up and down the jetty, his blue woolen bonnet pulled over his eyebrows, his hands stuffed into the pockets of his pea jacket, and a short pipe between his teeth. Several times his advice had been asked, but he had merely encouraged his shoulders, without condescending to any further reply. Now he stopped his careless saunter, took a pipe from his mouth, shook the ashes from it, and put it into his pocket.

'If the parson will risk his skin,' said he, 'I'll risk mine.'

And at once slid down into the shallop, and began to cast loose her fasts.

This sudden devotion of the old man excited in the crowd a burst of generous sympathy. Each, the more and more of the women were now powerless to restrain, a fourteen or fifteen men leaped to the edge of the jetty and a dozen strong voices called out at once:

'I will go! I will go! Wait a! Quick!'

Two old fishermen made a gesture with the hand.

'The curate beside the curate's,' said he, 'it won't be too many, but it's enough.'

There were descended into the boat and took the oars, and the old fishermen seated himself resolutely at the helm. The oars grated upon the gunwale, and the shallop was gone. For some minutes she rose and fell regularly on the companionably will waters of the little basin, they, as soon as she had passed beyond it, advanced with unequal bounds, now upon the crest of a wave, and again almost lost to sight in the trough of the sea. The spectators could now hardly follow the movements of the frail shell in which, for the moment, were concentrated all their earthly hopes; and night rapidly deepening under the sombre sky soon concealed her from their view in mist and darkness.

The general anxiety, now without visible object in h arrowing road of uncertainty and more conjecture, became intense, and, for some of the participants, insupportable. Some of women were taken away and cared for. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, fearing the effect of these violent emotions upon the sensibilities of Sibylle, refused any longer to yield to her entreaties, and quitted that she should follow them to the carriage; but their determination gave way at a single word from Sibylle.

'Let me stay till the end,' said she, 'and this evening I will have no more secrets from you. I will tell you all.'

Even amid the poignant anxieties of the moment, the hearts of the Marquis and Marchioness throbbed with sweet delight at the hope that the painful mystery which for so many years months had put-cast their existence was at last to be dispelled.

Without understanding the hidden connection which seemed to exist between the events of the evening and the troubled thoughts of Sibylle, they knew her too well to doubt the the seriousness and sincerity of her promise. They procured from the carriage a supply of furs and wrappings, and the child was allowed to remain, on the bad ed-bed, until the end.

Reclining against one of the stone posts of the pier, her weary eyes reproached the black d. kness which fell from sky to ocean like a curtain. From the silent group about her there came from time to time some words of discouragement or of timid hope. Every sound which came from seaward was caught with eagerness, and interpreted with anxiety. Now and again they seemed to hear the distant sound of human voices, appeals for help, cries of distress, perhaps of farewell. Some, who had gone again to the top of the cliff reported that the breaking of the sea upon the reef made a sort of brightness on there, but upon the white surface they could discern no sign either of the shallop or the shipwrecked boat.

Nearly an hour and a half had passed in the agony of suspense, and it began to be whispered that half this time was more than sufficient for the passage to and from the place of the wreck, when a trivial incident occurred to divert attention. This was a quarrel between one of fishermen and his wife. The woman after having deported for some time in an undertone, came at last to high words. The man was among the first who had offered to accompany the old fisherman, his friend, in the shallop; but while he was struggling against the energetic opposition of his better half, the boat had gone away without him. He was inconsolable, and, strangely enough, the fewer the chances became of ever seeing the unlucky skiff up again, the more the regret of the poor man augmented. After having for some time vainly tried upon the subject to silence, he could restrain himself no longer. It was his wife who stopped him; but it not been for her, he would have been there with the others; thanks to her, for the rest of his days he would pass for a good-for-nothing. Miss Nancy! an Englishman! In the height of these reproaches, the man suddenly ceased speaking, took a step forward, and listened with eager attention. The ground was hushed in a death-like silence.

'May I be an Englishman for good and all,' he exclaimed, 'if I don't hear an oar. But it can't be the shallop, for I don't hear but one.'

He listened again, and every ear was in tent.

'I hear it,' he said again gayly. 'I don't hear but one, because they don't pull together. It's the curate!'

A thrill of emotion, joyous, but still uncertain, ran through the crowd; then a cry, a single cry, for it was uttered simultaneously from every mouth, re-sounded on the beach, on the shallop, filled with intelligent forms, was seen to glide forth from the darkness and to advance through the foam like the ghost-laden barge of the old mythology.

During a short interval which elapsed before on the first glimpse of the shallop and the moment when she touched the jetty, the transports of the spectators were frenzied. Many pushed ahead, some danced about like madmen, others passionately embraced those near them. A few fagots were hastily thrown together and set on fire. The first of the shallop's crew who leapt on shore, with difficulty finding a footing among the crowd, turned at once and extended his hand to the next who followed. It was the curate. The honest man, moved to tears, benumbed with cold, and worn out by fatigue, staggered as he stepped on shore. The crowd surrounded him, supported him, and finally bore him away in their arms to the newly kindled fire, beside which they seated him upon the bottom of a boat. As they were bearing him along, each one tried to touch him, to kiss his hand, his clothing or the tat e s of his rugged cassock. He could only murmur a few feeble words: 'My friends, my good friends,' and then fainted away.

He came to himself a few minutes, and his first glance fell upon the sweet face of Sibylle, brightly illumined by the firelight. The child was looking intently upon him, her eyes brimming with tears and beaming with ecstasy. When she saw that he recognized her she leapt toward him, threw her arms around his neck, and pressed his head to her bosom.

'My dear curate,' said she, 'how I love you!'

The awakening of the old priest could not have been more sweet if an angel from heaven had descended and said to him:

'God is content with thee!'

Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, after swearing themselves that the shipwrecked men—all of whom had fortunately been rescued—would receive in the village all need ful care and attention, left the curate in their carriage and drove to the presbytery; thence they proceeded to the chateau. On the way, Sibylle pressed, and passionately kissed their hands, but did not speak. As soon as they reached home, Monsieur de Ferias said to her:

'My child, you are dead; if you prefer, we will defer till morning what you have to tell us.'

'Oh! no,' said Sibylle eagerly, 'you have promised me—to-day already.' 'Then! Now!'

A cheerful fire was kindled in the blue boudoir of the Marchioness, and Sibylle, seated on the carpet at the feet of the attentive old people, spread to them all her heart. Her story was long, but can be summed up in a few words. The reader has already divined the truth. Sibylle, perplexed and wounded in her religious enthusiasm by the peculiarities of a different devotion, the purity of her taste offended by some unbecoming details, disturbed in the rectitude of her judgment by unseemly practices maintained and defended by Medieval language, had come to doubt whether the religion of her grandparents—since there were two religions—was the truest and the best; whether the God of Madame de Beaucourail was equal to the God of Miss O'Neil. A thought like this, once entertained by so ardent a mind, so tender a soul as Sibylle's, had secretly worn deep traces. Once distrustful of her natural guardians, she had found herself, she said, as sad and as much abandoned as if she had been alone upon the wide ocean. She had been wished that she could die. She owned, addressing some particularities of behavior, that the familiar ways and goodfellowship of the curate had distressed and irritated her, contrasting as strongly as they did with her ideal of a priest and an apostle. But this evening Abbe Renaud had suddenly appeared as if transfigured before her eyes. At the moment when he pronounced upon those mariners in mortal peril the final absolution, and when he had restored forth alone to the rescue of those shipwrecked men, she had comprehended that the true God and the true faith could alone inspire such lofty words and such acts of devotion. From that moment, although some lesser objections might still disturb her mind, Sibylle had felt herself forever won back to the faith of her fathers. This confession of Sibylle was listened to by the Marquis and Marchioness with inexpressible relief of heart.

'My darling,' said Monsieur de Ferias when she had ended—for Sibylle he had only interrupted her by sobs or caresses—'you are always wishing to ride upon the ocean; you desire the impossible. It will be, I fear, the danger of your life. You bring to-day to the pursuit of truth, and you will bring some day to the pursuit of happiness, a dream of perfection which is noble, but which will expose you to many errors and to many sorrows. To speak only of the subject which now engages us, a divine religion divinely preached—that is God ministered to by angels—that is heaven. But we are upon the earth, and the most perfect religion can here obtain only an imperfect service, for its ministers are men. Think upon this, Sibylle, and never impute as a crime to the Divine Being the weakness or the ignorance of his worshippers. Not that I approve, my child, of all the forms that piety have below assumed. Among these forms are some to be regretted and some even which are pernicious. I am of those who would have to free religion from all he extrav gant practices, from the exaggerated symbols, from the misplaced prostrations which to my eyes, as well as yours, profane its pure altars. But at my age one is more tolerant than at yours; later you will be more indulgent; you will pardon much to a sincere heart; you will even forgive superstition, for superstition in itself an homage to the truth. And now, my child, go and sleep; go and yourself enjoy that peace which you have brought to us.'

But Sibylle did not take possession of her white room until she had gone to embrace Miss O'Neil, and had related to her in a few words the events of the evening. That person at once took her help, sadly abandoned for these many months, and till a late hour in the night Indian sounds, mingling with the new gentle breeze, awoke in the imagination of the tenants of the chateau confused ideas of celestial beatitude and mundane bliss.

Dr. Cumming and the Pope.

Dr. Cumming lectured in Leeds, taking for his subject, "The Pope's invitation to his General Council." The Rev. Doctor, referring to his recent correspondence with Archbishop Manning, said that the latter had stated that as far as the head of the Church could answer the question in regard to his (Dr. Cumming's) coming to Rome; and accordingly he was writing a letter to the Pope. He had no doubt his Holiness would answer it, or would get Cardinal Antonelli, who was the real Pope, to answer it for him; and if an invitation were given to him to attend the Council he would fearlessly go to Rome, and endeavour to show to the prelates assembled there that the unity of the Christian Church as its highest and supremest sense existed in English and Scottish Christendom at the moment; and that if they took the questions on which they differed were like the clouds which float along, darkening slightly the land as they passed; whilst the great truths on which they were at one were like the stars, far beyond the clouds, shining in their original and undimmed splendour. He would also maintain that whilst in the Protestant Church they had unity and no uniformity, in the Roman Catholic Church they had perfect uniformity but no unity. The distinction was this—Unity was an separation whilst relating to vital, saving, essential truth; uniformity was the robe put on without. He contended that the highest and noblest feature of the Protestant Church was unity; and that uniformity was a thing they could buy in a shop, or could get a master to teach them.

A SWEET CHILD.

Isabella with a basket in the hall; she was very busily engaged in the duties of visits on the gaiety of the fashionable guests and dressmaker. The day was [illegible], as the carriages [illegible] the door thought, certainly, the [illegible] Jane, who, standing by hand her, gently her fingers glide expertly, almost lovingly, over the shining plates.—Take care, little sister, you discourage my love. What are you doing? 'Oh, nothing,' I reply. I was looking at the pretty stars in your crown, and I was thinking of something.' Of what? What does such a child as you think about?' 'Oh, I was thinking of what our teacher told us yesterday morning—that all those who read by to-day and o-morrow's visits-probably [illegible] etc. would be in if they would to him you, Isabella.' 'Oh, my child, certainly not! What an idea!' she said that if we joined our hands together to Jesus, we should have brother to our crown. Tell me dear sister, would you not like to have as many stars in your crown in heaven as you have in that one?' 'Hush Jane, here is the carriage.' And when a moment him hastily given to her dear little sister, Isabella departed for the ball. Jane went to her chamber. There, before retiring to rest, she asked her brother to fill her crown with stars; she thought of some one whom she wished to bring to Jesus on the following day, and she asked Jesus to help her. 'I pray Thee dear Saviour, make Isabella a Christian, so that there may be one person more who loves Thee, and that I may have a star in my crown to cast at thy feet.' Then, on the bosom of Jesus, she fell asleep. Isabella was at the ball, but the words of the little questioner sounded within and echoing in her ears. Every time that, passing before the mirrors, she saw her diamonds sparkle, she thought, Shall I have any stars in my crown in heaven? Shall I have a crown at all? No, certainly, if I thus trifle away my life.' She danced two or three times; then, bidding adieu to the lady of the house, she quickly returned home. 'There' pleasing made her jewels and her white robe, 'it is done,' she said, 'I will not put them on again; my first thought, my first care shall be to obtain a heavenly crown and a robe of righteousness. She then went to Jesus's room, and kneeling instantly the little sleeping form, saying, Dear, dear, little sister, it is you who have brought me to Jesus.' The day had dawned upon Isabella my dear servant; a new day had risen upon her soul, the prayer of Jane was heard, the little girl had a star in her crown.

MR. SPURGEON ON INFANT SALVATION.—In a recent discussion on Christianity between Mr. Lincoln, a member of the Bible Defence Association, and Mr. Antill, of Judd-street, he was asserted by the language of Christianity that the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon had declared "that there are infants in hell d upon long." Mr. Lincoln, having deputed the assertion, wrote to Mr. Spurgeon for his authority to contradict the statement, and his letter has elicited the following reply:—Newington, S. E., June 12, 1869. Dear Sir,—I have never at any time of my life said, believed, or imagined that any infant, under any circumstances, would be cast into hell. I have always believed in the salvation of all infants, and I intensely detest the opinion which your opponent dared to attribute to me. I do not believe that on this earth there is a single professing Christian holding the damnation of infants, or if there be he must be insane, or utterly ignorant of Christianity. I am obliged for this opportunity of denying the calumny, although the author of it will, probably, find no difficulty in inventing some-some other fiction to be affirmed as unhesitatingly as the present one. He who denies God's Word is naturally much at home in slandering the Lord's servants.

Yours Truly, C. H. SPURGEON."

THE QUEEN'S CORONATION OATH.—The following are the exact terms of the oath taken by Her Majesty at the coronation. In reference to the United Church of England and Ireland. The Archbishop of Canterbury, standing before the throne, said, "Will you, to the utmost of your power, maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the gospel, and the Protestant reformed religion established by law? and will you preserve inviolable the settlement of the United Church of England and Ireland, and the doctrine, worship and discipline thereof, as by law established, within England and Ireland, and the territories thereunto belonging?"

The Queen—"All this I promise to do." Then the Queen, coming out of her chair, attended by her supporters, proceeded to the altar, and laying her hand on the holy gospel, the great bible which had been carried in the procession, said:—"The things which I have heretofore promised I will perform and keep, so help me God." Then the Queen kissed the book and to a transcript of the oath set her royal seal.

TO SAVE DROWNING PERSONS.—It may not be generally known that when a person is drowning, if he is taken by the arms from behind, between the elbows and shoulders, he cannot reach the person attempting to save him, and whole or struggle he may make will only assist the person holding him in keeping his head above water. A good swimmer can then keep a man above water for an hour. If raised anywhere else, the probability is that he will clutch the swimmer, and, as is often the case, both will be drowned.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

At a late banquet given in honor of Francis Hincks, John Hillyard Cameron was present, and like others, made a speech; and for the sake of the Order of which he is Grand Master, for the sake of the Commons of Canada of which he is a member, we would in all leniency try to persuade ourselves that he was under the influence of champagne, or perhaps some of the "curse of Canada." We were not prepared to believe that the Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Association of Canada would be heard say that, "The Mother Country would not try to keep us, because she could not," if we wished for separation. Does Mr. Cameron really mean to say that a few Canadians could compel Great Britain to let them go, or that his brethren could be found fighting against that Queen and country they have so often declared themselves ready to defend. Surely the Orangemen of Canada will put in a disclaimer against allowing Mr. Cameron to be their mouthpiece while under undue influences either of liquor or annexationists or love for protectorates. Mr. Cameron could accept independence under American or French protection; in other words, would be reconciled to become a free and independent state of the American Union, or a colony of France under certain circumstances, and still he is bursting with loyalty to Queen Victoria on the 12th of July and other days. Merely using his position for election purposes. Such men are the curse of the order and should be got rid of as soon as possible. We could point to politicians in this district, who were well known to be enemies to the order all their life previous to their entering the political arena, when all at once they became warmly attached to the institution, joined it, and follow leaders in its favor on public occasions. Just so long as these men are allowed to occupy high positions in that order, they will be a reproach to it, and afford grounds for such papers as the Irish Canadian to say that "Orange loyalty is not a whit more genuine than that of ordinary mortals." Just hear the Irish Canadian:—

"This is exemplified in the language of the Grand Master, as reported, when he sarcastically remarks that if England wishes us to become independent, let her "make a treaty with the United States, aye, and with France, to guarantee us our independence for five-and-twenty years" This granted, Mr. Cameron would be reconciled to the feelings of France and America, and allow the "Mother Country" to go even down into Jericho.

In other words, the Grand Master would lay aside the Orange toga and celebrate the ever memorable 12th July a few days earlier —say on the 6th. If things did not work right with the Yankees, he would have no objection to throw himself into the arms of the "eldest son of the Church"—thus virtually renouncing the old creed of the Orange apostles and taking to himself that of the "felonious Papist." Oh! spirit of the Departed William and of the living Alderman Medcalf, can such things be? And so soon after the famous Montebello manifesto, on which were recorded the noble deeds of the Grand Master, and the services cheerfully rendered by him to the institution of which he was proud to say he was head? Yes; such things can be! And not even the burning monosyllables of the "old man," nor the heroics of the warrior who fought in '37, and again fought in '66, and captured an aged musket, can turn the seething tide that now threatens to engulph the palladium of all that is venerated and beloved in the beautiful pages of the Orange catechism.—Verily, we have fallen upon evil days when the Grand Master of "all the Orangemen of British North America" voluntarily hauls down the bister's Red, and sails to the mast the hated, yet sparkling and immortal, Green! What next?!

What does all this mean, coming from a Tory?

NORTH LANARK.—We are it stated, that Mr. W. McDougall is to receive the appointment to be Governor of the North West Territory, about October, and that consequently, an election will be held to fill his seat in Parliament, in November. Mr. McDougall it appears is using his time and opportunity to get Mr. Cameron who was lately defeated, elected for North Lanark. This however, is in keeping with his other acts for the defeat of Reformers, and for the success of his present allies. No time should be lost by Reformers in Lanark, in selecting a candidate, and having him before the people. Mr Cameron is up to all the tricks and dodges in a bottleneering, and will not be found sleeping. His opponents should not be caught napping.

A woman in New York State lately attempted to commit suicide by throwing herself before a passing train. She was seen in time to save her. She is now in an insane asylum.

On Thursday last, at an early hour all were aroused by the cry of fire, and the alarm was soon given that the large barn on the premises of Mr. Hinchley, on the Otonabee, was in flames. The fire was first discovered by Mr. Hinchley himself, who was awakened by the light streaming in through the windows of his bedroom. He at once gave the alarm, and in a few minutes the neighbors were on the ground, but the fire had made such progress that the building was entirely consumed, with all its contents, including a quantity of hay, grain, implements, &c. The fire is supposed to have originated from a spark from the chimney of the house, which was carried by the wind to the barn. The loss is estimated at about $1,000, on which there is no insurance. Mr. Hinchley has the sympathy of the community in his misfortune.

TOWN COUNCIL.

August 23rd, 1869.

The Council met. Present—Mayor Stevenson, O'Beirne, Toole, Hutchison, Nash, Englehart, Clinton, Helm and Kennedy. Mr. Chisholm presiding.

The previous minutes were duly confirmed.

Communications were read from E. Burnham, asking the Council to open a street [illegible] and from the Secretary-Treasurer of the Board of Trustees, asking $2,225 for school purposes for the current year. From Geo. A. Cox, asking for authority from the Council to remit him the $30 recommended by the Special Committee on the Building By-law, part fine police court. From John Jeffers to the License Inspector, asking for a license at half price to sell liquor.

The usual July statement, showing the amount required for interest and sinking fund for current year was received and copied.

The Clerk submitted a requisition from several members of the Town Council, together with the presiding officer, asking delay in enforcing the fine and costs imposed upon P. Ryan, for a breach of the Building By-law.

Moved by Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Stevenson.—That the report of the Inspector of Streets and Bridges be received, and that the Clerk be instructed to forward a copy of the same to the Superintendent of the Port Hope and Peterborough R. R. Co. with a request, that immediate notice be taken thereon.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Edmison,—That the Treasurer be instructed to remit to Geo. Cox the sum of $30 as per report of the Special Committee in reference thereto.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the petition of John Jeffers be referred to the Clerk, with authority to dispose of the same as the law may direct. —Carried.

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. Dickson,—That it be referred to the Clerk to ascertain whether the street referred to in Mr. Burnham's petition can legally be opened in accordance with the By-law of the Town on that behalf, and report at the next meeting of the Council, or if necessary, to take competent legal advice in the matter.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Helm.—That the sum of ten dollars be refunded to P. Ryan, after he has paid the amount of his fine and costs to the Town Treasurer.—Lost.

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the corporate seal of the Town of Peterboro having become partially defaced from use, an impression thereof being at the foot hereof to the left hand; and it having become necessary for the Council to procure and adopt a new seal, be it

Resolved, therefore, that the old seal be rescinded, and that the new seal, an impression of which is at the foot hereof to the right hand containing the words "Corporation of the Town of Peterborough" underscored ornamented border, be adopted as the corporate seal of the Town of Peterborough, in lieu of the old seal so rescinded.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the contract between the corporation of the Town of Peterborough and Mr. John Howden, as constable, be at an end from and after the 3rd day of August, instant, and that he be employed at a fixed salary of $480, to commence from the 3rd of August, instant, and that the Council shall have the privilege of discharging Mr. Howden at any time.—Carried.

On motion the By-law for fixing the rate for the current year was read a first time.

Mr. O'Beirne, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read the following report, which was received and adopted:

"The Committee on Finance beg leave to submit to the Council the following as the figures upon which to base the estimates for the present year:

RECEIPTS.

Licenses	$2308
Markets	440
Police Court	700
Non-resident tax	900
Miscellaneous	100
Dog tax and Statute labor	400
Total	$4848

EXPENDITURES.

Administration of Justice	$1438
Schools	2275
Charities	500
Fire department	200
Law expenses	300
Special grants	400
Printing and Stationery	200
Miscellaneous	250
Salaries	2200
Commissioners	5636
Streets and bridges	3099
Police Court	35
Deficiencies of last year	100
2½ of loss collecting	400
Total	$17023
Less Receipts	4848
	$12183

The amount opposite the words deficiency for last year on the expenditure has not been filled in, their being a difference of opinion between members of the committee, and it was determined to prefer fixing of this sum to the whole council.

(Signed) IVAN O'BEIRNE,
Chairman."

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the blank opposite "deficiency" was filled with $1100; carried on the following division:

Yeas—Messrs. Toole, Stevenson, Edmison English, Helm and Kennedy.

Nays—Messrs. O'Beirne and Dickson.

The rate for the current year was fixed at 8½ mills on the dollar.

The By-law was read a second time and amended.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

All persons suffering from Cancers, which are entirely cured without the use of the knife, Abscess, Ruptures or Sternia. Aneurism, Swellings, Tumours or any Chronic disease, complaint, should not delay in seeing Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings.

A little girl, daughter of Mr. Beacham, of Guelph, died a few days ago in consequence of eating some wild fruit she found growing on the side of the street. The poisonous plant is what is popularly called "wild cucumber." The girl was taken with convulsions a few hours after eating them, and died the following morning. Her body became decomposed soon after she died.

DUMMER COUNCIL.

Council met at 10 o'clock a.m. All the members present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The following accounts were ordered to be paid: [illegible] Jno. C. Calvert, one fine refunded for Statute labor, the labor having been performed, $4.67; H. Burnside, Esq., printing account, $6.63.

On motion, the [illegible] was granted to aid the the erection of a building for Agricultural and other purposes in Warsaw, on condition that the Deed to be given conjointly to the Council and Agricultural Society of Dummer and Douro, and that the Reeve and two Councillors be on the building Committee.

Ten dollars was appointed for Boundary Division No. 47, on condition that the Council of Belmont grant a like sum. The labor to be performed under R. Robinson, Esq.

A By-law levying a rate of 1 cent in the dollar for County purposes. (This rate would have been 3 mills higher, but for $300 from non-resident, taxes, &c., applied on County rate.) 2 mills for Equivalent to Government Grant; 4½ mills for Township purposes; 5 mills for School Section No. 1; 7½ mills for No. 2; 1 cent 2½ mills for No. 3; 8 mills for No. 4; 9 mills for No. 5; 5½ mills for No. 6; 1 1-20 cents for No. 7; and 1 cent for No. 9, was passed. And also a By-law to appoint a Road Commissioner; A By-law to appoint a Collector of taxes for 1869; and a By-law to provide for the payment of certain sums of money, were passed.

John Wason, Sen., was appointed Collector at a salary of $40.

Council adjourned to the 2nd of October next.—Com.

REIFFENSTEIN AND KING.

From the Cobourg Sentinel (Ministerial)

The evils of a connection between the Government and a privileged Bank have long been felt here to a greater extent than in England, probably because the Bank of Montreal has been more reckless and unscrupulous in the use of its power than its English prototype, having abused its position to overthrow its Western rivals one by one that it may prosper by their downfall and absorb their business. The recent extensive Wall street gambling indulged in by Mr. King with the money of the Canadian people deposited in his bank is without a parallel in the English system, and would not have been tolerated for one hour in England. Here, however, notwithstanding the well known policy of the Bank of Montreal which seeks to elevate itself into the position of a huge monied monopoly upon the ruins of its competers, we find the Government according it increased facilities, and extending their relations with it. Mr. King's Wall street operations may at any time result in loss and disaster to the Bank, and enrich Vanderbilt Fish, and other gigantic operators, who can command ten times the capital and infinitely more experience in this sort of thing than Mr. King with our Government funds. Between Reiffenstein's robberies and King's speculations with Government money, Canada will secure an unfavourable reputation a read for the looseness with which her finances are managed to render such a state of affairs possible.

SPANISH DISTURBANCES.—Almost for the first time in their lives the Bishops and clergy of the Roman Catholic Church in Spain have been called to account by the Civil Government. Time was, and not very far back either, when the Government was subordinate to the Church, and when the dicta of a Priest had almost the authority of law. Wonderful changes, however, take place in a short time; and few changes have been more wonderful than that by which the clergy of Spain have been deposed from their former elevated position, robbed of their power, and reduced to a state of proper submission to the Government and laws.

An instance of this has just occurred. Some of the priests have been foolish enough to join in the Carlist disturbances. As that insurrection began to assume proportions of a threatening aspect, the Government have wisely resolved to check by authority, the illegitimate action of the clergy. In order to do this, a decree has been issued, ordering the Bishops to require their clergy to desist from any further interference in a matter with which, at first, they should not have meddled. The Bishops are allowed a period of eight days within which to issue their pastorals, and to report the results to the Government.

In ridiculing the talk about Independence, the Saturday Observer hits the nail on the head when it remarks that in Ontario, at all events, the separation cry is got up by men who fear, yea, who know, that their friends in power must shortly be called to account by the country, and who are desperately anxious that the saddle should not be put on the right horse. But if that be their drift—and it evidently is—let it be the task of the Reform press to show, and to reiterate the truth, that what the Dominion requires for its prosperity is not the severance of British connection; is neither Independence, Annexation, nor a French protectorate, but honest and economical government, by honest and capable men, who will consult the true interests of the country, and not their own personal aggrandisement; and will cease to carry out their extreme partizan views merely for the purpose of thwarting the Opposition, entirely apart from the merits of the points at issue.

OUTBREAK OF CATTLE DISEASE.—Much apprehension has been caused by the appearance of a contagious disease amongst the milch cows owned by a dairyman in South London suburbs. This epidemic, deplorable to say, closely resembles that which preceded the outbreak of rinderpest.—The tongue and feet of the beast becomes sore. After a fortnight, the skin of the tongue peels off, the animal cannot take food, and wastes in flesh. With care, the malady does not often prove fatal, but the animals suffer for months, and the loss during that period is very considerable. It is thought that foreign cattle have introduced the disease.—Shipping Gazette.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skilful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Caisse's Hotel, on Thursday, September 9th, and will remain till the evening of Saturday, September 11th. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and uncurable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession. Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skilful in the treatment of consumption as well as all other diseases and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

Startling irregularities in the Whisky post offices are reported. The post master is a defaulter to the amount of $5,000.

At Car low Ab[illegible] on Saturday, the case of Furlong, a [illegible] teacher, against Bo[illegible], a prosecution [illegible] Almighty then might withhold his mercy.

TWO GOOD REASONS ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them—physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

SURE'S WARNER.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, or any more throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

DIED.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and dainty appearance we observe upon the stage, and on the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts. per bottle.

BY-LAW NO.

By-law to aid and assist the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving $16,000 to the Company by way of bonus, and to issue debentures therefor, and to authorize the levying of such a rate as will pay the said debentures and the interest thereon:

WHEREAS by the act of the Second Session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, passed in the Thirty-second Year of Her Majesty's Reign, incorporating the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, it is provided that:—"It shall further be lawful for any Municipality or Municipalities through any part of which, or near which the Railway or works of the said Company shall pass or be situated, or which may be benefited thereby, to aid and assist the said Company by loaning or guaranteeing, or giving money by way of bonus or other means to the Company, or issuing Municipal Bonds to be for all of the Company, and otherwise in such manner and to such extent as such Municipalities or any of them shall think expedient—provided always that no such aid, loan, bonus, or guarantee shall be given except after the passing of By-laws for the purpose and the adoption of such By-laws by the ratepayers as provided in the Railway Act."

And whereas the Municipality of the Township of Harvey has determined to aid and assist the said Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars by way of bonus, under the authority conferred by the said above recited Act.

And whereas to carry the last recited object into effect it is necessary for the said Municipality to issue debentures for the said sum of $10,000, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable in the manner hereinafter provided.

And whereas the account of the whole rateable property of the said Municipality, according to the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality, being for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty nine, was one hundred and four thousand six hundred and sixty-eight dollars.

It is therefore enacted by the Council of the Corporation of the Municipality of the Township of Harvey, in the County of Peterboro', and Province of Ontario:

I. That it shall and may be lawful for the said Municipality to aid and assist the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving them to the sum of ten thousand dollars.

II. That it shall be lawful for the purposes aforesaid, for the Reeve of the said Municipality to cause any number of debentures to be made for such sums of money as may be required for the said purpose, not less than twenty-five dollars each, and not exceeding in the whole the amount of ten thousand dollars, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Municipality, and to be signed by the Reeve and Treasurer thereof

III. That the said debentures shall be made payable at the office of the Bank of Toronto, in the Town of Peterboro', and shall have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest at the rate and in the manner hereinafter mentioned. Such debentures being made payable for the following amounts, at the following times, that is to say on the thirtieth day of December in each of the following years there shall become due and be paid, namely:—in 1871, Two Hundred Dollars.

1872, Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1873, Three Hundred Dollars.
1874, Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1875, Four Hundred Dollars.
1876, Four Hundred Dollars.
1877, Four Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1878, Four Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1879, Four Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars
1880, Five Hundred Dollars.
1881, Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1882, Five Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1883, Six Hundred Dollars.
1884, Six Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1885, Six Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1886, Seven Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1887, Seven Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1888, Eight Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars
1889, Nine Hundred Dollars.

Making in all the said sum of ten thousand dollars.

IV. That the said debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per cent per annum from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half yearly on the thirtieth day of June and December in each year at the Bank of Toronto in the said Town of Peterboro'.

V. That for the purpose of paying the said debentures, and the interest thereon as aforesaid, there shall be raised, levied and collected, a special rate in each year, in addition to all other rates upon all the rateable property in the said Municipality during the said term of twenty years, from the coming into effect of this By-law, unless such debentures shall be sooner paid, and such rate shall be sufficient to pay the debentures falling due, and all interest on the then outstanding debentures hereby made issued to be issued falling due within the year for which such rate is levied.

VI. That this By-law shall take effect on, from and after the thirtieth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

VII. That the debentures to be signed and issued as aforesaid, shall be delivered by the Reeve of the Municipality to the Trustees appointed for to be appointed in accordance with the Eleventh Section of the Act incorporating the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company.

VIII. And it is further enacted by the Municipal Council aforesaid that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken on the proposed By-law at the following place, that is to say, at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on the eighth day of September, A. D., 1869, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and closing at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, and that the following persons shall be Returning Officer, for taking the said votes, namely: Wm. McCamus Hall, Clerk of the said Municipality.

Take Notice

That the above is a true copy of a proposed By-law, which will be taken into consideration by the Council of this Municipality, after one month from the first publication in the Peterborough Examiner, the date of which first publication was Thursday, the twelfth day of August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken thereon at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on Wednesday, the eighth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the morning.

The Doctor will deliver a Lecture on the subject of Health and Disease, at the Wesleyan Methodist Sabbath School Room, on the 24th Instant, at 8 o'clock, p.m. Ladies and Physicians are also respectfully invited to attend the Lectures.

Any one wishing can consult him on any disease, and the remedies best calculated to remove them. He has had over 20 years experience in an extensive and diversified practice, by which ample opportunities were afforded him of acquiring a knowledge of diseases and the best remedies for the same, the public have therefore a guarantee that these Medicines that he makes use of in relieving the sick are purely vegetable, composed of Barks, Roots, Herbs, Oils, Gums, and Garden Remedies, with which Nature has so wonderfully and bountifully supplied us, and are prepared upon strictly scientific principles, by one thoroughly acquainted with the Medical Qualities and effects of each ingredient separately, and their combined influence when chemically united, by one also who has a perfect knowledge of the structure of the human system, and of the functions of each organ, both in its healthy and diseased condition.

And he may here state that hundreds who have been given up as incurable by Physicians, with Consumption, Heart Disease, Inflamation of the Lungs and Chest, Pain in the Breast, Joints, Bones or Muscles, Rheumatism, Difficult Breathing, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Ileatic Fever, Night Sweats, Sick-Headache, Inflamation of the Stomach or Bowels, Dysentery, Palpitation of the Heart, Epileptic Fits, with other diseases too numerous to mention. The Doctor will also treat private diseases.

The Doctor will warrant a perfect cure of Falling of the Womb, Piles, Cancers, Fever-and-Ague.

☞ All Examinations Free.

A. ROSE, M. D.

Peterborough, August 17, 18-9.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants excluded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form Hamilton Concentration Cures. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-DOTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to give Jacobs' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has handreds of imitators, but not one EQUAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it. Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HURD'S RUBINA HAIR GLOSS, cleansed, dressed, kept. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

[This cut represents Mr. O. A. Colby's Mill at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Dec. 28th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed.] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gates, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also, Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

This business here will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diphtheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bee stings, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious chollic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, occasional excoriations, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintness, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are reliable and safe administered to the child. Before the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, weakness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural functions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

WHO'LL BUY?

Suggested on seeing the advertisement of a Wholesale liquor dealer.

Forty casks of liquid fun,—
Who'll buy?
Murder by the Queen's-ench,
What'll he?
Lunacy and theft made thin,
Beggary and death shorten in,
Packages of liquid sin,—
Who'll buy?

Reeking dregs, un-rated pure,—
What'll buy?
Warranted, not mine, but sure,—
Who'll buy?
Empty pockets by the cask,
Tangled brains by pint or flask,
Vice of any kind you ask,—
Who'll buy?

Competing we defy,—
What'll buy?
Barrels full of pure soul-dye,
Who'll buy?
Bye, to make the next jet black;
Dye to make the conscience slack;
Nothing vile do our casks lack,—
Who'll buy?

A Lay Delegate—the hen.

Tempus Fugit—Its fly-time.

A Fiery Steed—Hor-se-radish.

A water-sport—a temperance oration.

The flower of Canadian diplomacy—Mr. Rose.

Quack.—A doctor whose science lays in his bills.

If a man is a Mister, is not a woman a Mystery?

When a dog answers to his name, what does he say?

Can a man who avoids writing be considered a pen-chancer?

Young ladies who play croquet are known as 'maidens all for lawn.'

'Smile' that forbids sorrow—the one you take in a bar-room.

We think lawyers to be wise men and they think us to be fools.

A Serious Joke.—A small boy trying to sell an Editor one of his own papers.

Query if Sufficient? The only objection to Cesarrost Endowment—Current Opinion.

Neat.—A teetotaller can never prove a friend at a pinch, because he has a horror of a 'sip.'

Portraits of Secretary Fish's children are said to be sardines—little fishes done in oil.

A dandy inquired at a fruit stall, 'are these apples fit for a hog to eat?' 'Try one and see,' said the old woman.

A gentleman looking at his watch after mid-night cried, 'It's to-morrow morning! I must bid you good-night!'

Anything to please the child, as the nurse said when she let the baby crawl out of the third-story window.

An Irishman being asked why he left his country for America, replied, 'It wasn't for want; I had plenty of that at home.'

The following sentence will show the importance of the position of a comma: Woman—Without her man is a brute.

'Beggars beware! Scolopendriums and polypodiums are set here,' served effectually to keep them off an English botanist's grounds.

Horticultural Item.—The real gardener does not care to witness the turning over of a new leaf'—when it is done by a caterpillar.

A negro jumped from a railroad train going at full speed, near Savannah, the other day, but striking on his head, he escaped unhurt.

Why is a candle-maker the worst and most hopeless of men? Because all his works are wicked, and all his works are brought to light.

A white boy met a colored lad the other day and asked him what he had such a short pens for? 'I spect so it won't poke itself into other people's business.

Every religion is false, which has not for its leading tenet, to adore one God as the first principle in all things; and the moral system, to love one God only and supremely in all things.

A young lady who was rebuked by her mother for kissing her intended, justified the act by quoting the passage, 'whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.'

A French lady recently told her husband that if ever he deceived her, she would kill herself. 'Pray do not my love,' he responded, the husband, 'think what a disarrangement it will cause in the house.'

The manifold wisdom of God is conspicuously exhibited, as less than His inexpressibly condescending love, in the variety of leadings by which men are brought to the attainment of the one great object—redemption.

A Lot.—A person advertised in one of the papers for a helpmate for life; he wants one who shall be a companion of his heart, and head, and lot. How large is the lot I'm asked the candidate for the situation in another paper.

A married man in New Hampshire has adopted an original method of economy.—One morning, recently when he knew his wife would see him, he kissed the servant girl. The house expenses were soon reduced $300 a year.

An absconding wife is thus pathetically opposed to in a 'Personal' column: 'Jane, your absence will ruin all. Think of the children, your parents, your husband. Return! return; all may yet be well. At any rate, enclose the key of the cupboard where the gin is.

Unreasonable.—The too prevalent habit of sleeping in church in the absence of many quaint members and stories. A well known citizen lately fell asleep in a country church. He was finally disturbed by the touch of a contribution box in the hands of one of the church-warriors, who was making a collection; but without opening his eyes the sleeper ejaculated, 'Nessun!' and sunk back to renew his nap. It is unnecessary to say that he was a nervous visitor holder on one of the railways.

The Evening Tribune!

A strictly independent Journal, devoted to News, Christianity, Literature, and Our Country—a Good Cheap and Readable Paper for every man, woman and child, in city, village and country.

☞ Published in Toronto every lawful day, at 12 o'clock, noon.

It will have for its object the materials and moral elevation and advancement of the people of our country. The publishers are determined that it shall excel in all the leading essentials of a first-class progressive newspaper; and no effort or expense will be spared to make it the best and safest Family Paper in Canada. It will always have something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not forgetting even the children, and will constantly advocate the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal. It is designed to be unsectarian in party, value, and variety by any Journal in the Dominion. It will be made thoroughly readable from beginning to end. In the language of an eminent writer, it will know nothing of the "dignity of dullness." It will contend against all the crimes, evils, shame, and follies of the day, and present them, without fear or favor, in all their hideous deformities.

Its News Department will always contain the freshest and most reliable telegraphic and other intelligence from all parts of the world.

The Religious Department will be strictly Evangelical and non-Sectarian. The leading clergymen of all Denominations will contribute to its columns.

The Literary Department will contain contributions from the pens of the ablest writers in the United States and the Lands.

In Politics it will be strictly independent, seeking no favors from either Government or Opposition. Its independence will not consist in giving a systematic support to all the Ministers of the day, but while always willing to cheerfully recognize honest efforts for the social and moral reform and improvement of the Canadian people, it will ever fearlessly denounce all the evils which may attach to either of the prominent political parties of the country.

It will faithfully advocate the cause of Temperance in all its bearings, and fearlessly denounce the drinking usages and customs of Society with their attendant evils.

Agriculture and Horticulture will receive special attention.

All advertisements announcing circuses, minstrels, theatrical and other questionable and immoral performances, will be faithfully excluded from its columns.

TERMS:—Per Annum, $3.00; per Week, 6 cents; Single Copies 1 cent.

CLUBS.—Temperance Organizations or others sending Clubs will be furnished at the following rates:—

Ten copies one year (per copy) $2 50
Twenty and upwards 2 00

The cash in all cases to accompany the order.

Canadian Dominion Directory

For 1870-71.

THE SUBSCRIBER proposes to issue in SEPTEMBER, 870, if sufficient support by SUBSCRIPTIONS and ADVERTISEMENT can be obtained to cover the cost of Publication, a CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY, containing the Provinces of ONTARIO, QUEBEC, NOVA SCOTIA, and NEWFOUNDLAND and PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND. The Directory will contain the names of Professional and Business Men, and of the principal inhabitants in the Cities, Towns and Villages, together with a large amount of general information, including Alphabetical Directories of Post Offices and Postmasters, Banks, Governmental Departments and Employés, Houses of Parliament, Law Courts, Educational Departments Custom Houses and Officers of Customs, Ports of Entry, Tariffs of Customs, List of Patents of Inventions, Canals, Railways, Railway and Steamboat Routes Provincial and Religious Sections, Clergy of all Denominations, Registrars with their Divisions, Newspapers and Periodicals, &c., &c.; also, Statements of Imports and Exports Revenue, Expenditure, Trade, Population, &c., &c.

To be Corrected to August, 1870.

The Canada Directory for 1857-58, published by the Subscriber, contained the names of the Principal Inhabitants in 1,339 Cities, Towns and Villages in Upper and Lower Canada.—The CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY for 1870-71 will contain a short description of at least 3,000 Cities, Towns and Villages in the Dominion of Canada and the Provinces of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, together with the names of the Professional and Business Men and of the Principal Inhabitants.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Dominion of Canada, Subscribers ..... $12 Cy. per copy.
United States ..... 20 ..... $15 Cy. "
Great Britain and Ireland ..... 2 Stg. "
France, Germany, &c. &c. ..... 2 Stg. "

Rates of Advertising will be made known on application to the Publisher.

No Money to be paid until the Work is delivered.—This notice is given for the reason that unprincipled men have, on several occasions canvassed for, and collected moneys in advance, on account of Books which they falsely represented me as being about to publish.

Persons desirous of aiding in the Publication of the CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY for 1870-71 will please send in their Orders for SUBSCRIPTIONS and ADVERTISEMENTS to Nothing Results as a Matter of Course.

I maintain that nothing of human, visibly administered, is a matter of course. You, my dear sir, are established, and every one knows you to be a solid man. There is a man beside you just finishing his lunch and making his way. You know him and nod to him. Take him by the hand my dear sir, it will do him good. One of the commonest deeds in life, as men well sometimes be, it may encourage him. "Our encounter stands with me." What made that shallow fellow too big to be a man, commence that feast so loudly when he went home? The truth is, for sensible effect on him it was more than the sermon. John Smith has been a hard drinker, but is trying fairly to get rid of it. Going down the village street, to meet Mr. Brown, who is 'here' at the works above. Mr. Brown shakes hands with 'Mr. Smith,' as right of the entire village. Does that do Smith any good? I tell you it is an axe of Mr. Gough's admirable lectures. It says as plainly as if Mr Brown had written it, Mr. Smith, you have only to take care of yourself, and you will be a respectable man in spite of all.' That makes Smith stronger; and when he goes to church next Sabbath, and looks over at Mr. Brown, he will find it easier to believe God's most loving word. 'Their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more.' So shake hands and be friends'—at market, on the street, and above all, at church. I presume the Apostle meant something when he said 'Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss.' Some people quit church for want of this means of grace. Everybody looks as if just returned from the north pole, and there had not been time to thaw, and the deacons, who 'rule the church,' (if anything go lifeless can be said to be run) had been in command of the party. I suspect the boys sometimes say, 'Well, I guess I ought to be good but if ever I do, it won't be 'long with the deacons.' They wait, poor boys, till some one comes along with a heart—getting no good in the meantime—whose genial, kindly ways make them 'feel kind 'o good,' and they catch the inspiration 'and run with gladness in the way of God's commandments.—Dr. John Hall

The Shepherd and the Sheep.

The shepherd that guardeth the flock that is created to be slain, hath great regard to preserve it in safety, and is not a little careful how he may find the sheep when it is lost, and being it home again; and with no less desire the sheep loveth after the shepherd; whom if it understand to be its own shepherd (as by nature it doth) feareth him not, but runneth unto him with great confidence, and being full of good heed, goeth before him, yea, so soon as ever it hears his voice, it answereth by bleating. On the other side also, the shepherd hath great care and desire to find again the lost sheep which hath strayed from him; both he himself seeketh and sendeth forth servants to seek, wherever he thinketh it is strayed, neither doth he leave seeking, until, having found it, he both brought it home; for he is not ignorant how miserable a living creature a solitary sheep is whose life consisteth only in the help and safe keeping of the shepherd, inasmuch as it cannot rely itself, but being destitute of a shepherd, perisheth. Thus is that picture, resembled in this simple creature, whereby Christ shows us, what affection of mind he bears towards us, and also what we ought to prove ourselves concerning him.—Martin Luther.

The tomb of Jehanara Begum, the eldest daughter of Shah Jehan, bears the touching inscription dictated by herself. 'Let no rich canopy cover my grave. This grass is the best covering for the poor in spirit, the humble the transitory Jehanara, the disciple of the holy men of Christ, the daughter of the Emperor Shah Jehan.'

Any one understanding the real nature of man must perceive that a true religion ought to be based in our nature; ought to know its greatness and its degradation, and the causes both of the one and the other. What religion but Christianity exhibits such a knowledge as this?

False religion is a disordered spirit which is in the order of thirst plunges all passing into fetid and troubled waters; it is an exile, who, in seeking the road to his native land, buries himself in frightful deserts.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it to eliminate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

Human Saved.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the stock is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

Sugar's Warfare.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and possessors (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary purgative, and if taken in season will immediately cure colds on the throat, sore throat, and all bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Hall, Odessey P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Yarmo, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 8th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1868 I was taken with a weakness of the system, which gradually during the spring of 1869, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought without advice, employing at different times three doctors, and which took off different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Sanderson Remedy by reading the cures produced, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Sanderson Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never succeeded to get better, but slowly tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one affected as I was, I have only to say try the Sanderson Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

Mary Ann Dougherty.

Sworn to before me at Madoc County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. P. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Dougherty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have seen her broken, during and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Sanderson Remedy. Wherever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of the world has there been discovered a remedy so universally relied on by the people of all nations as this CHERRY PECTORAL. Considering its wonderful virtues, its power over many other diseases than those of the Throat and Lungs, and the number and importance of the cures it has performed, there is, perhaps, no other remedy now known to mankind, which has any claim to be considered indispensable in every family, as this. Every person should have a bottle by him, and not neglect a cough or cold, however slight, in the hope that it will wear away, when it is night fastening itself on the system, and sapping the foundations of life. Keep the Pectoral at hand, and at the first sneeze, or symptom of hoarseness, or tickling in the throat, take a dose of it, and the disease will be cured before it gets fairly under way. Public Speakers and Singers will find great protection from it.

Minister and Public Speakers and great protection from it.

Hoarseness is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

It counteracts the tendency to Inflammation which follows the inflammation of mucous membranes, and thus prevents the settlement of tubercles, or the formation of consumption, in all cases where the system can be reached by medicine. Indeed, no one who is afflicted with pulmonary complaints can reasonably hope to be cured until he tries the Cherry Pectoral.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent Fever, Remittent Fever, Periodical or Bilious Fever, Autumnal Fever, Dumb Ague, Fever and Ague of the Chest, Bilious Colic, and other Diseases of the Liver, Stomach, and Bowels, originating in Miasmatic Districts.

As the name implies, it does cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance, it is harmless to the most delicate infant, or the strongest and most robust person. It never prostrates the patient with the usual effects of Ague Remedies, but leaves the system as healthy as it is possible to be by the removal of the disease. Our private is guarded by the observance of a strict regimen. Those who have used this remedy have the testimony of the medical men and their neighbors that it is the most perfect antidote for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, and Liver Complaint that has ever been discovered, and that it is a sure protection against the fatal consequences of Ague Districts

Poetry.

THE DIFFERENCE.

MAN.

If he wears a good coat,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though he be but a bloat,
Lift him up.
If he has got common sense,
And breasts of a true piece,
Lift him up.

If his face shows no shame,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though crimes in his name,
Lift him up.
Though disgrace be his part,
Let your daughters his court—
Lift him up.

WOMAN.

If woman once errs,
Kick her down, kick her down;
If misfortune is hers,
Kick her down.
Though her tears fall like rain,
And she never smiles again,
Kick her down.

If a man break her heart,
Kick her down, kick her down;
Redouble the smart—
Kick her down.
And if in low condition,
On, on to perdition,
Kick her down!

CHAPTER VIII.

THE PRESBYTERY.

The next day the rain-drops glistened on the heather under a radiant sun. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias took their carriage in the morning to pay a visit to the shipwrecked fishermen in the village. On the way, Sibylle alighted before the gate of a little garden a short distance from the church, forming upon the southern declivity of the moor an agreeable oasis. Through the vines of clematis and honeysuckle which half covered the latticed gate appeared at the end of the garden a little brown house, adorned with white window shutters and evergreens with bitter-sweet. Sibylle rang the bell. The curate himself opened the door. He wore his Sunday cassock, the skirt of which was carefully pinned up, and held a garden-tool, which fell from his hand as soon as he recognized Sibylle.

'What! How is this?' said he, stammering. 'Is it you, my dear young lady?'

'Yes, father,' said she, 'I have come to take my lesson in the catechism.'

The curate looked at her fixedly, then glanced at the sky, and stealthily brushed away a tear which was escaping from his eyelid.

'Is it possible?' he exclaimed, 'is it possible! Come, my dear child, come, I am quite ready.'

Then with some confusion showing his hands, which were quite covered with dirt, he called hastily:

'Mamma! Marianne! quick! some water!'

An old woman, wearing the costume of the country, came out of the house with a basin.

It is Mademoiselle de Ferias, Marianne,' said the curate.

'Yes, yes, I know it. I know Mam'selle de Ferias,' said the old woman, who did not seem to be in the best possible humor.

And while the curate was washing his hands with feverish haste,

'How nice he looks this morning, Mam'selle, she said, with bitter irony, 'after his rollics and his capers. He looks as if he'd just been dug up.'

'Bah!' replied the curate gayly. 'What makes you think so, Marianne? I feel as fresh as a rose.'

'A fine rose indeed!' grumbled Marianne, and went back into the presbytery.

The Abbe Renaud stood, his head laughing, and made Sibylle sit down beside him upon a semi-circular bench overshadowed by the large leaves of a fig-tree. She put into his hands a catechism she had brought with her.

'But, my child,' said he, 'tell me first what miracle has brought you back to us?'

'You, father, have performed the miracle. Since last night I look upon you as a saint.'

'Dear me!' said the old man blushing. 'My poor child!'

She then related with warmth her impressions of the evening before, and during the recital the Abbe Renaud often raised to his eyes a checked pocket-handkerchief, as large as a Highlander's plaid.

'And will you not tell me,' said he, 'how you were led astray from the faith?'

Sibylle told him, but this part of her confidence was not so frank. She spoke with vagueness of the language and the practices which had disturbed her. She mentioned the Beaumesnil family and some other directors of the same kind, then she stopped short and cast down her eyes.

'Go on, my child,' said the curate kindly, 'go on; I see that my turn is coming. Courage, I beg of you.'

Sibylle had laid her hat upon the bench beside her a moment before, and now the rays of the sun streaming through the thick top of the fig-tree, played around her blonde head like the nimbus of a saint. She raised toward the curate her large eyes, and giving to her smile all the delicacy which might fall her childish language, she related to him the doubts which had repelled her from him. For her a priest was a sacred person, in some wise mysterious, standing upon the steps of the altar as a mediator between God and man. He was a man different from others, exempt from weaknesses, always employed in devout meditation, poring over the sacred volumes, declaring the attributes of God, or communing with him, and a stranger to aught else. She would have wished that he should show himself only in his church, surrounded with clouds of incense, like the Levites of old, and that he should live retired within the shade of his presbytery, like the ascetics of the legends, only emerging from it to visit the poor and the afflicted. She had not been able to suspect, as she would have done, before the altar, in the pulpit, on the carved robes, the same whom she had met before seven dining at her side, taking coffee, playing at billiards, or at whist, reading the newspapers. In thus mingling with the ordinary occupations of common life, the priest had seemed to her to put unworthy of the august character which she would have loved to ascribe to him. He was no longer the priest, but the apostle, the abbe, spoken of in the same tone as the prompter or the notary. He became a poor dependent, who was placed without scruple at the foot of the table among the children. In this she saw not humility, but humiliation. She expressed this thought so clearly as she was able, that the disadvantage of such familiar relations with his rich parishioners reflected the poorest even in his church, where he still remained the poor dependent of those whose spiritual superior he ought always to be. Perhaps even he might feel himself forced by considerations of gratitude or politeness to tolerate language, or practices, or behavior against which an untrammelled conscience would have protested. In brief, these circumstances, and many others which she had doubtless interpreted thoughtlessly, had brought trouble and sadness to her soul; but last evening had opened her eyes, and she begged pardon of the Abbe Renaud for having misunderstood him. Nothing could ever shake again the respect she felt for him; only, she said, these things which had troubled her might still be cause of offence to others.

'And this is why, father,' said she, 'you will perhaps be glad to know what has been passing in my head and in my heart, though they are only the head and the heart of a child.'

During this conversation, only the substance of which we have given, the countenance of the Abbe Renaud had little by little assumed an expression of grave and almost painful seriousness. His intelligence, rather indolent than weak, seemed to awake to a light which almost dazzled him. His conscience, profoundly honest, was overwhelmed. He did not seek to attenuate the errors that were imputed to him; he exaggerated them rather, and extended their influence far beyond the circumstances which were connected with Sibylle alone. He rapidly reviewed in his mind the whole course of his pastoral life, and he asked himself anxiously if the lukewarmness of his flock and the scandals that had afflicted his parish were not owing to personal failings that had weakened the effect and the authority of the divine word; but had Sibylle been alone in the world, he could never have forgiven himself for having contributed to lead astray from the fold of faith this young soul whose exquisite value he fully appreciated. He promised himself to redeem his negligence, to shake off his sloth, to fortify his soul by study and meditation, and to purify his life by privations; to do all that was in his power to raise himself to the moral height to which he was called by this sweet voice that seemed to him almost inspired. These elevated thoughts lent to his features and to his accent a touching nobleness, when, after some moments of quiet reflection, he said to Sibylle:

'I thank you, my daughter; I am no longer young, but one can grow better at every age, and I will prove it, with God's help.'

These ideal views of the life and character of the priest, so artlessly exhibited by Sibylle, were not, moreover, for the Abbe Renaud a new conception. He had but to examine his memory to find the same generous ideas mingled with the first terror of his studious youth. It was indeed thus, it was under this humble but noble aspect, that he had pictured to himself, in his mean student's chamber, and in the cell of his novitiate the duties and the austere delights of his ministry; but once occupied with the realities, and engaged in the complications of social life, he had allowed himself to glide into the common rut, and little by little had fallen into a drowsy life of dull and barren routine. Some dreams of ambitious which once beguiled him had passed away with the rest: it was in vain that other purposes more important than Ferias were offered him; he wanted nothing—he was happy. Labor was distasteful to him, and here there was little to do. Moreover, he was somewhat spoiled. Born a poor peasant's son he had become the guest and the daily table companion of the chief personages of the country, toward whom he manifested the somewhat servile respect of a son of the soil for his lord and master. In brief, the young and enthusiastic deacon had become an honest country curate good, retiring, apathetic, and fond of good cheer; but let some exceptional circumstance startle his slumbering soul, and it is old man, indolent, timid, and loving his ease, was at heart ever ready to become a martyr.

And it was to martyrdom itself that he was at this moment resolutely devoting himself—to the most difficult, perhaps, of all martyrdoms, that of the steadfast and patient soul, which each day, and each hour of the day, resigns itself to the sacrifice of some pleasant habit, some rooted taste, some cherished weakness. Already the excellent man had entered this path of self-denial, had been sacrificing each night some hours of sleep, that he might raise his own culture to the level of Sibylle's intelligence. From this moment, Sibylle was surprised that the explanation with which he accompanied her lessons no longer showed the weak timidity that had before characterized them. Already his language evinced more individual, more precise, and nobler thought.

The arrival of the Marquis and Marchioness interrupted the lesson. While they were exchanging heartfelt congratulations with the curate, an imperious ring was heard at the door, and they soon saw advancing down the box-bordered alley the superb Madame de Beaumesnil, holding in her arms an enormous bouquet of artificial flowers of gorgeous colors. After having fully informed herself of the health of the Abbe, she expressed her astonishment at the amendment of Sibylle. 'At last!' said she; 'better late than never!' and asked for the key of the church. The curate grew slightly pale, and glanced furtively at Sibylle.

'The key of the church!' said he. 'For what purpose, madame?'

'Why, Curate, to arrange these flowers on the altar-vases. Nobody can do it but I, you know. Apropos you didn't notice my flowers; they so given me a great deal of trouble, though, especially the tulips. But when one is doing the Lord's work, one doesn't mind a little trouble—eh! Curate?'

'No, madame; and your flowers are very beautiful; but if you will allow me, I will place them myself upon the altar, with the help of my sacristan. That seems to me more becoming.'

At this answer, Madame de Beaumesnil stood still a moment as if petrified, with open mouth and staring eyes. She had been refused, simply, the keys of her own house: the church was, in fact, for her, like her own chamber; she was there almost every day, perched on the chairs, and sometimes on the altar, using the benches, desks, screens, cushions and perfectly convinced that all these little labors so sanctified her that when she came out of the church, she could with a clear conscience cultivate at her ease all the seven capital sins as soon as she could speak.

'I should like to know,' she said, 'what all this means, my dear Abbe. If you don't wish me to busy myself with the decoration of the church, say so!'

'Any thing you are good enough to give me for the church, madame,' replied the curate, 'will be received gratefully; but if you will have the kindness to reflect upon the matter, as I have reflected, you will agree with me, I am sure, that the dignity of worship must suffer from any foreign intervention. The care of the altar properly appertains to me, and to those to whom I entrust it, under my direction, in the secrecy of the sanctuary. Commit to me your flowers, and I will offer them before God, in your name.'

Madame de Beaumesnil brandished aloft the tinsel flowers, and the paper crackled; then walking with long strides toward a tank of muddy water used for watering the garden, she threw the bouquet into it with violence. After this exploit, she dropped upon the bench, burst into tears, and fell into a quite uninteresting fit of hysterics.

They quieted her as well as they could, and she yielded little by little to the affectionate words of the curate, and at last ended by inviting him to dinner; but he declined, as he had already declined the invitations of the Marquis, under the pretext of indisposition.

But when, after the departure of his guests the Abbe Renaud sat down to his own little solitary table, upon which a lean pigeon was smoking, flanked by a melancholy dish of spinach, he felt for a moment—he was a man—his courage and his appetite both failing him together.

'Are you sick?' said old Marianne in a querulous tone. 'Why don't you eat?'

'A little tired, Marianne,' said the curate, 'a little tired.'

'Oh! your coffee will set you up again.'

He hesitated a few seconds, then said with a profound sigh:

'I won't take any coffee, Marianne; I shan't take it any more in future.'

'Good gracious! what maggot has got into your head now? To change your habits at your time of life! You'll be under ground before six months!'

'Very well, Marianne, I shall be under ground then,' he said.

And he went into his church and closed the door after him.

During the days and months which followed, the conduct of the Abbe Renaud, in his own house or abroad, was in conformity with the firm resolution shown on the beginning. He shut himself up in his parsonage, and it was known he led there the frugal and contemplative life of an anchorite. To the mortification of some, but to the edification of all, he broke off those relations which had not for their direct object the duties of his ministry and was never seen except when in the exercise of his sacred functions. An impression, so to speak, of solemnity became inseparably associated with his presence and his person.

In addition to the respect of the public, he gained by this severity of manners an independence which was precious to him. He was the master in his church; he was able to expel all those encroachments of the laity which often, under color of piety, give so much annoyance to ecclesiastics; he banished all the abuses which, protected by his complaisance, had often sadly offended against the decencies of public worship.

Among these happy reforms—not effected, as may be supposed, without some resistance, and some contests—we will only cite one, which was particularly insisted on by Sibylle. The Chevalier Tardieu, it will be remembered, dragged to sing in the church-choir on Sundays. This honor which he paid to God was at the same time an agreeable diversion for the congregation; for the Chevalier, well known as a jolly companion throughout the country, could not appear in any place without exciting jovial thoughts; even at the foot of the altar he enjoyed this privilege, and his odes quite exceeded all the bounds of comic license; sometimes, by the interpolation of absurd and ridiculous words, to enliven the sacred ceremonies, and sometimes by queer musical intonations, with which he thought it good sport to diversify the psalmody. This indecorum had always grieved the heart of the curate, and had been in the highest degree obnoxious to Sibylle. Some friendly reproofs not having sufficed to repress the unconscionable buffoonery of the Chevalier, the Abbe Renaud at last peremptorily forbade him to enter the choir. This measure, added, perhaps, to some pastoral severities of a more confidential nature, exasperated the Chevalier. The following Sunday he did not appear at church, and had the report carried to the curate that he had borrowed of the County Judge the works of Voltaire. For about six weeks he devoted himself to philosophical researches, and went about the country repeating that the clergy were, after all, no better than they should be, till the disturbance of his humors resolving itself into a severe fit of the gout, he suddenly returned his Voltaire to the judge, and sent for the curate, who came at once at his call.

It is to be hoped that the reconciliation of the Chevalier with his pastor was sincere, for the old giddy-pate was a good one at bottom; but the incident alienated the rare heart of Madame de Beaumesnil, and carried to the last pitch the resentment she had felt toward the Abbe Renaud since the fatal scene of the bouquet. The reforms successively accomplished by the curate had touched her personally in many points, and the thought that Sibylle had to some more or less contributed to effect these innovations did not tend to diminish the irritation they caused. In fact, Madame de Beaumesnil was unhappy; her high reputation for piety, and the supremacy in religious matters which she arrogated to herself in the county, having no other foundation than her intimacy with the curate, now no more sure at the manor, and many trivial practices of easy devotion she could no longer exhibit to the public, the whole edifice of her pride was crumbling. Hereafter, if she wished to pave for a holy woman, she would be obliged to practice some Christian virtues. It was hard. She conceived an idea which came cut to her better. One fine morning she set out on a journey to the city of——, the chief town of the diocese—to which the parish of Ferias belonged. In spite of the mystery with which she surrounded this journey, it leaked out that it had for its object the opening, by competent authority, of an old chapel he caging to the manor of Beaumesnil, and the assignment to its service of a special chaplain. By this arrangement, Madame de Beaumesnil would have had her own church, her own priest, and a God of her own, with all of which she might have done just as she please with the utmost convenience. Unfortunately, the authority which she asked for was refused, and although her journey was not altogether in vain, as will shortly appear, she brought back from it a new store of gall and of malignity. The base passions she nourished did not fail to find sympathizers, and even accomplices, as they will always find them in this wretched world so long as there remains any merit to degrade, any beauty to stigmatize, and just man to crucify, and from this moment a system of calumnies, of insinuances and vexatious of every kind was organized against the curate with that ingenious underhanded perfidy in which all false bigots excel.

The trouble with which these village Pharisees beset him, joined to his excessive labor and the ascetic rigor of his regimen, cruelly tried the courage and the health of the Abbe Renaud. Sibylle began to be anxious when she saw him assuming the physical appearance as well as the virtues of the legendary saints. She confided her anxiety to her grand-parents, and, advised by them, went to confer upon the subject with the faithful Marianne. The old servant did not receive her with cordiality, for the strange influence she had usurped over her master had not escaped her notice.

'Law! yes, it's plain enough! Of course he's failing, he's taking long steps on the road to paradise, poor man! But whose fault is it, Mam'selle? I've told him long ago that you'd make a skeleton of him!'

In spite of her prejudice, Marianne finally yielded to the charm of Sibylle's angelic nature, and a treaty of alliance was apparently signed between them; for the afternoon of that day, as the curate was ending one of his hermit-like repasts, he was not a little surprised to notice in the atmosphere of his little dining-room an aromatic odor he had long forgotten. A moment after Marianne placed before him a smoking cup of coffee.

'But, Marianne,' said he, 'are you crazy? You know I haven't taken coffee these six months!'

'Bah!' said the old woman, making a grimace. 'You'll take it quick enough when you know who made it!'

'How! what! you made it!' said the curate, quite confounded.

The pleasant apparition of Sibylle upon the threshold of the door explained the mystery.

From that day forward the Abbe Renaud noticed that the economical and culinary talents of Marianne seemed to have developed, and to have attained extraordinary proportions, for without any sensation in the household expenses, his table became much more succulent, such art did she display in selecting and cooking the viands.

'You see, my daughter,' he said good-naturedly, 'I was not wrong in sometimes reproaching you for negligence; for now, with a little attention and good order, you work miracles.'

Marianne shrugged her shoulders and did not reply.

Sibylle was now twelve years old, and her course of religious instruction was nearly ended. As the Abbe Renaud was going one day to the church for one of the last lessons, the post man handed him a letter sealed with the episcopal arms. He sat down to read it under a tree by the roadside. As he glanced over it he became ghastly pale. He dragged himself to a little spring hard by, dipped up in his hands a few swallows of water, and then continued on his way with feeble steps. When he reached the chateau, Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, alarmed at the painful expression of his features, interrogated him anxiously. He handed them with a sigh the letter he had just received. It contained a severe and threatening reproach. He was reproached for his spirit of innovation and disorder, for his disputes with his building committee relative to the decoration of his church, and, above, all for the intimate relations he maintained with a person belonging to the Protestant sect, who seemed to exercise over him a scandalous influence, and was leading him quite astray from the orthodox paths. This last cause of complaint, the one to which most weight seemed to be attached, had some show of truth for its basis, although quite erroneous conclusions had been drawn from it; for a friendly understanding, the fruit of mutual esteem, had been established for some months between the curate and Miss O'Neil. Miss O'Neil, revering the virtues of the old man, was pleased to manifest her deference for him by attending more regularly than formerly upon his lessons to Sibylle, which, moreover, had lately become much more interesting.

The curate had never quite abandoned his hope of making a proselyte of the Irish girl, and he was touched by this expression of esteem and sympathy, for he fully appreciated its value. But this was the limit of their friendly relations, and the deepest malice alone could have discovered in them any cause for denunciation.

'I shall make no change,' said the curate coldly, as the Marquis returned to him the compromitting letter, 'for my conscience is clear; but I am afraid that I may not stay much longer among you. All that I ask is that I may be permitted to commit Sibylle into the hands of God; that done, he will do what pleaseth him.'

He found Sibylle in a little room opening out of the library, and particularly re-

Carlist Plotters in Spain.

(From the Cor. New York Times)

It may be safely stated that there is hardly a priest in Spain who is not a Carlist, and the most formidable plots yet discovered, are those in which the clerical element has appeared the largest. In a house here in Madrid, the Catholic League, on Thursday morning last, the Police disturbed six conspirators at their work, whom they had suspected for some time. One of these was a priest named Reig, formerly chaplain to the female prison, and at present chaplain to the Zamora regiment of volunteers; the second was the secretion of one of the convents; the third was an ex-army man named Don Carmen; the fourth was another priest, and the other two were private individuals. It was three in the morning, and they were in solemn conclave. Suspicion had been excited in regard to them by the fact that the five individuals of the storner sex were in the habit of going to the house in question about 10 every evening, and staying till 2 or 3 in the morning. Their visits to Don Carmen, who kept the house, were supposed to have other objects than those of piety, and on the authorities unceremoniously entered and arrested the whole of them, after first discovering "on the premises," and on their persons, enough to justify the act. There were pictures of Charles VII., and letters from Senor Asperin, one of his adherents in Paris; six boxes of the Carlist loan, value 30,000 francs; some fire-arms, powder, and cartridges; a white flag, bordered with silk and gold, with a portrait of Don Carlos in the centre; a document constituting one of the party Commissaries of Asturias and Leon; another document directing him to initiate the movement there in a few days, and to begin at Astorga, Pola, and Robin; a letter from one of the Carlist Generals in Bayonne to Dona Carmen, directing her "to advise all her friends to be ready by the 23rd inst;" lists of parties favorable to the cause; cards with the names of various political personages written on the backs; a metal seal or stamp marked, "Comisario Real of Castile;" a considerable quantity of white boinas the caps the Carlists have chosen as their distinguishing feature of dress; and (truth compels me to add it) not a few of the disgustingly indecent photographs of Queen Isabella and her court, which speculate unblushingly in the Puerta del Sol! Dona Carmen was shown to be the owner of the letter by her signature on the back of the pictures.

The documents found have led to the arrests of many other persons in Madrid and elsewhere—among them several priests and army officers. There is no telling how deep are the ramifications of the conspiracy to seat Don Carlos de Bourbon on the throne.

MARSHAL ADOLPHE NIEL, of France, died August 14th. He was born at Muret, Haute-Garonne, in 1802, and at the age of twenty-one entered the Ecole d'Application at Metz. He became lieutenant in 1827, and entered on military career, during which he has shared in nearly all the important military movements of the French army, and has seen in his life time five sovereigns upon the throne of France.—During the Algerian war he distinguished himself at the capture of Constantine, and received promotion for his services on that occasion. In the expedition to Rome in 1849, he acted as Chief of the Staff of Engineers, and rendered such valuable services that he was appointed a General of Brigade and sent on a mission to Gaeta to carry the keys of the city to the Pope.—The Russian war next offered an opportunity for the employment of his abilities in military engineering operations. He commanded the engineers at the capture of Bomarsund, then went to the Crimea, and reported upon the condition of the army and the state of the siege of Sebastopol, and finally took command-in-chief of the engineers and directed the siege. Soon after the final assault he received the insignia of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, and was created a Senator in 1857, and about this time wrote a work entitled the Siege of Sebastopol. He received the command of the Fourth Corps of the Army of the commencement of the Italian war, and after the victory of Solferino, in which the artillery played so important a part, he was appointed a Marshal of France. In 1867 Marshal Niel was appointed Minister of War, and retained that position during the late change in the Cabinet. His administration of military affairs was characterized by vigor and ability. In the Senate he ably and consistently sustained the policy of the Emperor, and, although openly opposed to Prussian ascendancy in European politics, he yielded to the Emperor's decision against war.

STOPPED HIS PAPER.—The following anecdote of the late Mr. Swain, from the Philadelphia Press, is not without its moral in other latitudes than Pennsylvania: "Many years ago, Mr. Swain, then editor of the Public Ledger, was halted at the corner of Eighteenth and Chestnut streets by a very excited individual, who informed him in the most emphatic terms, 'I have stopped your paper, sir,' and proceeded to explain the why and wherefore, all the time gesticulating wildly. 'My gracious, sir, you don't say so. Come with me to the office, and let us see if we cannot remedy the matter. It grieves me that any one should stop my paper. Down Chestnut street to Third the two proceeded. Arriving at the office, Mr. Swain said, 'Why, my dear sir, everything seems to be going on here as usual; I thought you had stopped my paper.' 'There and there the excited gentleman, whom the long walk had partly cooled, by the way, said he had stopped taking the one copy of the Ledger.

Mr. Swain was profuse in his apologies for having misunderstood the meaning of his late subscriber's words, and regretted that he had given him the tramp from Eighteenth street to Third, down Chestnut. The gentleman took his way home a wiser if not a better man, marvelling at the stupidity of editors in general, and Mr. Swain in particular. Before he left, however he ordered the Ledger to be still sent to his address."

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newmarket, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

HOYT'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

Robbery in the Montreal Post Office.

A clerk in the Montreal Post Office, named George A. Pridham, was on Wednesday evening arrested by Detective Murphy under the following circumstances: About a week ago, a young lady residing in the city, Miss Trow, came to the Post Office and handed to Mr Pridham, the clerk at the wicket, a small package containing a lady's gold watch, addressed to her father at Quebec. Pridham, after receiving it along with the postage, asked whether the package contained glass, to which Miss Trow answered that there was a watch, and re, adding the question as to whether she should register it, Pridham responding that as for it at, she might do as she liked. Miss Trow did not then have it registered.

A few days subsequently, Miss Trow, learning that the watch had not been received by her father, made enquiries at the Montreal office respecting it. The clerk she then saw, some other one than Pridham, stated to her generally that the package must have been duly forwarded. Further enquiry was thereupon made at Quebec, with unsuccessful result, and Miss Trow received a letter enjoining on her to ask the Inspector at Montreal. This was on Thursday last. Before, however, calling on Mr. King, the Inspector, she made that morning a further enquiry at the Montreal office, saying, at the wicket, Mr. Pridham, who, however, replied to her by saying that he could not tell her nothing about the watch, Miss Trow told him she purposed seeing Mr. King, and pressing for investigation into the case. Pridham, on this, said that he would have a look round the office, and see whether the packages might not have been mislaid, and he begged the young lady to call on the following morning. This Miss Trow did, and seeing Pridham, received from him her missing package, Pridham merely saying to her—"If you wish to have it registered, there's the office."

Miss Trow afterwards saw the Inspector, having been requested to do so, and gave to him her statement of the case, Mr. King having called on Mr. Pridham for such explanation as he could give, received, received from him his confession that he had indeed taken the package home with him, opened it, and kept the watch in his possession—he simply pleaded that, in thus doing, he was not actuated by felonious intent, but had returned it for safe keeping until he could see Miss Trow and advise her to have it registered.

The prisoner having been arrested, appeared on Thursday morning before the Police Magistrate, and, after a hearing of the case, was duly committed for trial at the next session of the Court of Queen's Bench.

Mr. Pridham is of a very respectable family, and been employed in the Post Office for only nine months.

The State of Feeling in Prince Edward Island.

A vacancy having occurred in the representation of one of the electoral districts of Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, through the acceptance by its representative of the office of Colonial Secretary, a new election was called for. The nomination took place on the 29th ult., and resulted in the re-election of the former member, the Hon. B. Davies, by acclamation. In his address to the electors, Mr. Davies made particular allusion to the two great political questions which at present engage the attention of the Prince Edward Islanders, namely, those of education and confederation; and, from his position as a member of the Government, and the fact that he was returned without opposition, his views on these two important subjects may be taken as representing not only those of the Government, but a great proportion of the people of the Island, and have, therefore, an interest which, as the mere expression of individual opinion, they might not possess. As regards education, Mr. Davies is decidedly opposed to any change in the present school system, which, he holds, is the best for all classes and creeds. Separate schools are not needed by the community, and if any parties, whether lay or clerical, wish to establish such, they should do so at their own expense. In regard to confederation, Mr. Davies remarked that, as yet, no terms had been offered the Island, which its people would, for a moment, think of accepting; and he appeared to doubt whether it was possible to offer terms that would prove altogether satisfactory. In any case, he could not consent to any measures being taken by the Government of the Province, looking towards union with Canada, until the matter had been submitted to the people and received their approval.

MANY A TRUE WORD SPOKEN IN JEST.—At the Ottawa banquet to Sir Francis Hincks, in reply to the toast of "The Legislature of Canada," Mr. Howe said—It was not very pleasant to respond to a toast like this. He had been a member of some legislature for five and twenty years, and his honest opinion was expressed here in the presence of all those clergymen he saw around him, that he never knew one legislature a bit better than it ought to be (Loud laughter). He remembered a story his father once told him of the old Parliament of Nova Scotia. He said that 'as coming out of the House one day he met Col. Crane, who asked him what was doing in the House. "Egad," he replied, "it's just like a game of whist; the honours are equally divided, and there's nothing to be got but by trick." (Renewed laughter.) He (Mr. Howe) was sorry to say that that was an honest description of the legislators of Nova Scotia, and they all knew that was one of the most pure and incorruptable Provinces in the Dominion. (Laughter. (Laughter.) If that was the case down in Nova Scotia, what must be said of the legislators of Canada? (More laughter.)

THE SACRAPANDILLA DECOCTION OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C Ayer & Co. employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-legged trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble labourers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. Fire vs. Steam at Seventy Miles an Hour.

(Correspondence Grand Rapids Eagle)

To make it as intelligible matter to the reader, I can say that the Buffalo, Corry and Pittsburg road intersects the Lake Shore road at this place. The station at the junction is named Brocton. Now let it be understood that from this point to Magnolia, at the head of Chautauqua Lake (a distance only of about ten miles), a train is carried over an elevation of 700 feet.—From the station to the summit the grade is about 80 feet to the mile, with curves which increase the distance by four miles. It is over this road that the Limestone specialties of petroleum are brought.

On Tuesday evening, about 9 o'clock, a train consisting of six oil-cars and two passenger cars reached the summit on its way to the junction. Here, by some cause as yet unexplained, one of the oil-tanks took fire. The passenger cars were at once detached, and the brakes stopped them.—Next the oil cars were cut off, and the locomotive, tender and a box car, containing two valuable horses and two men, passed down the road, the engineer supposing that the brakesmen on the oil-cars would arrest the course of those; but what was his horror on looking back to see the oil cars in pursuit of him down the grade enveloped in flames. They not only pursued, but overtook him, striking the box-car with inconceivable force, knocking the horses and men flat upon the floor, and yet almost miraculously not throwing the engine from the track.

It was now with the engineer a race for life, and he gave the engine every ounce of steam. Looking south from the place of my residence at that terrible juncture, one of the most magnificent spectacles was witnessed that a man sees in a life time. A sheet of intensely bright flame, 90 feet high, was seen coming down that southern slope, apparently with the speed of a meteor and really very nearly the speed of a hurricane (80 miles an hour); for pursued and pursuer flew over the ground, or rather down it, and around the curves at the rate of more than seventy miles an hour, as the engineer declares, and as everybody can believe who witnessed the spectacle. The whole heavens were illuminated, and the landscape was lit up as by a noonday light. Onward and downward flew the engine, and behind it flew and thundered the huge fiery demon. Twice its prodigious weight was driven against the fugitive as if instinct with a purpose to drive it from the track. It seemed as if to the heroic engineer and fire-man there was a perfect environment of peril. The speed of the engine was such that it ceased to pump; then again the Cincinnati express was due at the junction at this time. The engineer of the oil-train whistled "open switch," and shaking hands with the firemen they bade each other farewell, knowing that their lives depended on the opening of the Lake Shore switch by their friends below, and this was to imperil the express train coming down from the west with its human freight. The engineer on this train saw the fire when it first broke out on the summit, and, supposing he could clear the junction before the flaming terror reached it, he too put his engine to the utmost speed on a level grade. A mile short of the junct on he saw that the effort was a vain one, for the flying conflagration had rushed out upon the Lake Shore track, and was roaring onward in the direction of Dunkirk. He checked the headlong rush of his own train and brought it to a stand-till.

From New York to Sacramento.

Two "Blue Line" freight cars passed through Hamilton yesterday, on the way to New York. They were labelled New York, Chicago, Omaha, Sacramento and San Francisco. They will return from New York loaded with costly goods, statues, marbles, &c., for Sacramento, and will go across the wide rivers, ravines and Rocky Mountains between the two large oceans without any necessity for transferring the freight. On reflecting upon the rapidity of the completion of the all rail route from the eastern to the western coast of America, one is astonished at the enterprise, the genius and the vigor which have been displayed. The new iron route is a novelty to-day, but in a few month to come the stream of travel and traffic will as naturally as can be fall into the new channel. The effect of this will be felt in Hamilton. We shall obtain the luscious grapes of the sunny slopes beyond the "Ridge" before the New Yorkers, by "quite a time;" and fruits and vegetables of early kinds will be eaten here at a slight advance on their "dear season." Refrigerator cars will take care of them and land them in the Detroit market, where, of course, they will be easily available to the Canadian purchaser. To have the market of San Francisco made tributary, and to step on near our doors, is a consummation which we were not far-seeing enough to anticipate.

Chicago is full of the far Western fruit; but when, in the depths of a Canadian winter, we are blocked up by snow, it will be the best time to appreciate the domestic advantages which the Blue Line from the Pacific Coast will afford, while relishing ourselves with sweet oranges and luscious grapes.—Hamilton Spectator.

MASONIC EXCURSION.

BOWMANVILLE, Aug. 31.—An excursion under the auspices of the Pentalpha Chapter of Oshawa, conducted by first principal Dr. B. Patterson of Bowmanville, took place from this district yesterday, by the steamer Norseman to Rochester, and was attended by about 300 Freemasons and their friends including ladies.—The Canadians were received at Charlotte by a deputation representing the various lodges in Rochester, and on their arrival at the city were met by the Knight Templars and Chapters in regalia with other lodges, besides a vast concourse of citizens and a band playing God Save the Queen. The procession headed by Scott's splendid Ryan Zouaves band, marched to the Masonic Hall, where an address of welcome was read by a leading member of the fraternity, and ably responded to by Rev. J. Wild, of Belleville. In the evening a magnificent Collation in honour of the Canadian visitors was served in one of the Masonic Halls, followed by speeches, music and dancing. The reception and entertainment of the Canadians was of the most complimentary and flattering description Everything passed off in the most harmonious manner, and was acknowledged by all, to be to be the most successful and fraternal affair of the kind ever participated in by those of this district. The excellent band of the 45th battalion, Bowmanville, accompanied the party.

All persons suffering from Cancers, which are entirely cured without the use of the knife, Abscess, Ruptures or Sterula, Aneurism, Swellings, Tumours or any Chronic dangerous complaint, should not delay in seeing Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1869.

A MAYOR WANTED.

It is generally reported that there will be a new election for a Mayor, to fill the place of Mr. W. H. Scott, who is absent with his wife in the United States on account of her health. He has not been in Council since the 31st of May, and three months absence from Council leaves the office vacant.

There are numerous aspirants to the office. The names of Mr. Thos. Chambers, Mr. George Edmison and Mr. George Cox being the most prominent. We are not certain that Mr. Chambers cares for the office, but there are good reasons for believing that Messrs. Edmison and Cox are spoken of. There is also a disposition to separate the mayoralty from the police court business in future and to pay Mr. Edwards for doing the work. In case of doing so it would be easy to find a presiding officer, as that would be all the Mayor would be, and then numerous ratepayers have been thinking of Mr. Clanston in connection with office. We are not aware that he has been spoken to on the matter yet. It is useless, however, to pursue the matter any further until the candidates are in the field, and then ratepayers can judge for themselves as to whom they will support. They will then have the matter also of salary or no salary, an important item in hard times.

The Irish Canadian and the Toronto Freeman are not on the most amicable terms, although both professing to represent the Irish element in Canada. The Editor of the Freeman professes to be the only Irish Catholic layman in Canada after McGee, who openly opposed Fenianism. For this and some other matters connected with certain letters which the Freeman refers to as implicating three individuals in the murder of Mr. McGee, the Irish Canadian promises to publish some reminiscences of Mr. Moylan, whom the Canadian says at one time "entered into a solemn league to write Mr. McGee out of the country." This is the Mr. Moylan whom the Government is sending home as Emigration Agent. He should be able to clear this up before he goes home to induce other Irishmen to come here to be hounded as McGee was.

This very extraordinary statement of Mr. Moylan indicates the man's extreme modesty. He is the peculiarly loyal man among his brethren. In this declaration of his own loyalty he casts some suspicion on the entire body of Catholics in Ontario.—While it will be admitted and believed that there were, and perhaps are, Feniane in Ontario, no one except Mr. Moylan would implicate the whole mass of his co-religionists The Lindsay Post very justly remarks that "It comes especially illfavored from a person of that persuasion, who, since his arrival in this country, owes his very subsistence as well as his Government appointment, simply to the accident of having been born a Roman Catholic, and as such made useful as a tool at election periods by his master at Kingston."

If, in future, their fellow citizens show signs of distrust, they need not wonder at it when the editor of the Freeman, a leading Catholic journal, makes such a sweeping assertion. In all leniency towards Mr. Moylan, we think this statement must have been made in an unguarded moment and that he will withdraw it. His appointment as Emigration Agent to Ireland is, however, not so much a reward of merit, of work done, or of super-loyalty, as a sop to Catholics. It is well known that the Catholics of Ontario are not altogether satisfied with the doings of John A. and Cartier, and hence it is feared that they will be a little refractory at next election times. The Premier of the Dominion has, therefore, thought it advisable to temper matters a little by sending Mr. Moylan on a visit to his native country at the public expense. They are not likely however to be caught in the trap, as will be seen by the general spirit of opposition among Catholics manifest on account of his appointment and by their placarding him in every town in the South of Ireland as worse than a "Massey or a Corydon." In view of this Mr. Moylan may confine his labours to Canada, and continue to do the dirty work for J. A. and J. Sandfield, until some office in the Penitentiary to again vacant. John A. used him shamefully in the last appointment. The Canadian may be now trying "to write Moylan out of the country."

There is to be a Temperance Convention at Toronto on the 7th of next month, with a view "to organizing a great political temperance party, whose exertions and aims will be Prohibition and removing from the pages of our statute books these demoralising license laws."

Certificates will be furnished persons who may wish to attend the convention, entitling them to half railroad fare, on application to W. S. Williams, Secretary Canada Temperance Union, Napanee, Ontario.

3rd, Ensign Johnston, stuffed duck.
4th, Pvt Gow, a whip and martingale.
5th, Corp'l English, an album.

In presenting the prizes, Rev V. Clementi, President of the Association, remarked that it was to be regretted that a greater number of people did not take a more lively interest in the shooting match. This was a part of a volunteers work, and a duty of every man to make himself efficient in rifle practice, for the time might come when their skill would be put to the test, and then they should be ready, as he knew every volunteer would be, and he hoped every man in Canada would be ready and willing to fight for his Queen and country. He referred to the shooting as not as good as it ought to be, but accounted for it because of winds and weather, in part, and want of sufficient practice. In presenting the prizes to each individual, he made up in praise what he considered deficient in the whole, by referring to the respectable work of former matches. He made especial mention of Capt. J. Z. Rogers, who won D. R. A. Rifle, and also the Gold Medal for the year ensuing.

HORTICULTURAL SHOW.

The show of garden vegetables, flowers, roots, &c., was held in the Mayor Hall, yesterday. The number of entries, 196, was larger than last year, and the varieties in flowers and green-house plants fully equalled the expectation of the sanguine, taking into consideration the remarkable season.

The floral tribes were fairly represented—Mrs. B. Nicholls exhibited a very nice table bouquet, and Mrs. A. W. Kempt another; Mrs. Kempt also a beautiful floral parrot, pershed on a monument; Miss Ormond also had some beautiful verbenas. Mr. Robert Patterson and Mr. Walter Patterson exhibited collections of flowers of great beauty and variety. A gladiolus by Mr. William Hamilton was very much admired. A large collection of verbenas, pansies, balsams, &c., by Mr. Cooney, added very much to the collection of floral beauties. Sheriff Hall had some very pretty fuchias. Mrs. William Eastland, a pretty window plant. Mr. Kempt, a number of green-house plants.

In the fruit line, Mr. John Gilmour showed 10 varieties of apples, and 12 or 14 varieties of pears, taking up a corner of the fruit department himself. R. Dunlop, Esq., showed apples in 6 varieties, plums in 5 varieties, and besides some fine looking tomatoes Messrs. Robert and Walter Patterson also exhibited some of the best tomatoes and peppers; Robert Patterson had also fine crab apples. Robert Kingan was in the pear line, and Mr. Kempt had pears, plums, gooseberries, in variety, and currants that looked tempting; Mrs. Robert Nicholls, however, took the 1st prize for currants. Wm. Hamilton also exhibited apples and plums.

In roots, Mr. Dunlop, R. Patterson, Sheriff Hall, Walter Patterson and Wm. Hamilton showed their appreciation of potatoes, cabbages, squashes, cucumbers, &c., &c.

Mr. Dunlop had 8 varieties of very fine looking potatoes, besides cabbages, squashes and pumpkins. Messrs. R and W. Patterson an endless variety of all kinds of garden roots.

During the hurry of examining the floral tribe on the one side, and fruit and garden products on the other, we were unable to get the names of all who contributed to the success of the exhibition; we must, therefore, refer our readers to the prize list for the successful exhibitors.

At the close of the evening, Rev. V. Clementi, President of the Ellis Association, aided by Mr. A. H. Campbell and Mr. Cavagnis, presented the prizes to the successful marksmen, a list of which is given in another column.

The Band was present during the evening and enlivened the intervals by some charming music. We think this society has every reason to feel satisfied with the show, and to feel encouraged to go on, continuing festival in well doing, not allowing trifles to discourage them, if they wish to succeed to their utmost wish.

We regret that we received the prize list in such a form that we could not decipher it. It will be given next week.

The Banking King.

Mr. King, Managing Director of the Bank of Montreal, visited Toronto and Hamilton last week. It is stated that while in Hamilton he offered 55 cents for the Gore Bank paid up stock. This bank has been in difficulties for some time, and the directors are now seeking a way to get out of them. The Bank of Commerce has also made an offer for the stock, it is not known publicly what is offered—we think the King. He has also made an offer of 70 cents for Royal Canadian Bank stock. This is 5 cents on the dollar less than Mr. Tarker considered it worth, after due investigation. There can be no doubt but that Mr King contemplates swallowing up all the Western Banks if possible. Should he succeed with the Gore and Royal Canadian he will attempt more. The question for Ontario is would it tend to the commercial welfare of the West to have all the money of the country in the hands of one man? The Government, too, need money, and just as sure as Mr. King can supply them, he will. His terms will be of his own making, and the country must foot the bill. As a manager of a bank, there can be nothing wrong in trying to make the most for the stockholders; but as the tool of a ministry who are too incapable to provide means for present demands, the country has every reason to fear the result of such intriguing in money matters.

Since writing the above, we see that the Gore Bank is to be amalgamated with the Bank of Commerce. Mr. King's offer has been declined. The arrangements were subject to a special general meeting of the shareholders of the respective banks.—At the meeting for the consideration of accepting the offer of the Bank of Commerce at 55 cents, Mr. King offered 57 cents in Montreal Bank stock, at 160. This was declined by a majority of 1,075 votes, 425 voting for accepting Mr. King's.

The Great Boat Race.

The fact of the defeat of the Harvard by the Oxford crew at the International Rowing Match, on the Thames, has been received with satisfaction throughout Canada. At first it was telegraphed here that Harvard had beaten, but next day's news gave a different reading of the matter. The contest was a close one; the Oxford crew won by three lengths, not a great distance in 4½ miles. The time was 22 minutes and 40 seconds. There was considerable excitement during the race. One million of people are said to have been looking on, and 800 police stationed to keep order and see that there was no foul play. The Harvard men have been treated with the greatest courtesy, and praised for the efforts they made to wrest the laurels from the Oxonians on their own course. The victory is considered of national importance, and hence the great excitement on both sides of the Atlantic. Let us hope that the rivalry between the two great nations to win the laurels for good government morality and human progress will continue, and that the day may be far distant, when the two greatest Protestant nations on the globe shall engage in ought else but friendly rivalry.

At a late convention of the Protestant Teachers' Association of the Province of Quebec, it was held that the "natural sciences" are too much neglected in the high schools, and that every teacher should understand these subjects, and teach them. Several of the speakers, members of Boards of Examiners, asserted that the female teachers of that province were better fitted for teaching than male teachers. The following paragraph is worth the attention of those who would exclude the poor by means of high fees. The President, Hon C. Dunkin, M.P.P. said:—

"As to Superior Education many regard our superior schools as for the wealthy,—a notion entirely wrong. Higher schools, as well as common, should be accessible to all, not geographically but pecuniarily. Provision should be made for the poor in our High Schools. The efficient support of the High Schools will [illegible] such objection schools.

Dr. Burns, of Toronto, as well known in Canada and in his native country, Scotland, died last week at the advanced age of 81 years. His labors in connection with the church to which he belonged were active, and useful towards establishing what was known as the Free Church, but what is now the Canada Presbyterian Church. He was educated at Edinburgh, ordained in 1811, was pastor of the church at Paisley till 1844, 34 years; since that period he has labored in Canada—for 21 years till 1855, pastor of Knox's Church, Toronto. From that time till his death he was professor of Church History and the Evidences of Christianity in Knox's College.

The Royal Canadian Bank has again resumed business in Toronto and some other places. The Peterborough branch is removed, report says because of the uncertainty in the length of time some accounts require for winding up. It is well known that in some business longer time is necessary to realise than in others, and it a banking concern cannot afford to continue its accommodation to its customers it had better not open accounts. There can be no doubt but the agent here, Mr. Ogilvie, managed the business well, much better than was done in other places.

The temperance people of Huskey, Lower Canada, have declared their intention of using all lawful means of compelling tavern keepers to respect the law as far as keeping the Sabbath is concerned. Hotel keepers, for the sake of their own good name, should be far respect the law of the land which is in full accordance with the divine law. It speaks very little for the moral beings of a landlord to see his bar lighted up till two o'clock on Sunday morning, then open all day on Sunday and again lit up on Sunday night. Such parties can neither fear God nor regard man.

It is said that Bismarck is using the present period of peace to strengthen colonies to prepare for self-defence, with a view to colonial independence. The withdrawal of troops from the colonies has already been ordered.

There has been considerable excitement [illegible] the Indian quarter, Shingwauk Island, on the shores of Lake Huron, in consequence of the murder of one James Clarke, a prominent Indian. The murder was committed on the 15th inst. The excitement on Canadian soil was caused by the Protestant and consequent trifling on the other side, does not seem to be abating in that troubled and troublesome island.

A MURDER AT OSGOODE, NEAR OTTAWA.—Last week the old farm named Shaw was murdered in the Township of Osgoode.—Shaw had gone to bed and was shot through a window. He had received a second shot, but his family existence were not known; there were constant disputes between him and his sons; one of them is accused of being the murderer and is in custody for it. At the request no conclusive evidence against him was adduced.

The schooner Garry Owen, bound from Cleveland to Toronto, and laden with coal, was lost on Lake Erie. The crew merely saved their lives by means of a small boat. The cargo of the vessel is insured in this locality for $2,000 in gold, on the vessel, and $1,500 in greenbacks on the coal; and the officer was just about paying it, when he received a letter from Buffalo, accusing the captain of scuttling the vessel. The captain maintains the leak story.

"GOOD HEALTH."—The September number of this excellent magazine is received. The leading articles are: Practical Physiology; the Eye and Sight; Sleep and Sleeplessness; the Skin, its management; First help in Accidents; Ventilation; Serpents and Venomous Snakes. Published by Alex. Moore, Boston, $2 per year.

A specimen number of the Educator has been received from Messrs. Jones & Co., London, Ont. It is a monthly periodical, and devoted to the instruction of practical education. It costs only 50 cents a year, postage prepaid. It is very cheap and worthy of a large circulation.

The man McLean, who received some injuries at McDougall & Ludgate's Mills, Harwood, about a month ago, by a car of lumber falling on him, died in Ashburnham on Monday night. He was about thirty-five years of age, and leaves a wife and family to mourn his loss.

Hon. Mr. Howe will return with Hon. Mr. McDougall from Thunder Bay, as far as Collingwood, and proceed then to the Red River Territory. The President of the Council will be absent about two months, and will visit as much of the country as possible.

The Metropolitan of Canada, Rev. Mr. Oxenden, has arrived at Montreal. According to newspaper reports he is likely to be popular. The Montreal Witness says he is of a pleasing aspect and engaging manners, and seemed from the first to create a favorable impression.

A Banquet to the Hon. Mr. Rose, before his departure for England, is arranged.—Messrs. Dorion, Holton and others, politically opposed to Mr. Rose, waited on him to invite him to it. The Toronto Telegraph considers this as an omen of his complete withdrawal from politics.

CUBA.—It is said that Spain has agreed to grant Cuban independence for a fixed sum, provided the United States endorse the Cuban paper. This will put an end to civil strife in that island. Spain has enough to do at home just now.

A fearful storm passed over Montreal and the Eastern Townships last week, doing great damage to everything in its track.—Lake Memphramagog rose 14 inches in 24 hours.

The West Riding Agricultural Show will be held at Peterboro, on the 13th and 14th of October next.

The South Monaghan Agricultural Show will be held on the 15th of October, at Centreville.

The Dummer and Douro Agricultural Show will be held at Warsaw on the 9th of October.

The East Riding Agricultural Show will be held at Keene on the 6th and 7th of October.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—On the 25th inst. Thomas Lethbridge had his left arm caught in one of Bentley's machines, in the short space of eleven hours and forty-five minutes, eighteen cases of much bulged and very heavy wheat. This I think as good a days work as any yet recorded.

Yours truly,
W. BEST.
Emily, August 28th, 1869.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic diseases, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skilful professional physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Hereafter he will be at Caisse's Hotel, on Thursday, September 9th, and will remain till the evening of Saturday, September 11th. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and incurable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession. Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skilful in the treatment of consumption as well as all other diseases and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

THE ROYAL CANADIAN BANK.—Who stole the $16,000 out of the safe of the Royal Canadian Bank at Toronto? Any thing like a question that every Shareholder has a right to ask. Must the President, or the Vice-President, or one of the Directors, or the Cashier, or the Book-Keeper, or the Teller, or one of the younger Clerks, or the Messenger, be under the enquiry. And the Shareholders should not be satisfied, or allow the Bank to resume specie payments, until the thief is discovered, or the whole of the Bank Officers dismissed and their places supplied with honest men. Somebody stole the money, and that somebody should be discovered. At the coming session, Mr. Small will be titled for defrauding the Bank of one thousand pounds sterling, and will be prosecuted by the Officers of the Bank; but how can the Bank expect a verdict of guilty against Mr. Small, when at Toronto the same Officers allow the safe of the Bank to be

PAUPERISM.—The New York Evangelist has a startling article upon the increase of pauperism in Great Britain. In 1844 the number of on-demand paupers was 800 000; their cost of support was $24,000,000 per annum. In 1854 the number was 934,000; their cost, $28,160,000. In 1864 the number was 1,014,000; their cost, $32,118,000; their cost, $36,695,000. "In the last seven years the population has increased seven per cent.; the number of paupers had increased nine per cent.; and there was an increase in the expenditures of thirty per cent." Our immediate interest in the subject is the peril that such an evil may overtake us. For the purpose of averting it, the best minds of the Christian world should be employed upon the subject. The fruitful sources of all poverty are ignorance and unrestricted evil institutions. When once they are fixed in the habit of life it is almost impossible to eradicate them. The gambler, the thief, the licentious man, the drunkard, ever speed downward to worse habits and more irremediable ruin. Very little can be done for them in mature life. But the children can be save from crime and pauperism. For this purpose they require education and means of earning a support. "We talk over it," said a boy of the Industrial School to me, "what we shall do when we go out." "What do you want?" I asked. "To learn a good trade by which we can earn a living."

EMIGRANTS STARVING ON THE PLAINS.—A great number of emigrants are daily passing down Snake River Valley, on their route to Oregon and the Territories, hailing mostly from Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, and the Western States. An unusual degree of destitution and consequent suffering seems to prevail among them. Indian depredations, sickness, and accidents have reduced many to a deplorable condition; hungry, foot sore, and weary, they plod along, more dead than alive, until now and then a good Samaritan falls in their way, and temporarily relieves their suffering and distress. Col. Jennings informed us that on his return from the Snake River Ferry with a load of meal a few days since, he met with several of the class whose destitute and pitiable condition caused him to shed tears. Mr. Jennings, with the characteristic generosity of an old pioneer, gave most of his load away to the sufferers.

The New York Sun says reporters at railroad accidents will probably have plenty of business the next few weeks. The three great lines to the West, the Pennsylvania Central, the Erie, and the New York Central, purpose running trains throughout Chicago in 30 hours, including stops. As the distance by the first-named line is 998 miles, by the second 990, and by the third 961, it will be seen that an average speed will have to be kept up, while the train is in motion, of considerably more than thirty miles an hour. On the thoroughly well built roads of England, with their light cars and engines, such a rate is safe enough; but we tremble for the consequences when we think of our uneven tracks, sharp curves, and feeble locomotives. It is, however, probable that the wear and tear of this high speed will prove so enormous as soon for the institution. Mr. Peake is prolonging his stay at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where his health is improving.

WAR AT THE CAPE.—There are some rumours of a war breaking out at the Cape, with the Coranas. If so, the Cape colonists will have to manage it themselves. The pensioners were in South Africa, caused chiefly by the overbearing behaviour of the whites, and their determination to take the lands and cattle of the native, whenever they thought they needed them, have cost Britain more lives and treasure than could easily be estimated.

On Friday last a shoemaker named Henry Knowles, doing a small business in Dundee, inflicted a deep gash in his throat with some sharp instrument. He lingered on a few days, when he died. It appears that he had been very despondent for some time, brought on by domestic affairs, depression of trade, and the effects of drinking. Deceased was forty-five years of age, and formerly resided in Rochester, New York. He had many friends in Dundas, and his untimely end is deeply deplored.

A Household Necessity, Dr Colby's Pills

An English farmer, it is said, by picking over his seed wheat with the utmost care, and planting a grain to a plant at an interval of a foot each way, obtained 182 bushels to the acre.

A man named Hoi ourphie, of Stanstead, committed suicide on Monday last while temporary insane.

At a Public Meeting held in Suffolk a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollcs, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," One be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in Horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hand &Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

CERTIFICATE

(Omemee, July 21, 1869.

Mr. A. Mowry, Dear Sir,—In reply to your request desiring a statement as to how I was satisfied with the Separator, that I purchased from you last season, I have much pleasure in saying that it gives me every satisfaction. The wheat is very light, and the Machine does its work so completely, and is so very easy on the Feeder, and free from dust, in fact it is the best Thresher that I ever put a sheaf of wheat through, and I have used one for 25 years, and have had some of the best machines that could be got. I would advise all those wishing to purchase a good machine to go to Mr. Mowry, Ashburnham. JAMES CAMERON. Westwood P.O.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-CONSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Cleanses, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pleathire or Asthma, and hastens to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diphtheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bee bites, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, accompanied extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is an imposition but a safe and sure remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, restoring the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

YARCO, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbours and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOCKITY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Dockity for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that is her case. It has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

PAUPERISM.—The New York Evangelist has a startling article upon the increase of pauperism in Great Britain. In 1844 the number of out-doored paupers was was 800 000; their cost of support was $64,280,000 per annum. In 1854 the number was 986,000; their cost, $26, 180,000. In 1864 the number was 1,014, 000; their cost, $32, 115, 000; their cost. $34, 695,000. "In the last seven years the population has increased seven per cent.; the number of paupers had increased nine per cent.; and there was an increase in the expenditures of thirty per cent." "Our immediate interest in the subject in the peril that such an evil may overtake us. For the purpose of averting it, the best minds of the Christian world should be employed upon the subject. The fruitful sources of all poverty are ignorance and excessive self indulgence. When we see they are fixed in the habit of life it is almost impossible to eradicate them. The gambler, the thief, the licentious man, the drunkard, every speed dangerous to severe habits and more are rioyards ruin. Very little can be done for these in mature life. But the children can be save from crime and pauperism. For this purpose they require education and means of earning a support. "We talk over it," said a boy of the Industrial School to me, "what we shall do when we go out." "What do you want?" I said. "To learn a good trade by which we can earn a living."

EMIGRANTS STARVING ON THE PLAINS. —A great number of emigrants are daily passing down Snake River Valley, on their route to Oregon and the Territories, hailing mostly from Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, and the Western States. An unusual degree of destitution and consequent suffering seems to prevail among them. Indian depredations, sickness, and accidents have reduced many to a deplorable condition; hungry, foot sore, and weary, they plod along, more dead than alive, until now and then a good Samaritan falls in their way, and temporarily relieves their suffering and distress. Col. Jennings informed us that on his return from the Snake River Ferry with a load of meal a few days since, he met with several of the class whose destitute and pitiable condition caused him to shed tears. Mr. Jennings, with the characteristic generosity of an old pioneer, gave more than half of his load away to the sufferers.

The New York Sun says reporters of railroad accidents will probably have plenty of business the next few weeks. The three great lines to the West, the Pennsylvania Central, the Erie, and the New York Central, purpose running trains through to Chicago in 30 hours, including stops. As the distance by the first-named line is 998 miles, by the second 980, and by the third 961, it will be seen that an average speed will have to be kept up, while the train is in motion, of considerably more than thirty miles an hour. On the thoroughly well built roads of England, with their light cars and engines, such a rate is safe enough; but we tremble for the consequences when we think of our uneven tracks, sharp curves, and forty ton locomotives. It is, however, probable that the wear and tear of this high speed will prove so enormous as soon to force a return to the slower but safer pace heretofore followed.

SALE OF THE RICHARDSON MINE.—The property of the Richards a Gold Mining Company was put up for sale this day at noon, according to adjournment of the 16th inst. The first bid was $9,000, which was up by a spirited competition to $12,700. After the lapse of a few minutes $13,000 was bid and immediately advanced to $13,100. The last bidder, however, not being provided with the cash for prompt payment, and the next lower withdrawing his bid, the sale was again postponed till 3 o'clock this afternoon, when the property was set up at $12 700 & after standing for some time a further advance to $13 was offered, making $12,713, at which sum it was knocked down, the purchaser being James Brown, Esq., M. P.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THANKFULNESS.—If one should give me a dish of seed and tell me there were particles of iron in it, I might look for them with my eyes, and search for them with my clumsy fingers, and be unable to detect them, but let me take a magnet and sweep through it, and it would draw to itself the most inscrutable particles, by mere power of attraction. The unthankful heart, like my fingers in the past, discovers no mercies, but let that thankful heart sweep through the day, and, as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find, in every hour, some heavenly blessing to be won to God's use and to gold.—O. W. Holmes.

LONDON, August 21.—The Standard has the following criticism on the late boat race:—"The rowing of the Blackwall was rather injudicious—it was too fast to last. The want of a good recovery left them tired up over their oars at the end of the stroke; they recovered out well and rowed with straight backs and arms, but there was no work in their stroke. Though the Oxonians were heavier, it does not follow that weight brought them in first; it was rather their style. In the long run style is sure to win when strength is equal.

There is said to be a pensioner, named Jones, living in the town of Niagara, who is 106 years old. He hearty to be that on Wednesday last he rowed a boat, containing two ladies and himself, up the Niagara river for a mile or so. The current in the river runs at the rate of from four to six miles an hour, and to row a boat against such a current must be set down as something extraordinary for a man 106 years of age. Jones was discharged from the British army 76 or 78 years ago, so it is likely is now the oldest pensioner on the list.

Mr. George Peabody has added another magnificent gift to the long list of his generous benefactions. He has just donated to the trustees of Washington College, Va., the sum of $60,000, in order to secure additional professorships which Gen. Lee, President of the College, has been anxious to secure for the institution. Mr. Peabody is now lounging his stay at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where his health is improving.

WAR AT THE CAPE.—There are some rumours of a war breaking out at the Cape, with the Coranna. If so, the Cape colonists will have to 'manage' it themselves. The pensioner wars in South African entered chiefly by the overbearing behaviour of the whites, and their determination to take the lands and cattle of the native, whenever they thought they needed them, have cost Britain more lives and treasure than could easily be estimated.

On Friday last a shoemaker named Henry Kinnings, doing a small business in Dundas, inflicted a deep gash in his throat with some sharp instrument. He lingered on a few days, when he died. It appears that he had been very despondent for some time past, owing to domestic affairs, depression of trade, and the effects of drinking. Deceased was forty-five years of age, and formerly resided in Rochester, New York. He had many friends in Dundas, and his untimely end is deeply deplored.

A Household Necessity, Dr. Colby's Pills

An English farmer, it is said, by picking over his seed wheat with the utmost care, and planting a grain in a place at an interval of a foot each way, produced 102 bushels to the acre.

A man named McLauchlin, of Stanstead, committed suicide on Monday last while temporary insane.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbors, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate contest was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it to alleviate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, "my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;" they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is "Darby's Canadian Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd &Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of liniment to destroy Lyons' Kathairon Liquid. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one equal. Beware of Counterfeits.

Statistics from about one-third of Finland show that during 1868 there were 52,166 deaths, chiefly from famine, and that during the same time only 12,685 children were born. In some districts the mortality was from thirteen to sixteen per cent of the population.

CONCENTRATION the great principle.

The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HARTER'S CONCENTRATED CURES. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-CATHARTIC AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Professions.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.

—Those who have no hair may have it. Those who have scanty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HURD'S EXPRESS HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, br lses, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and undeniable fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, unnatural cutrecities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling, cough, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 32

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and sure remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, faintness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARL

Poetry.

REWARDS OF MERIT.

BY THACKERAY.

If ingrates are by all abhorred,
More merit might accept reward:
The preacher who devotes his days
To leading men to mend their ways;
The doctor whose wise skill contrives
To beat our ills and save our lives;
The teacher who the task enjoys
The ruling o'er our wilful boys;
The man whose life and means are spent
That he may something new invent
To start us like the barrow mill
To save our lives from needless toil;
Such men should have their merits weighed,
And for their services be paid.

But this is not the modern view,
And this is not the way to do,
We grudge the money that we pay
To keep the clergy under way;
We count the doctor's bill a tax,
Put lowly give to fools and quacks.
The teacher's means will just afford
To buy his clothes and pay his board.
The man who makes a new machine
Must have an intellect most keen,
And spend his life in legal fights,
Or be despoiled of all his rights.

Instructive books are not perused,
Nor useful arts we have no cash,
But gladly pay it out for trash.
The shameless girl who on her toes
All round the playhouse pla form goes
Gets higher wages, more applause,
A greater crowd of pra.se draws,
Than wise philosophers could raise
In teaching wisdom all their days.

These are the prospects of our friends
Who shape their lives to worthy ends.
Let not the picture make you fret,
Nor acts of usefulness regret.
Expect not gratitude or self,
Let virtue's work reward itself.

Varieties.

Witty Remains of Artemus Ward.

We extract the following from a new book just issued, entitled "Artemus Ward's Panorama, as exhibited in the Egyptian Hall, London:"

"HIS ARTISTIC CAREER.

"I could draw on wood at a very tender age. When a mere child, I once drew a small cartload of raw turnips over a wooden bridge. The people of the village noticed me. I drew their attention. They said I had a future before me. Up to that time I had an idea it was behind me.

"Time passed on. It always does, by the way. You may possibly have noticed this always does. It is a kind of way time has.

"I became a man. I haven't distinguished myself at all as an artist; but I have always been more or less mixed up with art. I have an uncle who takes Photographs, and I have a servant who takes anything he can get his hands on.

"HIS MUSICAL IDEAS.

"I like music. I can't sing. As a singist I am not a success. I am saddest when I sing. So are those who hear me. They are sadder even than I am.

"I found music very soothing when I lay ill with fever in Utah; and I was very ill I was fearfully wasted. My face was down to nothing, and my nose was so sharp I didn't dare to stick it into people's business—for fear it would stay there and I should never get it again. And in those dismal days a Mormon lady—she was married though not so much as her husband, he had fifteen other wives—she used to sing a ballad commencing, "Sweet bird do not fly away," and I told her I wouldn't. She played the accordeon divinely—accordeonly I praised her.

"THE STEAMER ARIEL.

"I went to California on the steamer Ariel. This is the steamer Ariel

"Oblige me by calmly gazing on the steamer Ariel; and when you go to California, be sure and go on some other steamer, because the Ariel isn't a very good one.

"THE PICTURE OF THE GREAT DESERT.

"This picture is a great work of art.—It is an oil painting done in petroleum. It is by the old masters. It was the last thing they did before dying. They did this and then expired.

"The most celebrated artists of London are so delighted with this picture that they come to the hall every day to gaze at it. I wish you were near to it, so you could see it better. I wish I could take it to your residences, and let you see it by daylight.—Some of the greatest artists come here every morning before daylight, with lanterns, to look at it. They say they never saw anything like it before—and they hope they never shall again.

"When I first showed the picture in New York, the audience were so enthusiastic in their admiration of this picture that they called for the artist—and when he appeared they threw brick bats at him.

"BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Brigham Young has two hundred wives. Just think of that. Oblige me by thinking of that. That is he has eighty actual wives and he is spiritually married to one hundred and twenty more. So we may say he has two hundred wives. He loves not wisely, but two hundred well. He is dreadfully married. He's the most married man I ever saw in my life

"I saw in mother-in-law while I was there. I can't exactly tell you how many there is of her, but it is a good deal. It strikes me that one mother-in-law is about enough to have in one family—unless you are very fond of excitement.

"BRIGHAM YOUNG'S FAMILY.

"The last picture I have to show you represents Mr. Brigham Young in the bosom of his family. His family is large, and the olive branches around his table are in a very tangled condition. He is more a father than any man I know of. When at home—as you here see him—he ought to be very happy, with sixty wives to a minister to his comforts, and twice sixty children to soothe his distracted mind. Ah! my friends, what is home without a family?"

County of Peterborough Directory

THE compilers beg the solicitation of a wide-spread business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving names residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received any where near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that Money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon of their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to [illegible] and Halliburton Railway Company, by giving $10,000 to the Company thereof, and to authorize the issuing of Bonds to raise an equal sum for the said Municipality in aid of the said Railway.

WHEREAS by the Act of the Second Session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, passed in the Thirty-second Year of Her Majesty's Reign, intituled An Act to incorporate the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company, it is provided that:—"It shall further be lawful for any Municipality or Municipalities through any part of which, or near which, the Railway or works of the said Company shall pass or be situated, or which may be benefited thereby, to aid and assist the said Company by loaning or guaranteeing, or giving bonus by way of bonus, or other means to the Company, or issuing Municipal Bonds, to or in aid of the Company, and subscribe in such manner and to such extent as such Municipalities or any of them shall think expedient—provided always that no such aid, loan, bonus, or guarantee shall be given except after the passing of By-laws for the purpose and the adoption of such by-laws by the ratepayers as provided in the Railway Act."

And whereas the Municipality of the Township of Harvey has determined to aid and assist the said Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars by way of bonus, under the authority conferred by the said above recited Act.

And whereas to carry the last recited object into effect it is necessary for the said Municipality to issue debentures for the said sum of $10,000, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable in the manner hereinafter provided.

And whereas the amount of the whole rateable property of the said Municipality, according to the last revised assessment roll of the said Municipality, being for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, was one hundred and four thousand six hundred and ninety-eight dollars.

Be it therefore enacted by the Council of the Corporation of the Municipality of the Township of Harvey, in the County of Peterboro', and Province of Ontario:

I. That it shall and may be lawful for the said Municipality to aid and assist the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Company, by giving thereto the sum of ten thousand dollars.

II. That it shall be lawful for the purposes aforesaid, for the Reeve of the said Municipality to cause any number of debentures to be made for such sums of money as may be required for the said purpose, not less than twenty-five dollars each, and not exceeding in the whole the amount of ten thousand dollars, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Municipality, and be signed by the Reeve and Treasurer thereof

III. That the said debentures shall be made payable at the office of the Bank of Toronto, in the Town of Peterboro', and shall have attached to them coupons for the payment of interest at the rate and in the manner hereinafter mentioned. Such debentures being made payable for the following amounts, at the following times, that is to say on the thirtieth day of December in each of the following years there shall become due and be paid, namely:—in 1871, Two Hundred Dollars.

1872, Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1873. Three Hundred Dollars.
1874, Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1875, Four Hundred Dollars.
1876, Four Hundred Dollars.
1877, Four Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1878, Four Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1879, Four Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars
1880, Five Hundred Dollars.
1881, Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
1882, Five Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1883, Six Hundred Dollars.
1884, Six Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1885, Six Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1886, Seven Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars.
1887, Seven Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.
1888, Eight Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars
1889, Nine Hundred Dollars.

Making in all the said sum of ten thousand dollars.

IV. That the said debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per cent per annum from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half-yearly on the thirtieth day of June and December in each year at the Bank of Toronto in the said Town of Peterboro'.

V. That for the purpose of paying the said debentures, and the interest thereon as aforesaid, there shall be raised, levied and collected, a special rate in each year, in addition to all other rates upon all the rateable property in the said Municipality during the said term of twenty years, from the coming into effect of this By-law, unless such debentures shall be sooner paid, and such rate shall be sufficient to pay the debentures falling due, and all interest on the then outstanding debentures hereby authorized to be issued falling due within the year for which such rate is levied

VI. That this By-law shall take effect on, from and after the thirtieth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine.

VII. That the debentures to be signed and issued as aforesaid, shall be delivered by the Reeve of the Municipality to the Trustees appointed [or to be appointed] in accordance with the Eleventh Section of the Act incorporating the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company.

VIII. And it is further enacted by the Municipal Council aforesaid that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken on the proposed By-law at the following place, that is to say, at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on the eighth day of September, A. D., 1869, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and closing at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, and that the following person shall be Returning Officer, for taking the said votes, namely: Wm. McCamus Hall, Clerk of the said Municipality.

Take Notice

That the above is a true copy of a proposed By-law, which will be taken into consideration by the Council of this Municipality, after one month from the first publication in the Peterborough Examiner, the date of which first publication was Thursday, the twelfth day of August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and that the votes of the electors of the said Municipality will be taken thereon at the School House at Hall's Bridge, on Wednesday, the eighth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the morning.

[This cut represents Mr. O. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Wooden Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

To Messrs. Carmichael & Sons, Conway P.O., County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Ameliasburgh, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the system, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on me to my bed, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great "Shoshonees Remedy by reading the same purchased, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. That case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one affected as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy;; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. P. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I knew that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

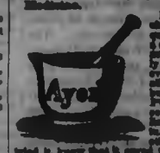
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Purging as an agent, this is the most effective medicine which can be employed by physicians for the cure of disease. In the whole range of the Pharmacopœia, no other cathartic can be found which will accomplish as many cures of the various ailments which afflict humanity. Prostration, Headache, Biliousness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Foul Stomach, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Worms, Ulcers, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Eruptions, Tumors, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Boils, Tetter, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Sore Throat, Piles, Fistula, Blotches, Pimples, Pustules, Blains, Cankers, Chronic Inflammations, and Liver Complaints, are the offspring of impure blood, and all can be cured by it when taken according to our directions. Every family should have a box of these Pills in the house, as a protection against the above complaints, and for the prompt relief and speedy cure of the first symptoms of disease in the system. Many times a slight attack is warded off by taking a dose or two of these Pills to prevent the development of disease. Many times a dose of these Pills will save a great deal of suffering. Keep them by you, for when needed they are worth many times their cost. Their sugar coating preserves them always fresh, and they may be taken with safety by any one. Being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate into healthy action the various organs of the body, restoring them to their natural tone and vigor. In this way the cause of disease is expelled, and the patient is restored to health by correcting whatever may be wrong in the system. When taken for any of the above complaints, we advise that the following directions be observed, and a perfect cure will follow:

For a Purgative Medicine, Dose, One to four pills, according to the age and habit of the patient. For Costiveness, Indigestion, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Worms, Ulcers, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Eruptions, Tumors, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Ringworm, Boils, Tetter, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Sore Throat, Piles, Fistula, Blotches, Pimples, Pustules, Blains, Cankers, Chronic Inflammations, and Liver Complaints, they should be taken for each case, to correct the disorders of the stomach or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, but one pill dose is generally required.

For Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Cholera, Cholera Morbus, and Bilious Fever, they should be taken in connection with Ayer's Cathartic Pills, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Suppressed Secretions they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a powerful cathartic.

For Rheumatism a large dose should be taken as it produces this complaint by an acrimony. As a Purifier of the blood, these Pills have no equal. They purify the blood, and cause all impurities to be expelled from the system.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, thereby purifying the blood and curing disease of every name. Those who take laxatives will find these Pills the best cathartic ever used, as they are sugar coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly. They are the cheapest pill in the market, as every box contains more than twice as many pills as other pills sold at the same price, and their unequaled virtues make them the most reliable and economical pill for use in every family.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this compound has attained, is derived from its cures. Public confidence in any article of medicine is the result of knowledge, based upon the experience of those who have used it. Hence arises the unparalleled success of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It promotes the health of the community, wherever it is known, by expelling from the system the foul corruptions which breed disease and undermine the constitution. Scrofula, Erysipelas, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tetter, Scald Head, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Female Weaknesses, Sterility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Painful Menses, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effects. Many of the worst cases that baffle the skill of physicians, and which have been pronounced incurable, yield speedily to its powerful influence. Even in cases of confirmed Consumption, Intermittent Fever, Mercurial Complaints, Paralysis, Dropsical Swellings, Tumors, Cancers, Humors, and Diseases of the Kidneys, and of Females, when the constitution is saturated with disease, and the vital powers are prostrated, this Sarsaparilla will display the full measure of its virtues in the cure of the most desperate maladies. Those who are afflicted with any of the diseases for which this Sarsaparilla is recommended, should not be discouraged after a few trials, but persevere in its use according to the directions, and they will be rewarded with health, if it be within the reach of medicine. Many remarkable cures of Scrofula, Erysipelas, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tetter, Scald Head, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Female Weaknesses, Sterility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Painful Menses, are constantly occurring in our practice, which are publicly known in every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or mine.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, too, it seems small amount of the organism, and invites the attack of other diseases, without exciting suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed indolent tumors throughout the body, and there, as occasion favors, cause fearful ravages, break into one or other of its hideous forms, either destructive or smeary, the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be readily deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors finally in the liver, or there may be processes of ulceration in the kidneys, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the constant use of it by persons in the Sarsaparilla is the infallible, even when no bodily symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief by a few doses, even, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: Liver Complaint, Fever, Sores or Erysipelas, Pimples, Salt Rheum, Boils, Blotches, Tetter, Ringworm, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, and other symptoms of visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more complex forms of Scrofula, Dropsy, Mercurial Diseases, Fits, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long course is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any remedy. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Painful Menses, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effects. Many of the worst cases that baffle the skill of physicians, and which have been pronounced incurable, yield speedily to its powerful influence. Even in cases of confirmed Consumption, Intermittent Fever, Mercurial Complaints, Paralysis, Dropsical Swellings, Tumors, Cancers, Humors, and Diseases of the Kidneys, and of Females, when the constitution is saturated with disease, and the vital powers are prostrated, this Sarsaparilla will display the full measure of its virtues in the cure of the most desperate maladies. Poetry.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

She is cunning, sometimes witty:
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow;
Not too young, and not too old;
Half inviting, half repellent;
Now advancing, and now shy,
There is mischief in her laughter,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is polished in every art,
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of the heart.
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh, and when to smile;
Oh! a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while.

Are you sad? oh! then how serious
Will her pretty face become!
Are you angry? she is wretched,
Saddened, friendless, fearful dumb.
Are you merciful? how her laughter,
Silver sounding, will ring out!
She can lure and catch and play you
As an angler does a trout.

Ah! old fossils, soaring fifty,
Who are plotting deep and wise:
And Adonises of twenty,
With the love light in your eyes—
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the Fall:
But I know a little widow
Who can win and fool you all.

PART SECOND.

CHAPTER I.

CLOTILDE.

We will not dwell upon the three or four years which followed Sibylle's first communion. For her, and for those about her, it was an era of perfect felicity. Her quickness of music and painting, under the direction of Miss O'Neil, became almost a talent, and was the source of much pleasure, both to herself and others.

At the same time, her intellect made more clear and supple by experience, lost little by little, that childish rigidity which had been the excess and the defect of her character:

Now, too, her woman's heart began to awaken, and to temper with a sweeter tint the severity of her graces.

This new phase of her moral life was exhibited, in religious matters, in an interesting manner. Perhaps the reader will have noticed, in the first part of this tale, a disposition on Sibylle's part which had given much anxiety to Monsieur de Ferias—a strange tendency to rearb up to God, as it were, at a single bound, quite neglecting all intermediaries. This inclination, though in a great degree instinctive with Sibylle, was ascribable, also, to her age. The zeal of children, though passionate and enthusiastic, is not tender. So the Old, rather than New Testament is their favorite book.

The simple idea of God at once impresses their intelligence and dominates it, but the Gospel drama, although it interests their curiosity by figured representations which amuse them, never really speaks to their understanding or their heart. The divine meaning of the Great Mystery entirely escapes them, and the human parts of it do not touch them. It is only when passion has begun to breath a new life into their soul that Christ enters in as a God, but also as a friend.

This modification of the religious sentiment, which, we believe, generally takes place, certainly did so with Sibylle. That which had hitherto been but a vague article of faith seemed to take a new life in her thought. The incomparable poesy of the Gospels captivated her beyond measure, and she was devoted to the only idolatry permitted a Christian—the idolatry of Christ.

She loved in her conversations with Miss O'Neil and with the curate, to be extensive on this subject, to recall the most touching episodes of that pure existence, to admire the mingling of divine impassability and of human weakness, its most striking feature; she passed delicious hours in these enthusiastic raptures, sometimes during long evening walks with the Irish girl among the woods, while the golden stars glistened through the thick foliage; sometimes seated upon the green sod of the cliff, beside the old priest, vaguely gazing at the fiery-hued horizon, or plucking, with wandering and listless hand, the blue berries of the heather.

The empire which Sibylle had gained over the mind of the curate had not been weakened, but with years had grown more gentle and, as it were, relaxed. Mademoiselle de Ferias now sometimes smiled at the excesses of her own zeal. Her interventions in religious matters only occurred at rare intervals, and each succeeding day with a more marked shade of tolerance, especially toward the person of the old priest. Far from encouraging him in his austerities, she employed innocent devices to withdraw him from time to time from the rigors of his solitude and of his regimen.—But on all points which seemed to her essential to the dignity of worship she was still inflexible, and did not hesitate to suggest to the Abbe Renaud comments which he followed with a docility that greatly diverted Monsieur de Ferias and the Marchioness.

'My dear,' said he, laughing, 'she is a spiritualist—she is trying to spiritualize the parish!'

This pleasantry of the Marquis was a sufficiently accurate expression of the constant aspirations of Sibylle and of the meritorious efforts of the Abbe Renaud.

We will enter into no further details touching these delicate matters, of which we have perhaps already spoken too freely, although we have endeavored to treat them with the respectful reserve to which they are entitled. It will suffice to say, that, under the pastoral rule of the Abbe Renaud in the parish of Ferias, divine worship was practiced with a rare purity, and the decisions of the Church in no wise subserved.

About this time Sibylle had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with Madame de Vergnes, her maternal grandmother.

The Count de Vergnes, on two occasions since the birth of Sibylle, had come ostensibly to see himself away from his Parisian life and passed three or four days at Ferias.—Sibylle loved him, because, in the first place, he was an amiable man, and, in the second, because his image always appeared to her surrounded by magnificent frameworks, agreeably made up of candles, spring-locks, and necklaces of fine pearls; but she had never met her grandmother de Vergnes. This lady, to spare the delicate sensibilities to which she made pretensions, had kept off from year to year any exposure to the emotions whose violence she had probably exaggerated; for, on perceiving her granddaughter, for the first time, in the waiting-room of the railway-station, she looked at her with great calmness, turned to an old chambermaid whom she had brought to assist her in the expected nervous crisis, and said quite tranquilly:

'Look at her, Julie! She's the very image, the living image of what I was at fifteen! It makes me feel sad! Poor little girl!' she added, embracing Sibylle, and brushing away a tear which had sprung from some mysterious source.

For twenty four hours after Madame de Vergnes' arrival at Ferias, one would have supposed that she would certainly fix there her future residence, so sensible was she to the poetic aspect of the country. The woods, the sea, the fields, the song of the birds, all delighted her; each time she went out out of doors it was with a new rapture.

'Heavens!' said she to her hosts, 'how happy you are in being able to live here! Do you really appreciate your happiness? Are you not too much accustomed to it to really taste all its sweetness? The calm, this silence, and then these sounds, the wind among the trees, the cattle lowing in the distance, these fine pheasants, they are pheasants, are they not, these little yellow birds? No! Chickens, are they—only chickens? Well these little chickens, which treat about after their mother, calling peep! peep! how delicious it is! how interesting! One could pass an eternity at one's window, seeing and hearing all this! Nature! the fields! Heavens! how happy you are in living here!'

But the morning of the third day Madame de Vergnes confided to the discreet Julie that she had not closed her eyes during the night.

'Really,' said she, 'I don't understand, I can't conceive, how they manage to sleep in this country. Accustomed as I am to the deepest quiet' (she lived in the Rue de la Chaussee d'Antin) 'I could never get used to such a racket! No end of birds chattering from the break of day. Bless me! I like well enough to hear the birds sing, but there's a time for everything!—And the cows and the sheep that bellow and bleat from the first dawn! I should think I was in the ark, upon my word!—And then it is quite enough even always before one's eyes! I am disgusted with green! It's a perfect nightmare this green!—Everything looks green to me! Pass me my mirror, Julie. There! I thought so: I am turning green myself! and it's not to be wondered at after such a night!'

At last, on the fourth day, Madame de Vergnes received a letter from Paris which, she gave out, obliged her to return at once. She expressed bitter regret, bewailed her hard lot, and took the afternoon train.

'Be calm, my poor child!' said she, embracing her granddaughter, at her departure. 'Be calm. We must control our selves; we must restrain our emotion!—Good-by! till we meet again; for you too must soon quit this paradise for our infernal Ah, such is life, my poor child! Good by! Good by! Let us try to be calm, my dear girl!'

Sibylle had the strength to endure the pangs of this separation, and she found moreover, an aid and consolation in the cordial intimacy which united her to her friend Clotilde Desnozais. Clotilde had quitted the convent two years before, and at her return Madame de Beaumesnil had taken pains to present her in the society of the neighborhood. Mademoiselle Desnozais was, to tell the truth, a very childhood had been amply fulfilled. She was full, supple, and graceful; she had a heavy mass of black hair that she did not know what to do with; she twisted it, she braided it, she brushed it back in curls behind her neck, she arranged it in the form of a diadem over her forehead. Her hands, her arms, her shoulders, were models for a sculptor, and made one think of the old goddesses. When she raised her heavy eyelids a flame darted from her pupils, then changed to a humid, fawn-like glance. In a moral respect, it was pleasing to observe that Clotilde had greatly improved. In fact, as it to justify the principles of Madame de Beaumesnil in matters of education, the terrible turbulent, obstinate, and ill-natured child had become a timid and modest young woman, talking little and in an undertone, obliging, ready to do anything even to the making a fourth at whist. In brief, a most exemplary young lady. No one had observed this happy change with more pleasure than Sibylle. No longer finding in the character of Clotilde the asperity which formerly disturbed her affection, she gave herself up without reserve to the inclination of her heart, and almost daily relations were soon established between them. The beauty of her friend inspired in Sibylle an admiration mingled with pride; she loved to speak of her as a type, excelling all that her imagination could conceive. Clotilde gave zealous assistance to this enthusiasm. She allowed Sibylle to dress her, to arrange her hair, to array her sometimes as a Roman matron, sometimes as a Druid priestess, a Jewess or an odalisque; then Sibylle would draw or paint her portrait in these various characters, saying from time to time with artistic impatience:

'No! You are too beautiful! You are frightfully beautiful! ridiculously beautiful! Heavens! how stupid to be so beautiful!' Invectives which Clotilde received without taking offence.

With the same complaisance she accepted all the peculiar tastes of Sibylle, and echoed her sentiments, her dreams, and her enthusiasms with facile ardor, as not of noble eloquence, and a perfect sincerity, for she had within her soul an ocean of poesy always ready to overflow, whether for good or evil. If she was lacking in any thing, it was in decent moral, as a rule of life, in moral chance. However that may be, elevated, poetic, and generous ideas, when she was in the vein, inspired her with strong and sincere feeling, and she often seemed to her correctness of language to exceed even the most ideal aspirations of Sibylle.

In the course of their conversations, Sibylle had observed that she could never touch upon certain subjects familiar to young girls without the assumption by Clotilde of an air of mystery, of profound melancholy and of irremediable despair.—She decided to interrogate her as to the meaning of these symptoms

'You are too young, my dear,' said Mademoiselle Desnozais, shaking her head and drawing a heavy sigh.

This enigmatic answer, as may be supposed, only inflamed the curiosity of Sibylle, who, suspecting a romance in the life of her friend, begged her with persistence to honor her with her confidence. Clotilde resisted for some time, and at last, after having sworn Sibylle to eternal secrecy.

'My dear,' she said, 'I shall never, never marry.'

'Is it possible?' said Sibylle, drawing nearer to her with redoubled interest.

'It is certain,' continued Mademoiselle Desnozais, 'for I love some one, and he whom I love, and by whom I am beloved, can never marry me. Circumstances will forever separate us.'

'Gracious Heaven!' cried Sibylle, 'how did it happen? Where did you meet him? What is his name?'

'I can only tell you his baptismal name, his name is Raoul. . . Why do you blush?'

At the name of Raoul, Sibylle had indeed blushed up to the roots of her hair.—

'Why do you blush?' repeated Clotilde, whose tone became suddenly abrupt. 'Do you know my Raoul? Answer me!'

'I blush because what you tell me bewilders me,' said Sibylle. 'Where do you think I could have known your Raoul?'—

'To be sure it is impossible,' said Clotilde.

'Well, my dear, he had a cousin who was at the convent with me, and he came often to see her with her mother. His manner and his face interested me at once. I must tell you that he was not very young so I fancied I was quite an original, and that none of the other young ladies had thought of noticing him. See how I was understood: one day, we were devising games to play and one of the girls proposed that each one of us should think of all the young men who came the oftenest to the reception-room, and should write upon a bit of paper the name of the one she would like best to marry, and then that one of us should read aloud all the little papers.'

'That was an odd game,' said Sibylle.

'Oh! the game was well enough. At all events, we accepted it. Each one wrote a name secretly upon a square bit of paper, which was dropped into a basket.—When there was no one to read the notes, they all bore the same name, Raoul!'

'That's very strange,' said Sibylle coldly.

'So I saw,' continued Clotilde, 'that I was not so much of an original as I thought. Some days after I found myself in the reception-room when he was there, and I so said that he looked at me very closely, as he always did. His cousin, who was my friend, although I don't love her really, rose all at once, walked across the room, and passing in front of me, said quickly: 'Don't stir for five minutes.' Then I saw that he had an album on his knee, and was drawing—it seems he paints divinely.—When he had finished, he thanked me by a movement of his head and eyes. It is impossible for me to tell you with what grace he did it. I was so troubled that when he went out, and I found myself near him in the crowd, I let fall a glove I had been cramping in my hand. He picked it up hastily, seemed to hesitate whether to return it to me, and, after all kept it, fixing his eyes upon mine with an expression so deep, so tender, that my heart stopped beating, and from that moment I felt that we were bound to each other for all our lives.'

Mademoiselle Clotilde, as she finished this sentence, raised her large eyes to heaven as if to renew her oath of inviolable fidelity.

'Is that all?' said Sibylle.

'Of course. What more do you wish? Did I not tell you we were bound to each other for all our lives?'

'It don't seem so to me,' said Sibylle.

'Child!' said Mademoiselle Desnozais gently, shrugging her shoulders. 'Know then, that eight days after, my friend informed me in a tone of mystery that her cousin, urged by his family to marry a young girl who was very noble, very beautiful, and very rich, had all at once set out for Persia. They suspected him, added my friend, with a wicked look—for she didn't really love me any more than I loved her—some secret motive that he did not dare to avow, for a person without birth or fortune. . . . . Is it clear enough now? . . . Poor Raoul! it was for me that he has faced exile and perhaps death!. . . So oftentimes people do not return from those far countries. Well, Sibylle, you may laugh at me perhaps, but I consider myself as his widow, and sometimes at night I weep for him and for myself, as if we were both dead.'

Some charming tears fell with the last words of Clotilde, and Sibylle perfectly persuaded can be them one by one on her agitated lips. It was in one of the most solitary alleys of the park that the two young girls were indulging in this affectionate demonstration. They were suddenly disturbed by the sound of voices at a little distance, at the same time a hunting dog ran up with a busy air to the fence upon which they sat, and began to importune them for their caresses.

'Heavens!' said Clotilde, rising hastily; 'some is coming—who does this fine dog belong to?'

The Marquis and Marchioness de Ferias now appeared at the turning of the alley, accompanied by a strange lady of mature age, and by a slender, fair, and elegantly dressed young man, who was tearing a riding-whip in his bare-gloved hand.

At this sight, the inconsolable widow of the poor Raoul passed her hand rapidly over her eyes, over her curls, her back hair, and her skirts, and in two seconds was arrayed for the combat.

'Ah!' said Sibylle quietly, 'it is probably the Val-Chesneys. My grandmother has been expecting them for a week.'

Sibylle had now completed her fifteenth year, and a regard for her future interest seemed to require that her entrance into society, and her presentation upon the great Parisian stage, should not much longer be delayed.

Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, without shrinking from the sacrifice imposed upon them by their consciences, felt more the loneliness of their new life. They had conceived the idea of precluding this reproach, which for them was likely to be without hope of end, by providing for their granddaughter a suitable establishment in their own neighborhood; but after a vain search in the narrow circle to which their retired life restricted them, they had renounced a design which, moreover, seemed to them a somewhat selfish one.

Between friends, the confidence of their troubles had on his side been engaged in the same pursuit. This friend was the Bishop of——, with whom, ever since the conversion of Miss O'Neil, the Ferias had maintained the most friendly relations. This prelate, a kind and ardent soul, whom the graces and peculiarities of Sibylle had inspired with a lively interest, had recently announced to the old Marquis that he thought he had discovered for this little granddaughter, the cause of so much trouble in the church, a husband who had very much the appearance of being the long-sought for Phœnix.

'I have searched for this rare bird,' said he, 'throughout my entire diocese, while making my pastoral journeys; and, as it often happens, I found him at my very door when I came home, in the person of the young Baron of Val-Chesney—a name not equal to yours, Monsieur le Marquis, but a very good name. His fortune is immense—at least equal to that which your little inconoclast can expect. Look here; you can see from this window the hotel of the Val-Chesneys, just in front of my house. And there is young Roland himself, just mounting his horse in the courtyard—a handsome fellow, as you see. A little too young; only twenty-four; but that's a good fault, and, for that matter, Mademoiselle de Ferias herself can wait a while. That old lady who is patting the horse's neck, and telling the young man to be careful, is the mother, of course. A saint—not a genius, but a saint. She has reared her son under her wing and in the best principles; she has never quitted him. And just at this time she is in a state of mind very like yours, fearing that she will not be able to marry her son here in the provinces, and dreading to see him plunge into the Parisian whirlpool. As for he young man—you will see him—he does very well. Very well! Bless! there is not much to be said. But he does very well. In fact, I think he is a good catch. See there! look at his mother! she has followed him into the street; she would get up behind him if she dared. Poor woman!'

Monsieur and Madame de Ferias were delighted with this opening prospect. A few days after they met Madame de Val-Chesney and her son in the parlor of the Episcopal palace. The two mothers, a prey to the same anxieties, were soon on a footing of expansive cordiality, and after some polite attentions, resumed at fitting intervals, the Val-Chesneys accepted an invitation to pass a week or two at the chateau of Ferias, where the two most interested parties who would have an opportunity to meet each other, and to gratify, if their hearts should so decide them, the desires of their respective families.

While these preliminaries were being settled, Monsieur and Madame de Ferias had scrupulously abstained from any intimation to Sibylle of the delicate negotiation of which she was the subject, and had found a plausible pretext explained for their sudden intimacy with the Val-Chesneys. Sibylle had often heard the family spoken of, but had never seen them; and her family, distrustful of the special interest they themselves felt in the matter, had determined to conceal from their granddaughter their personal inclinations, in order to leave to her an entire liberty of choice. They had the less difficulty in arousing any suspicion of the truth, inasmuch as Sibylle, informed since early childhood of the projects for her future, had always connected the idea of her marriage with that of an abode for a longer or shorter period, in the Hotel de Vergnes. It was then with some curiosity, but with perfect serenity of soul, that Mademoiselle de Ferias saw for the first time under her hereditary oaks, the young man who advanced to her conquest, whip in hand. The young baron, apparently better informed, blushed visibly when he saluted her, and Madame de Val-Chesney, after looking upon her with an expression of motherly covetousness, pressed her against her cashmere with an emotion quite incomprehensible to Sibylle.

After a promenade, which Mademoiselle de Ferias directed with pleasure, toward the more interesting parts of the park, they visited the greenhouses and the fancy poultry-yard. During these explorations the tragical gravity and animated language of Sibylle, the taste and sagacity with which she sorted out the wonders of her domain, completely gained to her the heart of the old lady, who uttered all sorts of enthusiastic exclamations, and glanced now and then at her son with a look of joy and triumph. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, delighted at the evident success of their granddaughter, shared the sweet emotions of the baroness, and, like her, felt themselves in a heaven of content. The young baron himself, an elegant, cold, and phlegmatic personage, gave every sign of satisfaction he thought in harmony with the peculiar style of beauty he was proud of, and from which he would have considered any indulgence in impropriety of enthusiasm a great derogation.

The shadow of a smile played about the corners of his whiskers, of American cut, and his mouth slightly opened from time to time to let fall, like bits of ice, the words: 'Charming! delicious! ideal!'

Clotilde was the only blemish in this happy picture; she followed at a little distance, now caressing the baron's dog, and now plunged, as it seemed, into an abyss of melancholy; but she did not fail to catch every furtive glance which her striking beauty drew from the insensible youth

Mademoiselle Desnozais dined at the chateau with her aunt. After dinner, the two friends, eager to find themselves alone together after so long a constraint, escaped for a moment and shut themselves up in the library, which had recently been converted into a studio. Sibylle began to draw sketches by upon a bit of gray paper, replying by needless expressions of assent to the eulogiums which Clotilde thought proper to pronounce upon the new guests.

'But really, my dear, seriously,' said Clotilde, after a short silence, 'what do you think of him?'

'Monsieur de Val-Chesney? Oh! charming! delicious! ideal!' said Sibylle, imitating jocosely the affected tone of the Bercs.

'Take care! Don't make a mistake, my dear,' said Clotilde. 'It's a husband!'—Sibylle opened wide her large eyes, and burst into a laugh.

'Pshaw!' said she, 'what folly! Ah! that is not so bad after all!'

And passing to Clotilde the three-crayon sketch she had just made, she said:

'Look at him! there's my husband!' It was in fact, an unmistakable likeness of Monsieur de Val-Chesney, his light reddish whiskers drooping over his shoulders, his hair parted in the middle, as if done with a hatchet, a shirt-collar of metallic stiffness, and a blue cravat with small, white spots, of which Sibylle had made much use. The absurd head was attached to an almost imperceptible body with enormous lilac-gloved hands, and the thin and crooked legs of a perfect caricature completed the picture.

Clotilde was convulsed with merry laughter at the sight of this grotesque image.

'Oh!' said she, as soon as she could speak, 'give it to me, I beg of you.'

'Bless me! take it if you like,' said Sibylle. Clotilde leapt to her neck.

'How good you are, my little Sibylle,' she cried.

And, in fact, Sibylle was extremely good During this time, Miss O'Neil was discreetly showing to Madame de Val-Chesney some of her pupil's paintings, and the worthy baroness was expressing an enthusiastic approbation of them, while young Roland occasionally uttered, from the top of his shirt-collar, the epithet, 'Masterly!'

As soon as Sibylle entered the room, she was solicited to cap the climax of the general joy by playing something—no matter what, some trifling thing upon the harp—an instrument which Monsieur Roland de Val-Chesney, rendered prolix by the vapors from the cellar of Persia, pronounced ideal—not only, added he, because of its delicious form, but because it was really a charming instrument, especially when well played. It was impossible to resist such eloquent urgency, and Sibylle yielded.

Sibylle, playing upon the harp, was always adorable; but this evening, in particular, dressed in white muslin, with long, falling sleeves, like folded wings, her graceful person, her beautiful head, her deep and sparkling eyes, her forehead, crowned with golden braids, had an expression, a purity, a radiance which were seraphic. The word angelic came spontaneously to the lips at beholding her and ceased to be trivial, so entirely made for her it seemed.

Nevertheless, the character of her beauty rather intellectual than physical, made but slight impression upon a mind so completely devoid of any æsthetic perception as was that of the last of the Val-Chesneys; and when Sibylle had ended, he contented himself with gently striking his lilac gloves together (he had put them on again), while musing to himself the painful observation that his fiancee was a little lean.

An instant afterward, Sibylle, pained at the neglect in which Clotilde had been languishing all day, begged her to go to the piano. After some ceremony, she allowed herself to be led to the instrument. She took off her gloves with a dreamy air, warded off for a moment her magnificent base grass under the transatlantic whiskers of the young baron, seated in front of her at the corner of the piano, and, after some preliminary throwing upon the key-board, began to sing, in a fine, contralto voice, the well-known air of Donizetti—her peculiar triumph—'O mio Fernando.' She always sang it well

Beginning with the next day, Mademoiselle Denoncin, with the tacit sanction of her aunt, undertook a regular campaign against the narrow brain and wide aberrance of the young baron. The recital in detail of this campaign, in which Clotilde displayed the courage of a lion joined to the prudence of a Madame de Beaumanoir, would carry us far from our subject. It will suffice, in order to explain her success and to draw, at the same time, a moral lesson from this episode, to briefly describe the feeble nature of the personage whom Clotilde had marked out for her prey. The victim of one of those hot-house educations which ill-advised affection so often inflicts upon the objects of its solicitude, Roland de Val-Chenay had fallen upon the battle of life without any preparation, without arms, and without defence. The excellent principles which had been inculcated upon him had remained floating upon the surface of his inert and feeble soul without taking any root. Not having passed through the gradual and salutary initiative of a public school, the passions of a man were in him united to the vices of a child, and as it usually happens, it was upon the heart, culpable toward him of a blind idolatry, upon the heart of his mother, that this regretful young man inflicted the first blows of his feeble yet violent hands.

For two months later, the old baroness, after many struggles and many tears, thought here. If happy in being able to recover the good-will of her son, and in escaping the effront of a legal injunction, by giving her consent to a marriage still strangely disproportioned, notwithstanding the testamentary advantages which Madame de Beaumont had wrung from her husband in favor of her niece. Clotilde and Roland received the nuptial benediction in the church of Foins amid the hilarious joy of the public—a joy to which copious libations, romping games, and a display of fireworks upon the cliff, largely contributed. It might have been said with Bagnarelli: "This marriage must be a happy one for every body is glad."

It is almost superfluous to add that, a few weeks later, in consequence of some little difficulties with her daughter-in-law, the dowager baroness was left in charge of the patrimonial dwelling and furniture, while the young couple installed themselves at Paris in a pretty hotel of the Champs Elysees.

The Valenpedo Swindle at the Falls.

Jenkins, the genius who appropriates to himself the cognomen of "the Canadian Blondin," crossed the Niagara river yesterday afternoon on a concern he calls a velocipede, in the presence of between 5,000 and 6,000 spectators. The spot from which he crossed over was near the Suspension Bridge, where Leslie crossed some place, which was crowded with people anxious to get a glimpse of the daring feat There were some misgivings at one period that he would not succeed; but when the machine which he rode was seen, all doubt vanished, as it was so skilfully designed that it was next to impossible that any mishap could occur. The contrivance was simply two wheels fixed firm, not revolting, with a low seat betwixt them, on which Jenkins sat with ease, his feet resting on a stand below the rope, on which he balanced himself without difficulty, and drew himself and machine by cords across the chasm, performing the trip in about ten minutes, including two minutes spent in resting in the middle of the space. The crowd were "sold," but Jenkins made his "pile," to their intense disgust. He talks of repeating the trick, but he will not "sell" so many the next time.—St. Catharines Constitutional.

Fenian Bonds no Good.

Judge McCunn, of the United States, has earned the gratitude of the Fenian Brotherhood, at the same time that he has shown up the imposture. He gave the following decision in the case of Bailey vs. O'Mahoney:—

The cause of the action set forth in the complaint is predicted upon a bond or certificate of the Irish Republic. This bond or certificate is an illegal instrument, issued in violation of the laws of the United States being issued for the purpose of raising means in the United States see on foot, provide or prepare the means for a military expidition or enterprise to be carried on from thence against the Dominion of the United Kingdom of Great Britian and Ireland, with whom the United States are now at peace and were at peace at the time said bonds were issued. (Rightely's Diget, vol. 1., page 689.) This bond or certificate cannot be received in any Court of this State or in the United States as evidence of a dept or ownership of property.'

Fenian bonds will now be at a discourse and Judge McCunn's decision will do nothing to help the Fenians in raising the sinews of war for the proposed raid.

TWO BOYS ROASTED ALIVE.—Two boys, the one 8 and the other 10 years of age, have been in the habit of stealthily climbing on trains at Somerville, Penn., where their parents reside, and riding to Hampton junction. On Saturday afternoon last they came to the junction in this manner, but had to wait there some time before a train would return on which they won'd dare to venture. In the meantime, the weather being quite cool and themselves thinly clad, they laid down on a pile of cinders in the pit where the Delaware and Lackawanna engines empty their fire-boxes, and went to sleep. This large pile of cinder and coal is almost constantly on fire but at the time they lay down the surface had sly sufficient heat to make the little fellows feel comfortable. After they had fallen asleep the fire worked up toward the surface and they were suffocated by the gas. When found their bodies were roasted into a crisp. The remains were taken to Somerville on Saturday night.—Easton Express.

The Rev. Mr. Brown, Paris Priest, Port Hope, had a rather narrow escape from drowning this (Friday) morning. He came up per Royal Mail Line Steamer, arriving here at about two o'clock; and getting off the boat, he started for up town, but in the dark stepped off the pier. Parties on the wharf at the time came to his assistance and got him out, after he had been in the water about five minutes. It was very fortunate for the Rev. gentleman that he was able to swim.—Guide.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1869.

CANADA'S FUTURE.

There is an immense amount of nonsense just now going the rounds of the press about independence, annexation, offering the government of Canada to Prince Arthur and more bugeomb of this sort. There need be no such fuss about so little. England has not cast us off, nor will she. Canadians do not desire annexation on any pretext what ever. The only thing heard of at all our gatherings and assemblies is, "British Connexion." We do not want a King nor a Queen other than Queen Victoria. If one of her sons should be sent here as Governor General, he would receive all the respect due to his exalted position. But Canadians do not ask for a King, nor desire one; nor do they want a Republic. We have the best form of government we could possibly get. What we do need and long for is honest politicians to manage our affairs; sober men who will not be forced to commit their business to underlings, who Reifsteinlike, live at our expense without giving any return for it. We want capable men to manage our business, who will be able to detect the errors of others and remedy them. We want moral men who will not go about the country using profane language, a shame and a reproach to us We want men of integrity who will not sell themselves for love of gain or office. Neither independence, nor annexation, nor royalty will mend these matters; nothing short of a correct idea of duty as citizens in the choice of our representatives; nothing short of a change of the public mind on the moral principle of acting right in political as well as in private matters, will ever produce the change necessary in the character of our public men.

During election times we are told by men holding positions in our religious institutions, that there is no use in sending honest men to parliament, and that if we do they will never be able to do any thing for us. That is equivalent to saying that there is so much corruption at Ottawa and Toronto, that honesty will get lost in the cesspool of filth that is in every office. Neither a King, nor a President, nor an Emperor would alter this sad state of things. The people are to blame. Another cries—let him go and get something if he can, he may as well have it as another. It is only a grab game anyway. Can we expect anything better than jobbing, and revelry, and intriguing for the largest amounts possible, while the electors are determined to send men with the express understanding that they are to help themselves if they can. Would annexation change the electors? it might change the head of the government, but not the hearts of the voters.

We are now going into debt at a fearful rate; ere the end of this year it will be one hundred millions. Would maintaining a royal mansion lessen the burden or diminish the tax already pressing the poor man? Not a bit of it. What Canadians want is honest men at the head of the government, and with all our debt we will be able to get along; but so long as there are means to corrupt, the present leaders will use them; buying a McDougall, a Howland; aye, a Rowe, even at the cost of half a kingdom. These are not changed by change of circumstances either. We were told that John A. and John S. would do better under confederation than they had done before; on these conditions we were asked to give them a trial. Has the Leopard changed his spots? The history of the last year will answer no. What, therefore, we need most is a change in the moral tone of the electors, a desire on their part to send men of integrity to parliament, and men of moral principle, and then we need not fear for the future. Switzerland is independent to-day in the very centre of France, Prussia and Austria.—What change may yet come over the great Republic few can now divine. Her wise policy for the present is, and for many years will be, peace, but our future will be great or ignoble in proportion to the interest we take in guarding our legislative halls against being turned into a broker's office, for buying up political opponents.

PRINCE ARTHUR IN CANADA.

This scion of the Royal Family is now in Canada, and is receiving all the attention and respect due to his position. On the day of his arrival, although on Sunday, a cordial welcome was accorded to him, but no public demonstration, because of the Sabbath.—Having landed at Halifax, he was taken to the Lieut.-Governor's residence, accompanied by Sir John Young, the Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia, and other persons who had gone on board to welcome him to Canada. A band of 60 performers was present and played the national anthem. On Monday there was a formal reception and an address read by the Mayor of Halifax. The greatest respect was manifested towards him, and a right loyal welcome tendered on behalf of Her Majesty. It is expected that he will be present at the Provincial Exhibition at London during this month.

There have been serious apprehensions lately for the health of Louis Napoleon, the Emperor of France. He has been confined to his chambers and his physicians in daily attendance. The nation is in a very excited state, republicanism and perhaps cause of the descendants of the Bourbons, making matters nothing better. The friends of order fear the result, if he should be called off before the prince should be able to take his place and maintain it. That he may ever be qualified for such an exalted position, may be somewhat doubtful. His great relative left no one to take his place, unless it be Napoleon the 3rd himself. A government founded on despotism is always on a very sandy foundation. It would be better for France, and far better for the Napoleonic dynasty, if the present Emperor should grant to France a constitutional government after the model of the British. Liberty of conscience, freedom of speech and of the press can do nothing when the powers that be, are ruling according to truth and righteousness, and there can be no better time to grant the blessing of good government to France than the present, when the Emperor is in a position to direct and control the elements that may be brought into play on any change being brought about.

No people will ever be contented or happy where they are forbidden freedom of speech; nor will there ever be political happiness until the emperor seeks to carry out the will of the people. That this would be adverse to his dynasty there need be no fear, it the good of the subject be the aim of the rulers. Supremacy in European affairs is a something no more to be sought for by France. Rome left to herself cannot injure Napoleon, and will tend sooner to establish peace in Italy than all the soldiers of France. Besides, Spain is seeking a constitutional government, founded on the principles of justice, toleration and religious equality. The very existence of a temporal power at Rome is the cause of Carlist and religious plots against the Cortes. These have ended in disasters to the revolutionists and must continue to do so. None of them would take place but for the false hope that there shall continue at the Eternal city the same state of things that has been. Napoleon is doing much to strengthen these false hopes, and thus, while not granting Spanish revolutionists any material aid, is the cause of their false hopes in holding out against the constituted authorities.

For the sake of his son, for the sake of France, and for the peace and contentment of Europe, he had better confine his work entirely to his Empire, grant his own people the boon of free and responsible institutions, and permit Italy and Spain to establish for themselves the same blessings. England would be a fair model to copy after, where the crown is as firmly established as a temporal crown can be, and where the people are as much attached to the Queen as children to a parent almost. She may go to rest quietly, and without fear for the future of her realm, for all Her subjects believe Her a model Queen, and delight to honor her children. In England there is no fear of revolution other than the peaceful revolutions worked in Parliament, by the people's representatives. Let Napoleon grant to his subjects the same laws, the same liberty, the same control of their own affairs as are granted in like circumstances to Britons, and he need not fear for his son, nor will there be any dread among the other nations around France. But should he pass away with the people unprepared for it, no ruler to take his place, and the guillotine may again have its sad work to do.

Mrs. Stowe and Lord Byron.

Considerable criticism of an article in the Atlantic Monthly by Mrs. Stowe, making strange revelations concerning some of the causes that led to the separation of Lord and Lady Byron, has appeared in the press, some censuring Mrs. Stowe in not very measured terms, and trying to exculpate the poet. A few lean to Mrs. Stowe's version, which she gives on the reputed authority of Lady Byron just before her decease.

There can be no doubt but that the loose life of the great poet was anything but favorable to exalted notions of his purity of character, and Lady Byron may have had just cause for separating; if Mrs. Stowe's story is true, she could hardly have done otherwise. The admirers of Lord Byron will not believe the story, his enemies will, and there it must remain. But why Mrs. Stowe should receive so much blame for making known what Lady Byron had revealed to her, and that too when reproach was being cast on the memory of that lady, few disinterested parties will be able to understand, except it be on the usual plea of deifying the man even at the expense of his wife. It perhaps would have been as well had some of the dead remained buried with them in oblivion. But now that it has not thus been decreed, all the criticisms of the critics will not prevent some from accepting Mrs. Stowe's story, while, perhaps, others will as honestly refuse to believe it.

A County Ploughing Match.

Last year some of our enterprising West Riding farmers were talking something about a Match for the County, as well as for the Ridings. And but for the lateness of the season, when the affair was mooted, a very handsome amount could have been realized towards carrying out their intentions. We would remind those favorable to a County ploughing match, that the best time to consider such a thing is at the different Shows, when a large number of farmers and their sons will be present, and when their opinions on the matter can be easily ascertained. The Otonabee ploughing match has generally gone off with eclat.—The day has always been very pleasantly spent, and it has created a spirit of honest rivalry among ploughmen, that must be felt in the Township, and felt in the results of the farmer when he is counting the profits of his industry. The good farmer, like the good mechanic, or business man, always reaps the reward of his skill; and in no way can more be done to increase the number of skilled farmers than by stimulating honest rivalry to excel. This is begun at ploughing matches, and exhibitions, and extends itself imperceptibly until the whole community feels the contagion of progress. We merely wish to refresh the memory of the promoters of a County match, so that it may be held before the season gets too far advanced.

We see the names of Capt. J. Z. Rogers and Corporal Wm and Private S. English among those at the Provincial Shooting Match, who have made 25 points and upwards. In their respective squads these members of the 57th Battalion take a very respectable position as marksmen.

A Man Trap.

On Tuesday night an Indian, named Henry Howard, fell into a cellar adjoining Mr. E. Morris's shop on George street, and either broke or severely injured his arm.—He had to be taken to Dr. McCullough's office, where the joint was fixed into its place and the arm bandaged and otherwise attended to.

This pit being almost under the side-walk is very dangerous to pedestrians, and especially so to those under the influence of alcohol.

The Indian is determined to make the proper parties pay expenses. Will the town be liable for not having the pit fenced off?

But who sold the red man the fire-water? Would it not be an act of charity to have him fined for thus violating the law in this behalf?

Apart from all this, the Street Inspector, if his power extends to this, should compel the owner of this cellar to put up a protection, lest something more serious occur, and the town have to foot the bill on a larger scale.

CONCERT.—Mr. A. H. Rackett, Band Master of the 57th Battalion, intends giving a grand Promenade Concert in the Drill Shed, on the evening of the 17th of September, instant. The 46th Battalion Band, Port Hope, Mr. Philps, Band Master, will also be present and give some choice selections from operas, &c. This will afford an opportunity to aid in maintaining the Band in that degree of efficiency that is desirable. Mr. Rackett has laboured faithfully to bring it to its present state, and has on all public occasions come forward and did his part, with all the members of the band, and we trust that those things will be kept in remembrance. One kind deed deserves another.

THE FAIR.—There were very few at the fair on Tuesday. The rain commenced at a very early hour and continued the whole day without cessation. A few whom neither wind nor weather could deter, made their appearance, but there was not much business done. We noticed a few in the evening who appeared to be wet both inside and outside, the former with with "forty-rod," the latter with some less pernicious fluid—the pure rain from above. A few of the fair sex who had ventured out, presented a rather watery appearance as they prepared to return home. The day was certainly not a propitious one for male or female.

The Directors of the East Riding Agricultural Society have determined to have a Ploughing Match this fall, as usual, and Messrs. T. Blezard, R. Renwick, F. Birdsall, John Gillespie, R. Harrison, James Millar, P. M. Grover, J. Breckenridge, A. R. Kidd, D. Rose, W. Scott, P. Pearce and William Burgess are appointed a committee of management. The time and place have not yet been agreed on.

The Show at Keene this year will be a good one. The people of the East Riding have set to work with a will, and success may be expected. The Township of Otonabee alone is capable of making a display equal to some entire counties. We expect, therefore, something very fine in the Agricultural Exhibition of the East Riding.

Our fun was spoiled, and the hopes of the ambitious nipped in the bud, by the return of the Mayor, but not before an address was issued and half a dozen others partially sketched out.

Father McMahon has got the length of Buffalo, his old rendesvous, and is giving proof of the justness of the sentence passed on him by our courts. The Hamilton Spectator says:—

"Some of the Buffalo Fenians have been honoring Father McMahon. He held two levees in Buffalo on Thursday and Friday, and one at Black Rock the same day. It is not mentioned whether the hat was sent round; at all events, he departed for Indiana on Saturday, where he will, no doubt, have a grand reception, after his long absence."

Another paper says:—

"We learn from a New York paper that the Fenian Priest McMahon has latterly been the guest of Bishop Ryan, in Buffalo. The Rev. Father is at present suffering from partial paralysis, lung disease, and other afflictions, caused by prision life. He studiously avoids all public demonstrations, and as soon as his health will permit intends leaving for his home in the West."

Which shall we believe?

GAGGING THE PRESS.—It has now become the order of the day to institute legal proceedings against every writer that dares to insert the name of any person in his columns, supposing that sooner than file an appearance or defend himself, he will exclude all proper names, and thus the most execrable of wretches get off unnoticed. Here is an example:—

"Dr. Burns, of Durham, County of Grey, has sued the publisher of the Durham Chronicle for libel. Dr. McTaggart has also entered an action against Dr. Gun, of Durham, because he declined to withdraw a disparaging epithet."

THE WAY THEY DO THINGS IN PHILADELPHIA.—About noon on the 6th instant, a party of ruffians went into Kenan's liquor shop, and after inquiring for Kenan, asked where was Brooks. Mr. Jas. J. Brooks, a U. S. Revenue officer, who happened to be present replied that he was the man, when one of the ruffians shot him with a revolver. Brooks' wound is probably mortal, as the ball passed through his lungs. The assassin escaped.

Who would say a word against annexation after this, which is a daily occurrence in the United States, without a will or a power to put it down?

Mr. Allen, Mayor of Cornwall, has skedaddled. There was an officer of justice after him for contempt of court in refusing to give up his children to his wife, as ordered by the court of Queen's Bench. Allen has been somewhat notorious, for a character that very few would envy. The people will now be able to choose another, whether of better character or not, the future will decide.

All persons suffering from Cancers, which are entirely cured without the use of the knife, Abscess, Ruptures or Sternia, Aneurism, Swellings, Tumours or any Chronic dangerous complaint, should not delay in seeing Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings.

A man named David Stanton, belonging to a circus, exhibiting at Waterford, on Monday, was shot in a row between the circus people and the roughs of the place. A butcher, named John Wise, is arrested on suspicion.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening, Sept. 6th. The Mayor presiding. Present, Messrs Helm, English, Doherty, Stevenson, Toole, Chamberlin, Edmison, Dickson, Clanton and Rutherford.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read over and confirmed.

His Worship the Mayor apologized to the Council for his long absence. It was owing to the illness of his wife. And that because of intention to be shortly back again he had not applied for leave of absence, as he otherwise would have done.

Communications were read from A. T. Williams, Superintendent of the Port Hope and Peterboro Railway, acknowledging the receipt of the estimate of the Street Inspector toward repairing the streets occupied by the Railway, but considering the estimates too high.

From Edgecomb Pearce, informing the Council that the County Council at its last meeting granted the Town Council possession to level the old grave yard.

This communication was received.

Petitions were read from John Haffey, asking the Council to cut down a large pine tree on Waterford Street, near his dwelling.

From Wray & Ward, asking a remission of $25 on their license as Auctioneers, referred to the Finance Committee.

A report from the Street Inspector, showing the sum of $2,500 had already been expended on streets and bridges, was read and received.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Doherty,—that the Street Inspector be instructed to remove the tree asked for by John Haffey, Carried.

Moved by Mr. Doherty, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That By-Law No. 234 fixing the Rate for the present year, be now read third time and passed, and that the Mayor and Clerk do sign the same, and affix the Corporation seal thereto Carried.

The By-law was read a third time and passed.

Of motions of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Doherty, the Finance committee were instructed to enquire into the merits of Mrs. Prime's claim for rent, on this municipality, and report at its next meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Mr Edmison, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That the Clerk be instructed to reply to the communication of Mr. A. T. Williams, Railway Superintendent, and to inform him that this Council will not undertake to do the work required on Bethune street, for the sum he appears to think such repairs ought to cost. And this railway company is required to proceed forthwith to have the said work done themselves, which will, perhaps, be the most satisfactory pay for both parties. But as this Council have been threatened with proceedings by some residents on the streets, if the same be not at once put in order, this Council must insist upon the company proceeding with the work without further action, and complete the repairing of the streets, and that the Clerk do forward with his communication a copy of the resolution.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Edmison,—That the charities committee be requested to ascertain in future, when appropriating money for charitable purposes, where the persons reside, and not to give aid to parties residing in other Municipalities.—Lost on the following division:—

Yeas—Messrs. Toole and Edmison.

Nays—Messrs. Rutherford, Stevenson, Doherty, Helm, Dickson, English, Chamberlen and Clanton.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

shaft. Lamps still burn, and the fan continues to force down the air.

Eleven, a. m.—The two men have succeeded and the miners are getting ready to go down. They will take rope, no fan, &c., to clear away the passage.

As it is feared that the smoke has penetrated under the mine, and suffocated all the men, no attempt can, of course, be made to reach the main door or to penetrate the mine until the outer gangway is cleared of gas. It is uncertain how long this will take. There is no ground to hope that a single life remains of those who were at work in the mine. What horror and suffering was yesterday witnessed beneath this spot, and whether it was of long or short duration, none will probably ever know.

The despatches give tidings of the loss of two more steamships off the coast of Newfoundland—the Germania on Saturday and the Cleopatra on Monday evening. The former is a vessel belonging to the German line, trading between Hamburg and New York, and the latter is one of a line plying between Montreal and London. The Germania was on her outward passage, having left New York on the 3rd, while the Cleopatra was on her way to Quebec. According to one of the despatches both vessels were wrecked at the same place, near Torpoacey, while another despatch says that the Germania was lost at sea. Fortunately in both cases the passengers and crew were saved, and we will be spared those details which often make the story of a wreck so melancholy and painful. No mention is made of the cause of the wrecks, but they were both probably owing to the fog which so often prevails on the Newfoundland coast.

PORT HOPE, Sept. 6.—The Orangemen of Toronto, numbering about 5000, under District Master Bennett, and accompanied by a splendid band of the 10th Royals, held their annual picnic here to day, on the grounds of Chas. Seymour, Esq., Springdale. They were met at the warf by the Orangemen of Port Hope, headed by Col. Smart, D. M., with the band of the 45th Battalion. At the grounds they were addressed by the Mayor, Mr. Francis Beamish, who gave them a hearty welcome to the town. Speeches were made by Bros. Bennett Metcalf and Fleming, of Toronto; Hutchinson, of Nova Scotia; and D. Marshall, of Port Hope, after which dancing &c., were kept up till the time of departure—6 o'clock—when they were again escorted to the wharf, and left for home by the steamer Norseman, seemingly well pleased with their day's amusement.

Fall bonnets are decidedly larger than those of last season. They are high, towering structures, in the Henri Quatre and Louis Quinze styles, and once more begin to resemble a bona fide bonnet. The frame fits the head like a close cap, in short over the ears and worn very far forward. A standing revers of velvet or silk is turned up in front and at the back. The space between these is filled by a light Watteau puff, on which is heaped a mass of trimming which seems to be held in place by the upright revers. Narrow strings of ribbon tied under the chin hold the bonnet securely.

Another style, of Quakerish simplicity, resembling an infants bonnet in shape, has a close-fitting band in front and a deep flat back or crown falling into two or three curves below to fit over the coiffure of chignon or braid, with reference to which it was evidently designed. The front frames the face plainly, without ornament; the back is adorned with trailing feather and vines that hang among the low braids. This simple and elegant shape is admired in black velvet, and will prob bly become the favorite bonnet for the promenade.

The Almonte Gazette is down on the Government for allowing Rosenstein to take the public money and give it to others to speculate in hay with. It asserts that with that money hay was bought last spring at the front for $10 a ton and sold along the line of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway for $30 and $40 a ton.

We learn that a young man of this city—name and occupation of no consequence—went out the other evening to take a walk, and during his wanderings came to the lake, and at the same time several young ladies who were enjoying a cool and refreshing bath in the sparkling waters of Lake Monona. The gentleman finding himself unobserved, and thinking of the "sensation" he would create among the fair bathers, silently disrobed and swam out among them. The girls discovered the "daring young man" and made for the shore with all possible speed. The young man chuckled. It was a good joke. After enjoying himself in the water for some time, he suddenly thought of an "engagement," and walked leisurely towards the shore. He came to an abrupt stop—dismay was pictured on his countenance. He looked for his clothes. They were no where to be found. Those "confounded girls had stolen them. What should he do? He thought the matter over and finally set up a shout for help. No one heard the poor joker, and consequently no one came to his relief. After waiting for some time, he concluded to risk everything and go for his boarding house. His appearance as he rushed through the streets, clad in a pair of slippers with a bar of soap in his hand, was decidedly ludicrous, and attracted much attention. He retired to his home a more sheepish and to be hoped a wiser man. He don't enjoy jokes, and wont attempt very soon to have a "little fun with the girls.—Madison Journal.

SOMETHING NEW IN CANADA.—The Fabrique of the parish of Montreal—a corporation owning the Parish Church Cemetery—got a Bill passed at the last session of the Quebec Legislature to take the whole or part of a farm on either side of the Cote de Neiges Cemetery in the following way, viz.: If the proprietor will not accept the price offered by the Fabrique, that corporation is to apply to any judge of the Superior Court to appoint three Commissioners to value the land, and the decision of two of them will be final, and without appeal.

Now, the question arises,—Who would like to enter any circumstances, to have his property taken away in such an arbitrary manner as this, without any hand in appointing the arbitrators, or, in fact, any possibility of helping himself in any way? And still more,—What Catholic would like to have his property taken away in the fashion for Protestant purposes? Here, indeed, he might be quite sure of fair treatment, but suppose him to be in Vermont, where all the influences are Protestant, and see how he would like it.—Witness.

THE LARGEST NIAGARA SENSATION.—The boldest and most scientific feat yet performed at Niagara is promised before the season closes, by a daring fellow who proposes to cross the river without the employment of any such safeguard as an "undershot" waterwheel, and in fact he will even dispense with the rope. This new miracle, who, we presume, will claim the distinction of the "Canadian Blondin," designs taking an aerial flight across the chasm on wings; and as solid as such an attempt would seem, we can state as a positive fact that apparatus is now being constructed in this city for that purpose. We are not yet informed what sort of practice the new professor has been pursuing, or concerning the principle of his flying apparitenances; but it would probably be advisable for him to take a small flutter over the Dundas marsh before doing Niagara.—Hamilton Times.

The following is from the Irish Canadian, an Irish affair. It speaks for itself:

"We are rejoiced to learn that the Catholic Hierarchy, with Cardinal Cullen at the head, have excommunicated and deconsecrated a system of education the most ungodly and deceitful ever introduced into Ireland.—The very hateful placed on the heads of the youth while filling those precious 'Model Schools' are themes of interest to the pupil desirous of learning something of the land of his birth; the name of Ireland is scarcely ever mentioned in their pages, or, if referred to at all, it is in terms of reproach and opprobrium, while England, with her hybrid history and mongrel race, is prominently brought before the reader, in fictitious grandeur, in tenet, and in the garb of national and social virtues, unblemished and falsely assumed. We regret that other "graveamens" of Irish birth, but English paternity, do not claim a little more of the Cardinal's attention. It would be glorious news to hear, some day, that his Eminence had withdrawn altogether, from the governing power in Ireland, the protection which he so liberally and freely bestowed upon it, and ceased to regard the despoiler other than as the relentless, the remorseless enemy of his creed and race; and to this alternative, we fear, the Irish Catholic Hierarchy must come yet."

It is in vain that their lordships travel far from the practical path in erecting barriers to shield the united veterans of the British Garrison in Ireland; it is in vain that, by so doing, they fetish-ize, contemptuously, authority and evoke suspicion where before naught pervaded but acquiescence and unlimited confidence. All to no purpose.—The British Government is now what it ever has been towards Ireland—her uncompromising foe, her implacable enemy; and all that cardinal Cullen and his brother Hierarchs could do in a thousand years, by way of conciliation, would not alter the animal as to-to. The leopard's spots and the Ethiope's skin will change as soon.

The Montreal Witness Says:—The new Bishop of Montreal, seems to have the faculty of winning golden opinions from all who come in contact with him as well as all who read his writings. His fellow-passengers in the steamers, without distinction of denomination, speak very highly of his affable deportment and kindness of disposition as well as the genuine piety which characterizes his walk and conversation. His first sermon at Quebec is also very highly spoken of, and it is especially remarked, with pleasure, that it was not read. His meeting with his flock in Montreal was of the most affectionate kind, and it was a delicate attention on their part to supply a furnished dwelling for him till first May next, in order to allow him leisure to suit himself in a permanent residence. Bishop Ozenden has, we understand, been much gratified that among the numerous callers to welcome him, there are a number connected with other churches than his own, and he regards this as an indication of a pleasing contrast in the state of society here as compared with England. The fact is, all Christians of whatever name wish to see the kingdom of their Master promoted, and whoever is instrumental in that work will be highly esteemed by them, whether connected with their own denomination or not. It is the conviction that the new Metropolitan will be eminently useful in Christ's work in the new world as he has already been in the old, that renders his coming among us a matter of deep interest and general satisfaction to all.

CRIME IN IRELAND.—The official criminal statistics of Great Britain show that for several years past crime has steadily decreased in Ireland. Thus, in 1856 the number of committals was 7,009, while last year it was only 4,127. The convictions in 1856 were 4,054, and in 1868 2,394.—The English statisticians, puzzling over this, attribute the decrease in crime to emigration; and it is a fact that the population of Ireland has decreased 4 929 566 in the past thirteen years. But emigration is hardly a sufficient cause for the decrease in crime, for, as a rule, the emigrants are not from the class who are prone to become criminals, but are industrious, thrifty persons who have saved money enough to pay their passage abroad, and who leave home to find a better field for their labor and better opportunities to earn the honest living which they strive for.

A SINGULAR TRUTH.—When Dr. Flint cuts off a leg or extirpates a tumor, the Journals ring with his name; but when Dr. That saves the one or cures the other, without knife or caustic, he one hears of it. Yet an amputation can be skillfully performed by a very indifferent surgeon, after a little teaching and practice; while the skill which treats the disease without using the knife, is the result of genius, study and experience. Honest surgeons will tell you that an operation is the disgrace of surgery, as it shows either that the surgeon is ignorant, or that the disease defies the resources of surgical skill. When we consider, however, that the least creditable action gains the most credit, we wonder at the comparative rareness of mutilated people. As matters stand, it is astonishing to find so many men and women with their full complement of arms and legs.—New York Ledger.

BOYS IN HORSES.—Elijah Smith, of Delta, Fulton County, O., writes as follows:—"In reading the reports, I notice the inquiry of James Little, of Sing Sing, in regard to boys in horses. Now, an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. My practice is to keep the egg of the gadfly from the horse's knee by using a sharp jack-knife. It is but a few minutes' job to accomplish it by scraping, and it has been effectual with me for the last twenty years. I have known horses immediately relieved by jarring the boys loose. Take a piece of board broad enough so as not to hurt the horse, and strike in the region of the stomach, back of the fore-legs. I have used the flat of the hand, and sometimes the side of the foot and ankle. I have seen horses rolling and tumbling, apparently in great pain, relieved in less than five minutes so as to go to eating their oats. But it will not always cure; but the jack-knife and some care in grooming never fail."

THE FASTEST TIME EVER MADE TO A ROAD-WAGON.—Mr. Bonner took Dexter over to Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, and drove him a mile on the Prospect Fair Grounds in the extraordinary time of 2:23¼. This is the fastest time ever made to a road-wagon. Dexter, two years ago, trotted a mile in a public race, before Mr. Bonner owned him, in 2:24 to a skeleton-wagon, which time has never been beaten in public; but yesterday, in going to a road-wagon, he had to carry nearly a hundred pounds more than on that occasion, and yet, notwithstanding the heavy weight, he beat his skeleton-wagon time. This performance proves that Dexter is a better horse this season than he has ever been.—Evening Post, August 11th.

A French paper says that the captain of an American vessel, bound for New York, recently fell in with a deserted ship at sea, in the cabin of which was found the body of a man about thirty years of age, his head resting upon a box containing $160,000 in gold.

The Russian government has intimated to the Holy See that it cannot permit the Russian and Polish Catholic bishops to take part in the deliberations of the Ecumenical Council.

A little boy, the son of Mr. Alex. Snow, township of Grimsby, while playing on a field on which his father was mowing, got tired and fell asleep in the grass. His father did not discover him until the knives came in contact with him, whereby he lost one toe, and a hand nearly cut off and his side injured. He may recover with the loss of the hand.

HAGAR'S WINE.—The great public remedy now after being in use over twenty years, needs it cannot be said that they are so tried. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives feed on truth they have pertested) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation. And if taken in season will invariably have cured, no gun, sore throat, and all bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of its peculiarities which Prescott and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own.—Boston Commercial.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the Syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine well and favorably known for the last ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won the itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superceding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and the cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, associated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and efficacious in the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstructions from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, weakness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the direction on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle,

I had to mind and had to do
Whatever mother bade me;
She used to have a walnut stick
Which kept me on the double quick,
And that was where she had me.

When older grown, and quite beau,
Among the girls, I must to know
A Miss Priscilla Cadmy;
And with the help of sailes and nods
I fell in love at forty rods,
And there is where she had me.

Then I was older, my sixteen,
I thought it time to have a queen,
And asked her if she'd wed me;
She said she didn't much object,
Or words to something that effect,
And there was where she had me.

But when to make the matter straight,
I went up to negotiate
Affairs with Colonel Cadmy,
He said he "didn't care to sell,"
He told me I might go to—well,
And that was where he had me.

I drowned my sorrow in the cup
Until I got my dander up
(I couldn't have been madder);
When she proposed that we be one
In spite of pa—the thing was done,
And that was where I had her.

Two lovely urchins on my knee
I'm proud to say belong to me
(That is, to me and madam);
For when we left our native sod,
We spent a year or two abroad—
And there was where we had 'em.

Josh Billings on the Black Man.

The Black man emigrated tew this free and free kuntry about two hundred years formerly, in the lower story of a vessel; he was kindly furnished with a free ride, and mine rice and water for vittles.

Immediately upon his arrival he commenced business for other folks on our eastern coast, and had plenty tew do.

He was very ekonomikal in his habits ov clothes, wearing but fu, and those seldom made out of as linnen.

He okasionally changed his location, moving into an adjoining State, but to these journeys he was always kindly furnished with a guide, so that there was no danger ov his getting lost.

In these trips he seldom took his family with him; they were either tew remain at hum or make excursions in search ov work to other States under the guidance ov experienced guides.

Once in a while the Black Man would stray away far to the cold and bitter North and get cruelly lost.

His guides would mourn for him then, and search for him, but his family soon got reconciled tew the loss.

Everybody sed, where he lived, that he was the happiest critter that had ever been diskovered yet, with nothing to do but work, and a kind guide to watch over him and the time, and mourn for him when he got lost.

But the Black man is a verry phoolish critter.

Four gentlemen—a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Roman Catholic—met by agreement to dine on fish. Soon as grace was said, the Catholic rose, armed with a knif and fork, taking about one-third of the fish, comprising the head, removed it to his plate, exclaiming, as he sat down, with great satisfaction, 'Papa est caput ecclesiæ' (The Pope is the head of the church). Immediately the Methodist minister arose, and, helping himself to about one-third, embracing the tail, seated himself, and said, 'Finis coronat opus,' (the end crowns the work). The Presbyterian now thought it was about time for him to move, and taking the remainder of the fish to his plate, exclaimed, 'In medio est veritas (truth lies between two extremities). Our Baptist brother had a thing before him but an empty plate and the prospect of a slim dinner; and snatching up the bowl of drawn (melted) butter, he dashed it over them all exclaiming, 'Ego baptizo vos' (I baptize you all).

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING.—A lady employed a young girl about fifteen years of age to assist her about her housework. One day she was making some cake and wished to put some kind of plums in it; so she set her dish down on the table with the plums, and told the girl to stone them; to show her how—she took up a plum and took out the stone, with the remark, 'That is the way;' and then thinging that the girl understood what she meant, she put the plum into her mouth instead of into the dish, and went away. What was her surprise a short time after, to have the girl come into the room where she was and tell her that she had eaten all she could. And when the lady went into the room where she had been at work, she found that she had put all the stones into the dish and eaten all she could of the plums she thinking that the hard pieces—mesing the stones—would soften up when baked in the cake.

Said a youngster in high glee displaying his purchase to a bosom friend on the sidewalk: 'Two cocoa nuts for ten cents! that will make me sick to-morrow, and I won't have to go to school.''

Said one gentleman of honor to another, "If you don't accept my challenge, I shall post you in the papers." "Go ahead!" said the other, "I had rather fill a dozen papers than one coffin."

Mythologists tell us that Io died because of her intense love for Jupiter; but the charm of the romantic story has lately been destroyed by a chemist discovering Io died of potassium.

Many people think themselves perfectly virtuous, because, being well-fed, they have no temptation to vice. They don't distinguish between virtue and victuals.

An editor, alluding to the demand for female suffrage, female doctors, and female clergymen, remarks that another want presents itself—that of female women.

'I despise mankind,' said an arrogant millionaire to a noted clergyman. 'I see you have studied your own nature deeply,' was the quiet reply.

A journeyman black says he has been striking for hire wages these 20 years, with uniform success

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done, I feel confident the the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business can will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

ICHTHOLOGY—THE CODFISH.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

The codfish in the cradle or the ocean.—This settlement for their being so salt.

They are caught with a hook and line, and bite like a steel trap, and hang on like a poor relation.

They are good for eating for a weekday; they are better than an undertaker to keep a man dry.

Dried codfish is one ov the luxuries ov life, but codfish three times a day would weaken my confidence in them.

Codfish never venture in fresh water; they would spile if they did.

I never have been codfishing myself, but think I should like it better than fishing for frogs.

I think I could catch frogs well enuff, but I should insist upon their taking themselfs off from the hook.

I had rather take a base bumble-bee in mi hand than a live frog, not because I am afraid the frog would bite, but I am afraid ov their kicking.

Sum people ain't afraid to take enything with their hands that they can reach, but even an eel, tun of a inhuman muskle't nestle with him, right off, by giving him the hook and line, I would throw the pore into the larnsin and put for home.

The codfish is sed tew be an aristokrat, and to keep aloof from the other fish ov his size in the sea, and claim tew be a relation of the whales, but this looks to me rather fishy.—

I have noticed that the codfish always has a stiff upper lip, but I think this is more owing tew the bone that is in him than it is tew his blood.

THE MACKEREL.

The mackrel is a game fish. They ought tew be well educated, for they are always in schools.

They are very easy to bite, and are caught with a piece of old red flannel puttyed and tied on a hook.

They ain't the only kind ov fish that are caught by the same kind of bait.

Mackrel inhabit the sea but those which inhabit the groceryu always taste to me as though they had been born and bated on salt.

They want a good deal ov freshning before they are eaten, and want a good deal ov fre-hning afterward.

If I can hav prenty of mackrel for breakfast, I can generally make the other two meals out ov cold water.

Mackrel are considered by menny folks the best fish that swime, and are called "the salt of the earth."

THE POLLYWOGG.

The pollywogg is created by the rides ov the road out ov thick water, and spends his infancy in pollywogging.

After he has got through pollywogging he wakes up his mind that this world wasent made for pollywogs and "nothing venture nothing have," and then he turns his attenshun to bigger things.

He looks out upon life with the eye ov wisdum, and studdying the various animals ov creashun, he kums tew the konklusion that the best thing he can do is tew bekum a frog.

This is the way that frogs first kum tew be made, and pollywoggs tew be lost.

The pollywogg now leaves the water, and spends a part of his summers upon land.

He has tew file his way through life, and generally goes on the jump.

Being better at diving than he is at dodging, he often runs his hed against sticks and stuns that the boys throw at him, but his two mortal enemys are the Frenchman and the striped snaik.

The Frenchman is satisfied with his hind legs, but the snaik swallows him whole

I have seen sum good time made by the frog, and the snake, the snake after the frog, and the frog after dear life

If the frog can only reach a tree and climb it, he is safe, for the snake kant travel a tree.

I don't kno as the pollywogg gains enny thing by swopping himself uph for a frog unless it is experience, but I never hav bin able to diskover much of enny happiness in experience.

If experience ever made a man happy, I should have happiness to sell, for I am one of them happy phellows who never found enny thing (not even the bite of a lobster) only through the kindness of experience

THE BULL HEAD.

This remarkable beast of prey dwells in mill ponds and pond muddles, close to the ground, and lives upon young lizard and dirt.

They hav no taste to their mouths, and never spit out enny thing that they kan swallo.

They have two ugly black thorns sticking out on the sides ov their hed, and are as dangerous tew handle as a six-bladed penknife, with the blades all open to once.

They are like a kat; you have got to skin them before they are fit to eat, and after they are thoroughly cooked, if you set them away in the cupboard until they git cold, they will begin life anew, and become as raw as a live mule.

They will live, after they are ded, as long as striped snaiks kan.

I don't advise enny man to fish for bullheads, but if yu feel as tho yu must, this is the only best way to do it:

Take a dark, hot, drizzly night in the month of June; steal out quietly from home; tell your folks yu are going tew the nabors to borry a setting of hen's eggs; find a sawlog in the lanes or a stagnant mill pond, one end of which lays in the water; drive the muskrukles and water snaiks uph from the log, straddle the log, and let your legs hang in the water up tew your garters; hav your heck with a chunk ov old india-rubber shoe; as fast as yu pull up the bullhead, take it by the back of the neck and stab their horns into the saw-log; when yu hav got the saw log stuck full, shoulder the saw-log, and leave for home; git up the next morning early, skin the bull heads, split up the saw-log into kindling wood, let your wife cook them for brekfast, and aware the whole family to keep dark about it.

This is the only respectable way to hav enything to do with bull-heads.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it is climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometim hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor used in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr F. W Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawing, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gauge, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & PAUL, Cobourg P.O County of Leambro, Ontario, Canada.

Vance, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1867 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1868, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and used lots of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At the time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Dougett for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every portion her. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has any thing been so universally and implicitly relied upon the constancy of mankind, as this extraordinary remedy for pulmonary complaints. For many years a large portion of the people of this and foreign lands have known it has been superior and infallible in the cure of colds, as it has counteracted them in their incipient stages. Its unrivaled composition and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protection against the fatal consequences to which neglected colds expose us. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that it should be in constant demand, and that it should supersede all other remedies for the cure of coughs, colds, and lung complaints. It is powerful to conquer the severest cases of croup, and relieves whooping cough of its distressing paroxysms. Indeed, so safe are its combinations, that no one need hesitate to give it to the youngest infant. Public speakers will find great protection in its use, and all who have occasion to raise their voices in singing, will find it promotive of clearness and strength. Military officers and soldiers, and all who are exposed to sudden changes of weather, should be provided with this protection against the diseases consequent thereon, which are often fatal. Although a pleasant Cordial, containing no alcohol, it is unrivaled in its power to control the most distressing coughs, and to heal the most dangerous diseases of the lungs and throat. Many who have used it, in the privacy of their own families, have been restored to health by the Cherry Pectoral, after all other remedies had failed, and their neighbors, learning the facts, have been astonished that they, too, had not tried the Cherry Pectoral, and thereby avoided much suffering. Clergymen, Singers, Public Speakers, and great performers, find it invaluable.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is never injurious to any patient, no matter the number and importance of its cures in the same districts, are literally beyond account; and we believe without a parallel in the history of American medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected by it in distant towns, and where other remedies had failed.

Unacclimated persons, either residing in, or travelling through miasmatic districts, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from derangement of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other remedies had failed.

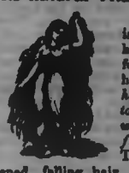
Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

DISMISSED.

I have closed the last class in my school-room,
And have said that our school was dismissed.
My loved ones ha, scattered around me
To bid me good-bye and be blessed;
In the current of home and the meadows
Their musical voices depart;
There is silence at last in my school-room,
A silence that saddens my heart.

Alone, all alone, in my school-room,
Where three happy winters I've been,
Alone all alone, in my school-room,
Where I shall be never again;
And as thinks, as the long morning shadows
Obscure the old maps with their gloom,
That a one of life's sweetest hours
Has closed with the closing of room.

Hours spent with the gentle and loving,
The bright and the blissful to last,
Yes lo ving a moment or twilight
To fade with the dawn of the past.
Hours bright with the footsteps of angels,
And pure as the regions above,
'Tis sweet to be sure by too many,
'Tis sweet to have many to love.

Yes, I have been happy this winter—
Wherever my lot may to cast,
My mind will go back in its dreamings
To the beautiful light of the past
To the school-house that stood by the meadow,
To the play-ground, the pond and the swing,
And memor fled in the Autumn
The gentle aroma of Spring.

They go from their books and their study,
They go from their pastime and play,
From a hand that was tender and loving,
Uncertain their for and their way;
Their hearts all bright with the sunset,
As they leave the old home in their tears;
May their faces be bright with the sunset,
When turned to the valley of years.

I have set to examine of passion
For them to embitter their lot;
I've appealed to their gentler nature,
And taught them what Jesus had taught;—
And if, in their moments ung warded,
Their errors ungoverned the rod,
I've gone with my burden of sorrow
To them and the presence of God.

I would pray for the loved ones departing,
That God would direct them aright,
Till the bells of the school-room of glory
Ring out from the portals of light.
That they may go forth in their beauty,
As in childhood and youth unbegrilled,
And meet for that heavenly kingdom,
Which Jesus compared to a child.

My life shall be wiser and calmer
By the lessons I've learned from the young.
I ask not for riches and honor,
Nor love that the poets have sung;
But, when, in life's wearisome journey,
My lot is less pleasant and mild,
I solace would seek from the children,
My sorrow would tell to a child.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

PART SECOND.

CHAPTER II.

THE HOTEL DE VERGNES.

The marriage of Clotilde and the events which had preceded it led to a feeling of constraint and discomfort in the relations between the family of Ferias and that of Beaumesnil. Sibylle herself shared in this feeling. She was too upright and too ingenuous not to appreciate, to what deserved. the intrigues of Mademoiselle Desnoyers, who seemed to her previously in love with Roland, and she was very far from experiencing the curious feelings which Madame de Beaumesnil and the young baroness bore-ed to attribute to be an explanation of the ailing off in her affections; but she had been disagreeably surprised at the ease with which Monsieur de Val Chesney had conquered for himself the still warm place of the Parisian Raoul.

The person of the baron did not seem to her sufficiently captivating to warrant so sudden a re-ch-ment, and she thought she discovered in it, to say the least, a feebleness and meanlessness that greatly diminished her esteem for her friend.

Sibylle's guardians judged more maturely and much more severely the conduct of Clotilde, but their judgement of themselves was more rigorous still, and they could hardly forgive themselves for the innocent egotism which had so long blinded them to the worthlessness of the young baron.—After having incurred the risk of engaging Sibylle in such unworthy bonds they cast aside entirely all projects of marrying her in the provinces; or, at all events, in the province where they lived, not wishing to allow in so serious a matter the slightest influence to their own personal interest. So the departure of Sibylle for Paris was definitely determined upon, and Monsieur de Vergnes was informed of their resolution. He replied that he was very glad of it, for his hotel was besieged night and day by a crowd of pretenders with guitars, and the police had already begun to be alarmed.—About this time the health of Sibylle showed symptoms of decline. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias urged eagerly upon this pretext for delaying still another year Sibylle's departure. They wrote with timidity an announcement of this change of plan to Monsieur de Vergnes. He replied that nothing could be more satisfactory; another year passed in the country would be of infinite advantage to Sibylle, and, as for the pretenders, another year of waiting would humble them, and they would become all the more tender. The Marquis and Marchioness hoped, perhaps, that they might die before the expiration of this year of grace. They were not so happy. On a cool autumn morning of the following year they took Sibylle to the railway-station, and bid her adieu. Anxious to all public demonstrations of emotion, they submitted to the supreme trial with calmness and dignity, although the construction of their features gave abundant evidence of their mortal anguish. But when, after a silent journey home, these two old people re-entered their elderly chateau, their strength abandoned them; and in the empty chamber of their little grand-daughter, they fell into each other's arms and wept bitterly. Another person had witnessed Sibylle's departure with no less despair. It was Jacques Feray, to whom the young girl, the evening before, had addressed, not without emotion, some words of farewell. She doubted whether the poor man had understood her, and was ashamed and touched at seeing him the next morning at the entrance to the station. A few moments afterward when she entered the railway-carriage, she saw him fleeing against the trellis that separated the track from the common. When the train started, the unhappy wretch commenced to run across the country in pursuit, and only gave over the unequal race when he fell exhausted to the ground. For several days he persisted in remaining upon the spot, awaiting the return of the train that had borne Sibylle away, and living no one knew how; but a strange idea that came into his head ended in causes again him. He had chanced to fall near the cabin of a locomotive; an usual, this individual left his cabin at the passage of every train, and spreaded his arm horizontally until it had passed, and Jacques Feray, observing this, thought it necessary to imitate him with exactness, apparently thinking the ceremony an obligation of servitude imposed upon those who lived near the track. But it became so painful to him after a few days of trial that he was glad to seek again his shed upon the cliff, far from the world and its capricious laws.

The Count de Vergnes met Sibylle at the Paris station, and took her at once to his hotel in the Champs d'Astin, where the Countess was impatiently awaiting her granddaughter, in the company of three small dogs, which from the depths of their downy baskets, saluted her entry with lugubrious growlings. She was then installed in a charming apartment, in which Monsieur de Vergnes had caused all the candles to be lighted in token of welcome. She soon slept peacefully, notwithstanding the agitation of her heart and of her brain, and in spite of the unaccustomed noises of the street, for at her age sleep is still a God.

The next day, as soon as she came down, Monsieur de Ver nes presented to her, in the court of the hotel, two thorough-bred horses, as beautiful as gazelles. She was eager to try one at once, and accompanied her grandfather in the promenade he took as usual before breakfast. The Count, who was still a handsome cavalier, took pleasure in showing to Sibylle the Bois de Boulogne, and in showing himself accompanied by so pretty an escort. As incident, trifling in appearance, nevertheless brought a slight shade of trouble over his face. They met, on an alley of the park a lady of very pleasing appearance, who was herself driving in one of those English wagons used for trials of new horses. Two or three young men were seated behind her in the carriage carelessly. The lady, as she passed the Count, saluted him slightly by a smile, then looked at Sibylle, and smiled again at the Count de Vergnes, opening wide her eyes and affecting astonishment. Monsieur de Vergnes, greatly disturbed by a slight stumbling of his horse, did not return her salute.

'Why don't you bow to that lady who is saluting you?' asked Sibylle.

'Did she salute me?' said the Count.—'Do you think so? But I don't know her. That is the way of the world at Paris, my dear child. There are so many people one meets, who know you, whom you know, and, in fact, you don't know them at all. A bad salutation morning my dear child!'

For about three weeks, Monsieur de Vergnes devoted himself to the service of his grandchild, with the juvenile ardor and chivalrous grace for which he was noted. He took her to the museums, to the palaces, to the historical monuments, and to all the theatres; there was one day, under pretext of fatigue, he delegated his functions of cicerone to Miss O'Neil for twenty-four hours, and never resumed them. His zeal was exhausted, he returned to his old habits, and Sibylle never saw him except at meals; but at these hours he was charming; he was coquettish with his granddaughter; he brought her packs of candies, cakes, Chinese playthings, and curious knick-knacks. He was jocose with Miss O'Neil; he had adopted toward her a kind of banter, which he sacrificed daily, but the invariable basis of which was a protestation that he was in love with the poor Irish girl, and was brought to despair by her rigor.

'Miss O'Neil,' he would say, 'I beg of you do not look at me! You prevent me from eating, and that is unjust. If you deprive me of the ideal, leave to me at least some material pleasures.' Or he would look upon her with an air of deep meditation, and suddenly exclaim:

'Miss O'Neil—to accumulated island in the Pacific Ocean—a palm-tree is that me—you beneath the palm, and myself at your feet: what a delicious dream!'

This drollery was convenient for him.—When he wished to leave earlier than usual for his club or elsewhere, he would say:

'Miss O'Neil, my patience is almost exhausted. A word of hope, or I go!'

And go he would. He never passed an evening at home doubtless to conform himself to a definition of Paris he had given.

'Paris,' he said, 'is a city of France, where people sometimes pass their evenings with other people's wives, but never with their own.'

The independent ways of the Count de Vergnes seemed to cause no coldness on the part of the Countess, which was extraordinarily occupied.

'I really do not know,' she would say, 'how I can finish all I have to do to day.'

She awoke at eight o'clock, took her chocolate, in bed, divided some tarts among her three dogs, and then slept again till ten. Then she rose and commenced her toilette, and sometimes finished it by twelve. Then was the hour of her second breakfast, which was rich and prolonged. Then she went out in haste, visited three or four shops, had three or four thousand yards of different stuffs shown to her, and bought nothing. She now came back to her hotel, made a second toilette, and went to the park. On her return, she regularly entered a pastry-shop, ate some little pattern of four gras and macaroni, swallowed an ice, finished with a glass of sherry, and began her visits, during which she crunched bon-bons and then a half pound of candy. At seven o'clock she dined as well as she could. While she was making her third toilette for her evening visits, she generally complained of a vague feeling of discomfort in the stomach, which, she said, had always been delicate. During the course of the evening, she would endeavor to fortify it by drinking a few cups of tea, accompanied by some slices of marmalade, but it was in vain. Her stomach, in spite of such a fortifying regimen, was always feeble; she experienced curious sensations of boldness, of weakness, and sometimes of nausea, and was hardly able to touch the lunch which was spread on her chamber against her return. This was very painful, it tormented her life. Sibylle, who was the confidante of her grandmother's despair, used to wonder by what miracle of heroism this delicate Parisian had resisted for fifty years a regimen which would have killed a cannibal in eight days.

Madame de Vergnes naturally thought it a duty to lead her granddaughter into the circle of beauty which she herself had left only with the convalescence from the bite of a squirrel. She introduced her to all her friends in succession, and the number of these was so great that it required several months to exhaust the list. One of the most intimate of them had been dead six weeks when the Countess and Sibylle presented themselves at her door.

'What!' said he Countess to the porter who came to the carriage to announce the sad intelligence. 'Dead! What do you mean?'

'Yes, Madame,' replied the porter, who was inclined to be jocose, 'she has been dead three six weeks; she has even been buried.'

'Ah! my friend, don't tell me so! What a horrid bore!' said the Countess. 'It is really incredible that such things should happen! But such is life my dear child! Jean drive to the pastry-shop, corner of the Rue Castiglione, you know.'

Sibylle also accompanied her grandmother in her evening rounds, in which the Countess usually just showed herself for a moment in three or four drawing-rooms.

A peculiar feature which surprised Sibylle, in these fashionable reunions was the rarity of men. Some melancholy gray-beards and a few beardless youths were generally the only representatives of the stronger sex. One would have supposed that a disastrous war had cruelly decimated the virile population. Even under circumstances of ceremony and of necessity, as after a dinner-party, for example, it was plain to see that the male guests, as well as the master of the house, were impatient for the evening to end for the ladies, that it might begin for them. It seemed to Sibylle that the noticeable separation of the two sexes, equal in polite society, was attended by the disadvantage of too often reducing the conversation of the women to the level of the gossip of a harem; of course, she did not know that it was attended by the corresponding advantage of converting the conversation of the men into the coarse talk of a police station-house.

If this first bird's-eye view of Parisian society did not completely fulfil the anticipations of Sibylle, her disappointment was not altogether without compensation. Outside of the insipid whirl of fashionable society, in some exceptional drawing rooms, in her morning excursions with Miss O'Neil, in the museums, the theatres, and even in the streets, she enjoyed the pleasurable excitement that the constant activity of Paris, its continually changing panorama, and its electric diffusion of intelligence, bring to a sprightly and well-cultivated mind. She breathed with exhilaration the intellectual atmosphere which envelops the city and constitutes its peculiar and incomparable charm.

The ancient navigators, as their feet touched the shores of Cyprus, perceived at once an odor of incense and of voluptuousness, which penetrated to their veins and revealed to them the puissant goddess of the isle. So Paris seems to have its own inebriating emanations, the tokens of that god whom alone it worships and that with fervent and passionate idolatry—the intellect—of which it may well claim to be the holy city. After some months at the hotel de Vergnes, Sibylle, in a letter to the Marquis de Ferias, endeavored to relate to him her varied impressions in the following language:

'I drift continually,' she said, 'from extreme interest to extreme ennui. Paris seems to me the place of all the world which flers the greatest resources to the mind and the least to the soul. At Paris my mind is joyous and my soul is sad. It would be impossible to feel more sensibly than I do here that the most elevated intellectual pleasures cannot entirely satisfy a human creature. If I can overcome my control over my future, I shall never be for Paris but a bird of passage. This tumultuous life, these endless distractions, these people always silent, always on foot, always extravagant, keep up a nocturnal din in my ears that stuns and harasses me. I seek for my poor me and cannot find it. At my arrival, I thought I had fallen upon a time of carnival, and I looked for it to end, but in vain, for it never ends and is here the very essence of life. All these people come and go, hurry and bustle about, make money, and die. Death at Paris always bewilders me, it does not seem natural. Everything about one is so factitious that the moment is as shocking as a disaster at a feast. It is the only law of life that cannot be forgotten, because it executes itself. It seems to me that all others are neglected. Mere accessories, luxury, ornament, embellishment are everything. Cakes, not bread, are the common food. Ah! my dear daily bread! Grant it to me, my God! and with one too who will gladly eat it with me, slowly, crumb by crumb, at my own old fireside, and near very near the easy-chair of my dear old grandfather.'

But Sibylle confided to Monsieur de Ferias only a small part of her troubles.—What she perceived to be wanting in the generality of Parisian existences was plainly to be seen each day before her very eyes, exemplified in those who were so near her heart that she could not but be more deeply affected by it than she dared to tell.

The strange conjugal relations she was witness to in the Hotel de Vergnes formed in her thought a pointed contrast with the charming and almost sacred intimacy of Ferias. It was plain indeed that Monsieur and Madame de Vergnes made from these reports, their only point of contact, were as completely strangers to each other as if the ocean had separated them. They had in common neither joy nor grief, neither a memory nor a hope. They exchanged at meals some trivial commonplaces, and then hastened to their separate pleasures.

Sibylle sought the reason for so strange a state of affairs, which at first she regarded as anomalous and peculiar to the family, and was inclined to think it the fault of her grandmother, whose extravagant dissipation and utter vanity of mind she could not but observe. On the other hand, interested and charmed by the brilliant qualities of the Count, she supposed he had at last become weary of the incurable puerility of his wife, and that sweet term had ended in discouragement and estrangement. When this idea had once taken possession of her mind, it was made as it usually happens, to account for everything, and she was less astonished at the harshness of language which the Count de Vergnes, so gracious and so gallant with everyone else, sometimes indulged in towards the Countess, and at the through resentment for his wasted affection and his disenchanted life. Filled with compassion for the presumed suffrings of her grandfather, Sibylle felt it her duty to redouble her attentions and kind offices toward him. One morning, inspired by this delicate sentiment, she unexpectedly entered his private department. Her surprise was extreme when she saw turning toward her, with an expression at once contused and irritated, a personage whose identity she had at first some difficulty in determining. It was an old man whose wrinkled face and bald head were dripping with pomatum. This glistening countenance had two faces like James: on one side, an arched eyebrow of the finest black, and a tuft of whiskers which showed few gray hairs; while on the other, the eyebrow and the parallel whisker were almost lost in a sunny vagueness.—Obliged, much to her regret, to recognize her grandfather in this grotesque image Sibylle uttered a faint cry, turned on her heel and ran hastily away. She recalled to her mind the little attentions, of so different a character, which the Marquis de Ferias was wont to bestow upon his person, and now instead of washing his old age, he used to embellish it by putting white powder upon his gray hair. She recalled at the same time a violent sally which the Count had made a few days before, for the benefit of the Countess, against those women who did not know how to grow old, and who obstinately persisted before the eyes of the public, sadness of half a century. She asked herself if the moral lesson, excellent in itself, was perfectly well placed at the mouth of the Count. These reflections and the mirth at which had provoked them threw Sibylle anew into doubt and uncertainty, from which, however, she was soon afterward relieved. The very evening of the fatal day on which Monsieur de Vergnes had been surprised by Sibylle amid the secrets of his laboratory, the old gentleman had experience, in some green-room flirtation, not connected with this story, a disappointment so serious that, with all his good humour, he was unable to digest it. During the night he had a slight attack of the gout, which kept him within doors for a week. Sibylle was astonished to see her grandmother suddenly interrupt the course of her cherished habits, and devote herself to the care of her husband, with a zeal by so much the more meritorious as it was meanly required. Monsieur de Vergnes did not like to be ill, and when he was so, did not mean that any one in the house should be ignorant of how much it vexed him. He made it, however, a point of honor on this occasion to preserve toward Sibylle his wonted courtesy; but his wife, a complete stranger to the original cause of his sufferings, had the whole benefit of them. But she supported with praiseworthy resignation the surly and peevish ill-nature with which the Count usually repaid her care. One day, however, her patience failed her. Monsieur de Vergnes, stretched out in an easy-chair, was discussing with Sibylle the merits of the play in vogue. Madame de Vergnes was coming and going about the chamber, preparing his medicine, closing a curtain or raising a door, to protect him from the draught.

'What the devil!' cried Monsieur de Vergnes; 'will you never cease dogging about like the shadow of a magic-lantern? Nothing is more annoying when one is talking than the continual trotting about.—Come, do sit down!'

The countess obeyed with docility. The conversation went on. She ventured to put in a word very pleasantly. Monsieur de Vergnes shrugged his shoulders.

'Don't talk when you have nothing to say, my dear. When one hasn't two ideas in one's head, it is better to be silent.'

'My friend,' said the countess, 'allow me! You are really too disagreeable;' and she put her handkerchief to her eyes.

'Good! excellent!' said the Count; 'a scene—a scene in a sick-room! The place is chosen, ingeniously chosen, upon my word! Oh! my dear, I know what the matter is. I know where the trouble comes from, three or four whole evenings that you have spent at home!—it's quite beyond your strength! Now, then, you may go, go and gossip with your friends, ride out your horses, spread your skirts. That is the only happiness you can conceive of in this world I don't wish to deprive you of it any longer!'

This inconsiderate attack startled the Countess from her inertia, and her injured feelings found utterance in a vehement outburst such as passion and truth can sometimes wake from the lips of the least eloquent of women.

'Ah!' said she, 'this is too unjust—this is too shameful! I am making no scene, but I will answer. You shall not deprive me of the respect of this child without a struggle. Besides, there is a lesson for her in what she is witnessing, and she shall comprehend it. I too, I was a child when you married me, and if I have remained a child—if I have not, as you say, two ideas in my head—if for these forty years I have bleeped for my own incapacity before you, and before the world, whose is the fault? If I had really been for you what I ought to have been, your wife, and not the plaything of a day, would it have been thus?—Did I not love you enough to receive your lessons, your counsels, your teachings, if you have taken the trouble to offer them? Ah! I would have received them on my knees! It was all I asked it was all I dreamed, to be near you, to see you, to hear you, to elevate myself to you! Every young girl who marries and who has an honest heart is ready, as I was, to become the pupil, the submissive, happy, impassioned pupil of her husband. A woman learns every thing from him she loves, and

TEMPERANCE.

At a temperance convention lately held in Toronto, Dr. Jewett, of the United States, was asked upon rising he was received with loud applause. He said enterprises go on in the world just as you put into them four elements of power—time, thought, capital and labour. I do not care what the enterprise is, good or bad, put these elements into it, and it moves. One reason why the temperance cause does not go forward as fast as we wish is because we do not put in some of these elements in the proper proportion.—Some of you may say that is my commencement I have neglected to put in one great element—the blessing of God. I say if a man keeps the laws of God that he will come in consequence. God has ordered that the good work should be done in this world through the agency of his children and if any of us fail in our aim we are amply repaid for our toil in our self-development. Very often we gain more by striving in an opposite direction than by working in the direction which we wish to go.

A man may throw himself heart and soul into becoming famous by writing something which he intends shall enrich the literature of Canada, and entirely fail; while if he put his whole little body in some noble work, his name would live for ever. Did Tom Jefferson suppose, when he was writing the Declaration of Independence, that he was contributing to the literature of America? No; but do you think that we Yankees shall ever let that die out? A man said to me the other day, "Do you think that you are going to conquer this thing?" I said yes, of course I am, for I believed there is a time coming when the lion shall lie down with the lamb; but I tell you it will not come while half a dozen grog shops are standing round.—Six grog shops are enough to spoil a millenium. (Laughter.) There is one thing in connection with this matter that I am sorry for, and that is, that there should exist in the community numerous errors respecting it—the subject has been so little studied, and perhaps you may be surprised at my making this statement. But how often have you studied this subject during the past year, sir?—how often you, madam? I do not care who it is. How many hours have you given to it? Have you one? There are many men, practical temperance men, who have not given as much time to a consideration of how to get rid of the horrible curse of intemperance as to the construction of a green-house. (Laughter.) And the ladies of Toronto have spent more money in purchasing mantle ornaments than they have in aid of the temperance cause. (Renewed laughter.) I would fight this battle against alcohol in every way. In the social circle I would ridicule it, and point my finger at it. Is there anything on the world more ridiculous than to see a parcel of men and women standing over a table, bobbing and bowing to each other, and teen touching glasses? (Laughter.) Ha! it makes me sicker than ippecauha. Did you ever see two persons each take up a peach, bow, and touch peaches. (Loud laughter.) Henceforth call all these things infamous, and sneer at them. I will do it. Any where and every where fight it. Fight it in the sick room. It is a great shame that the profession of which I am a member, and of which I am ashamed should prescribe alcohol in their practice. They do it not because they think it is good, but because they like it themselves. That is the case with doctors on our side; how it is on the side I do not know. They may be paragons of excellence here for all I know. The medical profession at the present day are prescribing four times as much alcohol as they used to do. Why? Because the profession is crowded, and they endeavour to make themselves agreeable to the people. This they do by recommending medicine in the shape of wine which their patients like to take. I would fight this thing in the Church, but, thank God, I have fit the season to do so now.—In the denomination to which I belong, in the state of Massachusetts, we have not a drinking minister or deacon. Why? I would as soon think of Satan in a prayer-meeting at the present day as to see a rumseller in a church in our State. (Laughter.) I would fight alcohol at the polls, also.

Where is Dr. Livingstone?

Mrs. Burton, wife of the celebrated African traveller, has written a letter, suggesting the idea that Dr. Livingstone may probably be at this moment a prisoner in Central Africa. The same suspicion appears to be entertained by eminent geographers, and this fact gives no the following letter a peculiar interest:

The latest intelligence touching Dr. Livingstone suggests the possibility of his having been detained in the capital of the Casembe, and at once explains the non-appearance of the traveller, and the want of communication so heart rending to his host of friends. Why are we whispering this one another as a secret? The report, we believe in its truth, should be published throughout the length and breadth of England, whose great heart will readily supply men and women to rescue one of her favorite sons from a precarious, and perhaps perilous position.

Unhappily for himself, Dr. Livingstone, unlike Captain Burton, has never made a friend of the Moslem. He has openly preferred to him the untutored African—in other words, the vile and murderous Fetishism—and his published opinions must be known, even at Zanzibar, to the religion of the State. The Muskat Arabs are, as my husband reported long ago, all powerful at the City of Casembe; and if Dr. Livingstone be detained there, it is doubtless at their instigation.

ALLEGED CORRUPTION.—L'Aurore of this city states, on the authority of "A Friend," that President Grant gave 5,000 to help the Messager Franco Americain, which it characterises as an impious and blasphemous journal, and that the proprietor of said Messager, whenever he is short of funds, has only to make a trip to Washington The reason assigned is that the Messager was, and is a Grant paper, before, during and since the election. If this be true, Grant's administration must be almost as guilty of subsidizing newspapers as our Dominion Government in Canada, which gives remote Upper Canada papers, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia advertisements.—Witness.

At the first sederunt of the Ottawa Presbytery, Mr. White, of Wakefield, called attention to a remarkable movement which has taken place among the Roman Catholics in the township of Masham. Some 12 or 15 heads of families had signed and put into the hands of the priest a declaration stating their belief in the Protestant religion, and their determination to leave the Church of Rome. Though every effort had been put forth to cause them to retract, they still remained firm, and a large number had attended the services of a missionary from Point Aux Trembles, who visited them some time ago.

New Method of Washing Clothes

Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

BY-LAW No.

A By law to levy a certain sum of money for making a drain in the Township of North Monaghan

WHEREAS certain Ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan have Petitioned the Municipal Council of said Township of North Monaghan to make a drain along the allowance of Road between Lots No. 12 and 13, in the 11th concession of said Township;

And whereas it is reasonable to comply with the prayer of said Petition;

And whereas by the Municipal Institutions Act and amendments thereto, power is given to Municipal Councils to undertake the work of making drains, and of levying on the lands of parties benefitted by said drains for their construction;

The Municipal Council of the Township of North Monaghan hereby enacts as follows:—

That said drain shall be undertaken and completed by the said Council, and that the sums estimated by Theodore B. Clementi, Esq., P. L. S., be assessed against the owners and occupiers of the several lands benefitted by said drain, and the Clerk is hereby instructed to charge said parties in the Collector's Roll the sums so estimated for, and that the Collector do collect and pay over to the Township Treasurer such sums, to reimburse said Council for the outlay in making such drain

The above is a true copy of a By-Law which will be passed by the Municipal Council of North Monaghan on the 23rd. day of October A. D. 1869.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1869.

The Dominion Government are begging for some one to take hold of their finances and save them from destruction. They dare not trust their money bags in the hands of Galt; Hincks they dread on account of past events in Grand Trunk and Point Levis jobs. They have no other man fit for the position. J. A's. antecedent leave it doubtful whether he could manage to be always in a fit state to hold the strings. Cartier has not application enough to deal with figures, and hence the sad plight of ministers in search of some one to keep them in funds. Their eyes have been fixed on Mr. Brown, desirous of getting him on board their sinking ship. They have no one in whom they can place confidence. Their money is gone; the Intercolonial railroad on their hands; the difficulties arising out of the colonial policy of Messrs. Gladstone and Bright and these things are really more than they are prepared for; and now the man whom they spent their thousands to defeat is their only hope. The Conservative press admits that he is the only man in Ontario who knows anything about the financial state of the Dominion or of the Provinces. Mr. Brown saved the leaky ship of state, when no other man could, and for this he has been the most soundly abused man in the Dominion. Not a newspaper article but is Brown. Not a speech from the Attorney General down to the pettiest toady that swears by John A. or John S., but receives all their pathos from the word Brown. And after all this, he is the man, the only man who knows anything about our finances. Surely Mr. Brown has received ample praise out of the mouth of his enemies to atone for the abuse they have heaped upon him for years.

COAL OIL MEETING.

Last week a meeting of the Stockholders of the Petroleum Company was held in the Council Chambers. The President, Sheriff Hall, presided, but not a single Direc or made his appearance. Enquiry was made as to the debts due by the company, and also in reference to the disposal of the material, tools, ropes, &c., of the company, but no satisfactory statement was given. the Secretary had not prepared any complete statement. It transpired that there has been no election of directors since 1867, and that no meeting could be ever convened as they would not attend. A considerable quantity of stuff that was left when work stopped was allowed to be stolen away, no one caring to see after it or to appoint a care taker.—Stoves, stove pipes, ropes, tools, &c., are gone, no one appears to know where. Mr. Geo. Hilliard was allowed to get a judgment against the company by default; no offsett, no defence was put in. His account was originally $101.87, this was reduced to $25.77, according to the Secretary's books; yet his judgment is $112 and cost amounting to over £39 or $156, because no one was there to see after it. At this point the meeting found that the whole was in a mess and thought it best to appoint a committee to investigate the whole matter and report, and on motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Croly, Messrs. Stratton, C. Cameron and the mover were named a committee for the purpose.

The committee met on Friday evening in the Council Chamber, but found that the accounts were not made ready by the Secretary, and in order to give him sufficient time to prepare them, the committee adjourned till Friday night, when they will again try to prepare a statement.

There is a current rumor that the sad tragedy at Avondale by which 200 miners lost their lives, was caused by rival miners. The unfortunate victims were Welshmen, who had just commenced work after a strike for higher wages. They had never heartily entered into the strike, being compelled by other miners. They were also favored by the proprietor, and for these things they have suffered death, it is said. Surely human nature cannot have sunk so low as to commit such a deed.

The celebrated John O'Farrell, of Quebec, has been busying himself with getting up an annexation meeting in the ancient capital. It was held on Sunday, upon the principle of the old maxim, "the better day, the better deed." Nothing but the riff-raff of the city attended, just as they would run to a dog fight, a "bruise," or a general row.—Where the carrion is, thither will the eagle be gathered.

A ball will be given at Quebec in honor of Prince Arthur. What a way of doing honor to Princes? Either a feast where all get drunk and talk nonsense, or a ball where fools "tip the light fantastic toe" at folly's shrine Yet so is the way of this world.—People will dance with a Prince if on a glass floor over the flames of Tartarus.

MR. MACKETT'S CONCERT.—Remember the Concert to-morrow night in the Drill Shed. The Port Hope Band and also the Peterboro Band will be there and di-course some beautiful pieces. The programme is a good one.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY PIC-NIC.

On Tuesday, the anniversary of St. Andrew, the patron saint of Auld Scotia, and a member of brither Scots, with a few friends of other nations, proceeded by the train to Lakefield and there held a Pic-nic. About two hundred persons assisted themselves of the opportunity of visiting the "auther ain," and of spending a while in the auld glen.

The day was all that could be desired, the sky clear, the atmosphere serene and the sun shone as an August day best to September to do honor to the occasion.

All started at 9 o'clock or thereabouts from the station; the numbers were increased at Blythe Mills by a few more, and gently and sorrowfully then all proceeded to the auld latticus little village that is bidding fair to be a place of some importance, although the contest with Peterboro must always be an unequal one, and to the advantage of the latter. On arrival all were in anxious lookout for the station and platform, but found that the erection has been no part of the programme yet, as the authorities intend an eminence to the shores of the lake, where in all probability the station will be. The sidewalk to the village from the jumping off place is either out of repair or never was in it, yet all this did not prevent the ladies making good their way to the water's edge near the school house.

Soon all were busy in making ready for what were the sports of the day should commence. Mr. Robert Strickland was present and most kindly placed all the punts, boats and canoes he could at the disposal of the parties, and gave what aid he could to make them happy and enable them to enjoy a sail. Not a few of the lads and lasses left the more experienced in the art of getting ready the tables, to do all the work, they betaking themselves to canoes and other small craft for a sail. The parties soon showed their affinities (not chemical) in the formation of groups where you might read the congeniality of the party by the visage, the affectionate appearance, or other liquid attractions or surroundings.

The bag pipes whose "squeel" was hardly strong enough to be heard during the passage up, now came in to enliven the scenes, and bravly did he play several Scotch airs that would delight the hearts of many a one who hadna heard their music for many a day. To some the soft music of the gentle whisper seemed just as enchanting as they wandered to and fro whispering other tales, or listening to the sweet reply. Mr. William Tell rd, of Smith, then came forward and, by request, read the following very appropriate address, in poetry:

Come, lads, for fun this day.

It's fourteen years, an' six months mair,
Since a left Scotia's hills sae fair;
An' aft a lang'd wi' heart fu sair
For sic a day:
When Scots could thraw aside their care,
To sport an' play.

Foorsooth, a'm doonright glad to see
Baith auld an' young, in mirth an' glee;
It gars ma heart see big thuds gie
Agin ma breest;
It brings Auld Scotia fresh to me,
In thoughts, at least.

This scene reminds us o' the days,
When callants on Auld Scotia's braes,
We joined in a' the harmless plays,
Ilk ane in turn
Wad fauld his breeks up legs half ways,
To wade the burn.

Or clim' the hills wi' yer bare feet,
Pull' cowslips, an' the primrose sweet;
But whiles a pain that gar'd ye greet,
Ilk e each bum;
The bluid wid rin fae yer bit feet,
Jagg'd wi' a thorn.

But brither Scots, a mean tell you,
This day gies me anither view;
Alt yer forefathers quietly drew,
To sic like places,
Where persecutors often slew
Them for guid graces.

To worship God, that manly band
Did spurn the tyrants dread command,
Upon the hill nae guard wad stand
To warn his brither:
He held the Bible in an hand,
Sword in the other.

Auld Scotia's glens ow'd teh the tale;
Her rugged crags sic scenes bewail;
Or sheu'd her blude-stained heather fall,
The faggot, stake,
The rack, the bolt, screw, sharpened nail,
Wad witness make.

Through bluid they gained religion's cause,
Their next desire for freedom was;
Their lawfu rights they gained by sma'k,
For years they fought;
Weel may we in Auld Scotia's laws,
Dear they were bought.

When foes tried Scotia to subdue,
The giant McNabbs to battle flew;
The Campbells, Camerons, quickly drew
Their wee bit steel;
A Bruce, a Douglas, Wallace true
Sair guard them wheel.

Freedom they gained; we claim it still,
There's na dragoon upon that hill,
Na Claverhouse to sla or kill
For faith or creede;
This day ye can do what ya will
U' lawfu' deeds.

No sword this day ye need to take,
Unless in slice up yer big cake;
Sit, eat an' sup for stomach's sake,
There's nane'll stap ye;
Ria, put, an' jump, some gald springs make,
Let nane outstrip ye.

Wheest! there's a sound a ken richt weel,
That's just the flag pipe's warra squeel,
How queer they mak a Scotchman feel,
And gars him spring
Up in a rew for some Scotch reel,
Or Highland fling.

Freend Scots, I've nothing mair to say;
Gang, join yer cronies in their play,
But a', wha's hair is getting gray,
Can stap wi' me.
Wishin' that sic anither day
We a' may see.

—WILLIAM TELFORD.

THE GAMES

Next attracted attention. Mr. Robert Renfrew worked hard in this department, as the following list of prizes testifies to the result:

Flat Race, Boys under 13, 6 entries.—1st prize, Hugh Martin, $1.00; 2nd do, A. Strickland, 50c; 3rd do, James Ormond, 25c.

Flat Race, Men. 200 yards 5 entries.—1st prize, John King, $1.00; 2nd do, Peter King, 50c. (There were young men, except Mr. Thompson, who, although 53 years ran side by side with the fleetest, being only by a little way, something "that would not have been 30 years agone.")

Long Jump, standing, 6 entries.—1st prize, John McFarlane, $1.00; 2nd do, — Spence, 2nd do, 50.

Long Jump, running, 6 entries.—1st, Jno. McFarlane, $1.00; 2nd do, D. McDonald, 50c.

High Leap.—1st prize, John McFarlane, $1.00.

Double Canoe Race, Boys.—1st prize, R. Beatty and George Beatty; 2nd do, James Bird and James Bird; 3rd do, F. Barlee and A. Northgate.

Three Legged Race, Boys.—1st prize, Edward Martin and Arthur Strickland; 2nd do, James Graham and T. Wilson; 3rd do, W. Sherin and R. Hamilton.

Quoits, 16 entries.—1st prize, John Rose, $2.00; 2nd do, John Gregg, $1.00.

Just before leaving the grounds, A. H. Campbell, Esq., President, delivered a short address, followed by Andrew Miller, Esq., of Smith, but having started on our way to the train on this part of the programme was overtaken, we missed the feast of reason.

These over, all returned to the place where they expected the train, but had to wait another hour. The time was spent in chopping the stone, quoits and marriage, bearing with the best grace they could the sad news, that the locomotive was off the track. Whether off or not, she soon made her appearance, and at half past six all got on their way again for home. And a right jolly good time of it they had; songs and chorus, following in quick succession.

At Blythe Mills, the sport was spoiled somewhat by the train passing on without stopping to let off a few who got on there. It was unfortunate, but not very pleasant for those who would have to return again.

On the whole the day was a pleasant one, and the picnic a success. All returned safe, and sorry to part, from the necessity of each having to go his own way in the world for another year.

BEST POTATOES YET.—We were shown some potatoes the other day, raised by Sheriff Hall, that we believe equal, if not surpass, anything that has yet appeared in print. Mr. Hall planted half a pound of the Early Rose, which produced over 67½ pounds when raised, and this, too, after taking away one or two at an early period to test their early qualities. Mr. Hall assures us that if he had allowed the whole to come to maturity, there would have been over 70 lbs. The produce, too, is of a good quality and flavor. Mr. Hall has also some of the best plum-bearing trees, and this year the crop surpasses even the most imaginative ideas. On a single branch, not a foot in length, we counted 68 large plums, and there were other branches still more heavily laden. His plum trees are almost overburdened, so that very many are giving away under the weight of fruit. It is really surprising what a quantity of fruit, plums, gages, apples, pears, grapes, &c., can be raised on a piece of ground well attended to—enough, at any rate, to induce those who have the space and little to do to go and try. We advise the doubting to go and take a look at the Sheriff's garden and be convinced.

The barley market opened brisk in Toronto on the 11th instant, commencing at 75 cents, but speedily going up to 80 cents.—This price was caused by the demand of brewers for present use, but will hardly keep up, it is thought. From the Toronto market report, Flour is about $4.75 to $5.00; Treadwell Wheat, $1.05 to $1 08; White Wheat, about $1.12; Oats, dull at 35 cts; Peas are selling at 70 cts.

Here buyers are offering 45 to 55 cents for barley, according to quality and color. There has not much come in yet. New oats have been sold for 30 cents to 35 cents, but owing to the heavy crop they will be much lower as soon as the market is supplied Wheat is about $1.00, with the tendency doubtful. An advance need hardly be looked for in the market. There is no beef coming into market just now.

BOBCAYGEON BAZAAR will be held in Simpson's Hall, on Wednesday and Thursday next, the 22nd and 23rd of September. The "Ogemah" will leave Bridgenorth at 9 a. m., on Wednesday morning, for the purpose of conveying parties to and from Bobcaygeon, Mr. Wallis having readily promised to contribute the proceeds of the trip towards the fund for building an English Church in the village. Mr. McGregor's stage will be in attendance in Peterboro at 8 o'clock, a. m. The "Novelty" will also accomodate friends from Lindsay, leaving the wharf there at 9 o'clock, a. m., on the same morning, and returning in the evening. Fares on both boats, half a dollar.

PERSONAL.—The Rev. Mr. Thom, of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church at Emmikillen, in the Township of Darlington, to which he will remove immediately. Mr. Thom has for years labored very acceptably at Lakefield and North Smith. He is a man of warmth and zeal, as a preacher, and an active and laborious pastor; an earnest and able advocate of temperance, was held in the greatest esteem by his congregation, from whom he removes only because he believes it to be his duty, and he carries with him the earnest prayers of the people for his prosperity and useful ness, as a christian pastor, in his new sphere.

PERSONAL.—The numerous friends of D. G. Hatton, Esq., late of the law firm of Weller & Hatton, intend manifesting their respect for him, by giving him a supper to-night ere his departure for another scene of labor. It is also intended to present Mr. Hatton with an address engrossed on vellum and signed by all the leading citizens of the town, without respect of creed, politics or parties. Mr. Hatton is about to remove to Baltimore, Md., U. S., for a season. Our best wishes for his happiness and prosperity accompany him.

We regret very much to announce the decease, after a long illness, of Mrs. Millar, wife of James Millar, Esq., Deputy Reeve of Otonabee. Mrs. Millar was born in Lancashire, Scotland, and came to this County when 10 years old—36 years ago. The funeral took place on Friday last, and was very large. The remains were interred in the Little Lake Cemetery. Our deepest sympathies are with the bereaved husband and family.

The Protestant Home Committee beg to thank the undermentioned friends for donations in August:—Mr. White (of Monaghan) a quarter of lamb and joint of mutton; Mrs. Dunnet, quantity of flour; a friend, parcel of children's clothes; from St. John's Church S. S. pic-nic, basket of cakes; Mrs. Tighe, some apples.

The shoemakers are on a "strike" in Montreal for higher wages. The employers are determined not to grant the demand.—Society men threaten all who would go to work, and thus through fear, prevent many from exercising their better judgement. All these strikes are caused by one or two leaders who are so fond of liquor as labor.—Tradesmen in their right mind would leave an employer, if not sufficiently remunerated for his labor, and not interfere with others. As it is, orders will be delayed for a week or so, when want will bring them to a right mind.

THE DOCTORS.—The Allopathic University of the Dominion are having a convention in Toronto to regulate matters of Physic in general, and their own in particular. In their collective wisdom they refused to fraternize with Dr. Lamont of Toronto, (an Allopath,) because, forsooth, he sometimes consulted with a quack (Homœopath.) This is prescription with a vengeance. The Allopaths would fain have the world believe that they are the people, and that all medical skill shall die with them, by their refusal to have enrolled amongst them a gentleman educated as they have been, but who has in some of his professional calls talked with one of the proscribed Homœopaths. Now, who in his common senses would employ a physician who refuses to learn from any system, and so avail himself of any source of medical information. A skilled physician will use every remedy rather than allow his patient to die with one possible or probable remedy untried; and if he did not, he would be unworthy of confidence or patronage.—The men who show their selfishness to such a degree as have the Doctors assembled in Toronto only advertise their opponents, and lead the people to enquire the meaning of these terms about which the Doctors differ so, and enquiry in every case works in favor of the persecuted. The leanings of the human mind are toward the persecuted, and after all, the strife is more about words than deeds; both classes infringe on the domain of each other, they denounce each other, and yet like politicians they dine together in amity, and the world must go on, disease will be allayed by both classes, and the patients of both will die; but for the sake of our race, we trust not because of one class refusing to use that which has been found effectual by the other Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skillful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Caisse's Hotel, on Thursday, September 9th, and will remain till the evening of Saturday, September 11th. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and uncurable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians "so ranked high in their profession. Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skillful in the treatment of consumption as well as all other diseases and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

IS THE INDIAN FORM OF MARRIAGE BINDING?—By a decision of the Canadian Bench it is held that a marriage in the Hudson Bay Territory, after the Indian fashion, is as binding as if performed according to christian customs. This is no doubt a righteous judgement of the courts, and will tend to prevent marital connections that are only intended to be broken as soon as opportunity offers. The man who marries an Indian woman, and lives with her for several years, should be liable to all the amenities of other parties.

The "British Canadian," Port Hope, has a very witty article on Patent Steam Reservoirs, Patent Steam Boilers, and Steam Presses in particular, and their failure in Peterboro. We wish our contemporary would let Peterboro people alone. What is it to him whether men are women or women men out here. Our Port Hope confrere must be entering into family affairs too deeply. His revelation of gender, we hope, will not prove as serious as Mrs. Stowe's late revelations of death-bed stories.

The Informer, who gave intelligence of the confinement of Barbara Ubryk in the Convent in Germany, has recently died under suspicion of being poisoned. He was a father confessor, and in his wine let out the secret. The Convent in which she was confined has been almost destroyed by the populace. The military having to interfere, to save the inmates.

The 200 men who were in the Avondale mine as reported last week, all perished. The owners of the mine are sadly to blame because of having no fire engine on the ground nor any possible way of escape in case of any such accident, or danger.

A very severe storm passed over Portland, Maine, on the 9th instant, just while the State Fair was being held. There was a great deal of damage done to houses, chimnies, fences, and other property, not firmly secured.

ORDER OF BRITISH TEMPLARS.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Annual Session of the Peterborough County Lodge of the above named order was held in the British Templars' Hall, in the Town of Peterboro, on Friday last, 10th inst. The number of delegates from a distance was not as large as was expected, owing to the bad state of the roads, caused by the rain of the previous days.

The report of the Secretary showed the Order to be increasing very favorably in this County and especially in the eastern part of it—one new lodge having been organized in the village of Westwood since last session, and good prospects of other lodges being organized in different localities throughout the County.

The usual routine of business was transacted, during which several matters of importance in connection with the Order was freely discussed. After a very interesting session the lodge adjourned, to meet again in the village of Westwood, on the last Saturday of December next, at 2 o'clock, p. m., then to meet for the election of officers and the transaction of other business pertaining to the order.—COM.

Monaghan Township Council.

Monaghan, August 27, 1869.

The Council met at 10 o'clock. Present—Councillors Laing, Robson, Birney and Tully.

In consequence of the continued illness of the Reeve, Councillor Laing was appointed "Presiding Officer" during his absence.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The clerk informed the Council that agreeable to the wishes of the Drain Committee, he had advertised for tenders, and was now prepared to receive them.

The following were then handed in:—

Mr. Geo. Hawkes, $2 25 per perch; M. J. Johnson, $1.95; Alex. Wilson, $1.70; and Geo Shields, $1.59½ The latter was accepted by his giving sufficient security for the performance of the work.

A communication dated July 14th, was received from the Provincial Secretary's Office, acknowledging the receipt of the petition of the Municipal Council of the Township of Monaghan, against the extention of the limits of the Town of Peterborough, and that the subject would be submitted to his Excellency the Lieut. Governor.

PETITIONS.

That signed by John Whitfield and seven others, for assistance to make the quarter line between lots 6 and 7, in the 10th concession, so as to enable a team to get up in the summer time. Granted $12.

That signed by Robt. Goodfellow and eight others, for the purpose of surveying the quarter road of the Township along concessions 7 and 8, with the view of opening up said lines, believing as petitioners did, that it would increase the value of the waste land in that part of the Township. Granted $16.

That signed by Robert W. Shaw and twenty-seven others, praying that neither the application to open up the road allowance between park lots 15 and 16, in the 13th concession of the Township, nor the expenditure of any public money thereon be granted.

Councillor Birney brought under the notice of Council the almost impassable state of the road between his corner and Foster's creek, south of Dobbin's lot. The sum of $13 was granted thereon under his own supervision hence, and $5 to Mr. Hawes to expend opposite the west half of lot No. 6, between the 9th and 10th concessions

ORDERS ON THE TREASURER.

Mr. Helm, for three scrapers, $18; Luke Berry, expenses in prosecuting Wm. Kerr for selling liquor without licence, $6.34; Mr. Romaine, stationery and printing, $12.68; and T. B. Clementi, for surveying and other expenses of drain, $42.50.

BY-LAWS.

A By-law for levying a certain sum of money for making a drain along the allowance for road between park lots 12 and 13, in the 11th concession of the Township, received two readings.

A By-law for opening up road allowance between park lots 15 and 16, in lot 13 in the 13th concession of the Township, was read a first time.

A By-law levying the sum of six mills on the dollar for county purposes was finally passed. This would have been two-and-a-six-eighth mills on the dollar, or $400 more, but it not been for moneys in the Treasurer's hand Besides this deduction no Township rate will be levied this year, there being still sufficient funds in hand for that purpose.

The Council adjourned to Saturday the 23rd day of October, at 10 o'clock, a. m.—Com.

PETERS' MUSICAL MONTHLY, for September, is before us. The contents are:—Literary—The Captain's Return; The Story of the Opera Hamlet; Bach and Beethoven; Czerny's Letters as a Young Lady; Musical; Jessie; Down in the Valley where the Green Grass Groweth; At Home Thou art Remembered still; The Flower of Marble Head; Favourite Military March; Congenial Hearts, Mazurka De Salon; Morning Glory, Mazurka; Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord our God; A Mother's Grasp; Take me Home, a Quartet with Accompaniment; Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing; This World is Poor from Shore to Shore; Oh! The London Spectator, on an article ago not casting off the colonies says:—

"It is as certain as any future fact can be, that unless England can grow in her colonies to dimensions forbidden by her own territorial limits, she must in the end, like Holland, lose that position among the Great Powers which can only be sustained by adequate population; and though we do not accept the American view that Britain is rapidly becoming effete, there is quite truth enough in it to make any Englishman who takes pleasure in contemplating the possible future of his country, welcome and encourage a movement which tends to merge the vast glories of the United Kingdom in the greater glories of a United Empire."

The East Durham and Hope Agricultural Exhibition will be held in Port Hope this year, on the 6th and 7th of October, the days of the East Riding Show at Keene. It is a pity that it could not be so fixed that parties could attend both county shows. This year it cannot now be done, but next year by a little trouble of writing in time, it, no doubt, could be so arranged.

THE SPANISH THRONE.—King Victor Emanuel of Italy, in reply to the overtures made to the Duke of Aosta, in connection with the Spanish throne, declares that his child never reign in a free country unless by the unanimous voice of the Constituent Chambers. 16,000 troops are now ready to sail for Cuba.

A Frenchman has invented a machine something like a piano, by which the operator can report any speech verbatim. It is managed just as a piano plays, by touching keys with the finger; these print the phonetic word underneath.

The New York Times says that one-third of the whole population of South Carolina are now engaged in growing cotton; a work which it was held negroes only could perform.

MADRID, Sept. 12.—The Imperial newspaper confirms the report that 24,000 soldiers will be sent to Cuba, and states that the merchants of Havana have raised 2,000,000 reals for their pay.

The Smith and Monaghan Agricultural Society intend holding a Show at Bridgenorth, we have not been able to learn the day.

CARLISTS.—A small band of Carlists is reported in Catalonia. Troops have been sent in pursuit.

Why Napoleon's Sickness Disturbs the Peace of France.

(From the Journal de Paris, Aug. 28.)

The rumors yesterday are less serious than is the political state in which we at the moment find ourselves, and which has contributed greatly to exaggerate the alarm at the conservative chiefs of the Parisian populations. A dangerous illness of the Emperor would at all times be a great and legitimate subject of anxiety for our country. But the circumstances of the moment naturally lend the effect of raising public uneasiness to the highest pitch. We are, in fact, and in all the force of the term, in a state of interregnum. We have neither a constitution nor any regularly organized political bodies. The fundamental compact for the moment resembles matter in a state of fusion lacking any precise form for our outlines. The Senate is but an Assembly, all of whose functions are in question—The Legislative Body is not assembled and were it necessary hastily to convoke it for several days, it still would more but a precarious existence, since the powers of a great number of its members are not yet verified. Everybody agrees that our present Ministers are mere stopgaps; that their moral authority, notwithstanding that among them there are one or two eminent persons, is nearly all. The Minister of the Interior is relaxing at the baths of Bagneres the Minister of War has hardly yet installed himself, and the Empress, with the Prince Imperial, have just left the continent. The whole Empire, therefore, is at this moment concentrated in the person of the Emperor. One may literally say with the great Corneille:

"Seul, l'Empereur est tout et l'Empire n'est rien."

This is what causes the public's vague terror. This is why it has offered for the Emperor to be, as it were hidden for a few days from the eyes of the people of Paris for them to be seized with a vague uneasiness. It is important both for the country and for the dynasty that we should emerge with all possible speed from a condition perilous for everybody. The Senate must resolutely apply itself to the Parliamentary reform, and accomplish its work completely and promptly. The Legislative Body must be summoned at latest for the first days of October, and not again adjourned until constituted. A ministry must be organized, of which the composition shall serve as a guarantee to the liberal party, and which thereby shall consolidate a security that has been shaken. In short, we must have a government. But above all, it must be done quickly. To-day is our's to-morrow belongs to no man.

RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE.

It would really seem that nothing short of absolute supremacy will satisfy a section of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in Ireland. We were repeatedly assured, during the recent debates on the Irish Church question, that the measure proposed by Mr. Gladstone commended itself, by its moderation and justice, to the Roman Catholics of Ireland generally, and that with provisions therein made they would be satisfied. We hoped and believed such would be the case and therefore, to a certain extent, advocated the measure, as one of conciliation and justice. Yet, no sooner has the bill become law, by obtaining the royal assent, than a new demand is made by the authorities of the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland, and a course generally adopted, utterly inconsistent with the professions made a short time ago, and which cannot fail to excite very grave apprehension. Not only has an order been issued for a public thanksgiving service in all the Roman Catholic Churches, for the overthrow of ecclesiastical ascendancy but the statement is boldly made that the recent concessions are not enough, followed by a prohibition from Cardinal Cullen against sending their children to the National School. The spirit of all this is too obvious to pass unnoticed. It is just an attempt on the part of the Roman Hierarchy to acquire that ascendancy which they thank God for overthrowing, simply because it had hitherto been possessed by the Protestant Church. The authorities of the Roman Catholic Church, indeed, bring themselves into contact with the Government itself, and they wish to overthrow an established system of education in which they are not supreme that they may set up a counter system, framed upon their own model, and subject to their own control. The demand cannot, for a moment, be tolerated. In attempting to do justice to the Roman Catholics it will never do to wrong the Protestant population of the country.—Church Herald.

There are equal rights and privileges which must be regarded. If the Roman Catholic Bishops forget these, it is necessary for some one to bring them to remembrance.—Should they persist in bringing forward such demands before the House of Commons, the result will be an instant repudiation. The whole thing is impracticable. As an act of policy, it is most unwise. As revealing the real spirit of the Roman Catholic hierarchy it is to be very much deplored. We regret exceedingly the documents which are published, we hope yet Cardinal Cullen and his friends will learn discretion in the time of victory.—Hamilton Spectator.

FAT MEN'S FESTIVAL.—An assembly of fat men—men of Falstaffian proportions—who bite their great prototype, "landed the lean earth as they moped along," or who broke down the coach or waggon springs of most of those who were so stupid as to take them as freight—took place at the mouth of the bay, near Norwalk, Connecticut, on the 27th of August last. Pinguitude from New York and most of the New England States was present.—Tents had been erected; tables were under them; and on the beach, clams, oysters, eels, blue fish, sweet corn and potatoes were something between a load of hot stones and a smoking pile of sea weed. After a period of gormings and libations at the bar of the hotel, scales were placed upon the pier; and the fat candidates waited meekly in a long string for the purpose of being weighed. Of the 117 offering, the first six weighed 1919 pounds—the tallest being John A. P. Fish of New York, who tipped the beam with 358 pounds on the opposite end. Fourteen others of the second class already aggregated 3700 pounds—the heaviest being Stiles Stephens of New Haven and G. G. Northrop of New Milford, severally weighing 298.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations "in time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is for this a lesson to us in fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it is obtainable by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

THE RUMORED APPOINTMENT.—As long as Sir Francis Hincks jaunts up and down the country as a private individual, he is, of course, welcome, and should be treated with ordinary courtesy, notwithstanding his antecedents in Canada. But if there is any idea, as some of the political papers say, of appointing him to office of any kind, but especially to such a responsible office as that of Finance Minister, there should be such a united manifestation of indignation as shall set that matter at rest for ever—if all our Ministers are not like one of them, impervious to public opinion. The bad appointments of our Government are surely numerous enough without adding one that will cap the climax; and if such an appointment be attempted we call upon all the respectable and honest members of the Cabinet to resign at once if they cannot prevent it. It would be ill for them to yoke with Sir Francis Hincks in addition to the present burden they have to bear of unsuitable yoke-fellows.—Witness.

A GRAND MISSIONARY EXCURSION.—Dr. Robert Patterson of Chicago, publishes an appeal in behalf of a grand missionary excursion to the Pacific, which has been planned by the Old School and New School Presbyteries of Chicago. The plan proposes that the Board of Domestic Missions send out a delegation of one hundred ministers and laymen, to begin a series of religious meetings at Omaha, and go over the Pacific Railroad, holding meetings every night and selecting stations for missions and churches, and getting grants of land for sites. At San Francisco they are to divide, the two parties going all along the coast, north and south, prosecuting the same work. On returning east they go by half dozen to all the principal churches, tell what they have seen and done, and endeavor at once to raise a fund of half a million to occupy the ground gone over.

ARRIVED BY THE S. S. "DACIA."—Among the passengers who arrived at Montreal on Sunday, by the S. S. "Dacia," from London, was a gentleman of H. M. Household, "a Queen's messenger" with letters and despatches for H. R. H. Prince Arthur, whose arrival the messenger awaits in this city, previous to returning to London. Lt. Dowell R. N. R., commander of the "Dacia" informs us that he has on board, the private plate and a portion of the personal effects of the Prince. The "Dacia" seven days before she made Father Point, met with a slight accident, which detained her somewhat during the latter part of her passage; the propeller came in contact with, it is supposed a sunken treeboig and one of the flukes was broken off.

Many men pass fifty or sixty years in world and when they are just going out of it, they bethink themselves, and step back as it were, to do something which they had all the while forgotten, viz:—The main business for which they came into the world, to repent of their sins, and reform their lives and make their peace with God, and in time to prepare for eternity.—Tidings.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—H McCulloch, a section man on the Port Hope L & H Rail Road, was killed by the evening train on its way from Port Hope, on Saturday the 11th instant. As far as we can learn, the engineer of the train on turning a short curve after passing from Cavan into Emily discovered a man lying on the track. He immediately whistled down breaks and used every exertion to stop the train but failed until the whole, consisting of 15 cars, passed over him. When the train was stopped and the conductors and others went back they found the head completely destroyed and on examination of the body, no other injury was discovered. The body was brought to the Omemee Station when an inquest was held by Dr. Norris and an intelligent Jury, who found that the deceased came to his death by the evening train passing over him while lying in a state of intoxication on the track, and that every exertion was made by the officials of the train to prevent the catastrophe, and that no blame, whatever, could be attached to them.

The work of organization in the Irish Church is going steadily on. A great deal of unanimity and zeal are manifested. The Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin have issued a joint address to the clergy and laity of the Church, respecting their representation in Provincial Synods which are about to be assembled. It is also affirmed that the Bishops have agreed to convene at an early period, a lay conference. This is the way to get at the mind of the Church, and this is the way to prepare for an efficient organization and a glorious future. We must take counsel together if we would succeed; and doing this the Irish Church will soon manifest signs of life it has never done before.—Church Herald.

We understand that Mr. Thomas McCracken, formerly of the Grey Bank, has been appointed, in the meantime Cashier of the Royal Canadian Bank. Mr. McCracken's large experience as a banker, and his great general popularity, fully qualify him for the position; and we are quite sure the public will recognize his permanent appointment as the position with decided favor. We congratulate the Directors upon the selection they have made.

RUMORED ABDICATION OF NAPOLEON.—A Paris letter, published here, says: The rumour of a possible abdiction from below is not impossible event, as the Emperor is better to a return of his sickness, incapacitating him from business. Many think his son's majority will be proclaimed on his next birthday.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—About two years ago a daughter of Mr. J. B. Stewart, Binbrook, married, and removed with her husband to Michigan. A few days ago her friends received the sad intelligence that she had just died suddenly from the bite of a rattle-snake, received while picking berries. —Exchange.

The discussion about the probable fate of Dr. Livingston has been renewed in England. Captain Burton, the African traveler, believes Livingston is a prisoner at the town of Lucemda, capital of the King of Casembe, and an expedition is talked of to search for him.

A French paper says that the captain of an American vessel, bound for New York, recently fell in with a deserted ship at sea, in the cabin of which was found the body of a man about thirty years of age, his head resting upon a box containing $160,000 in gold.

COMMITTED FOR EMBEZZLING $4,797.—At the Police Court Montreal, Walter T. Hunt charged with embezzling $4,797 the property of the Montreal Printing and Publishing Company, was committed for trial at the ensuing terms of the Court of Queen's Bench.

The Russian government has intimated to the Holy See that it cannot permit the Russian and Polish Catholic bishops to take part in the deliberations of the Ecumenical Council.

THE SACRAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own.—Boston Commercial.

BOTTLE IMPS.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Dunlop's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or gained such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when time'y used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience. AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are one pound of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original air Coloring, and has been growing in for one or twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the last few years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pantheic or Asthma, and restores to vital action the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, back and joints, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains is very part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting they both felt for the first time the sweet sense of those secret ties which the delicate hand of their grandaughter had woven between them with such charming zeal.—They were astonished that they could now prolong with pleasure the evenings which it had been their only desire in former years to abridge as much as possible. The graceful politeness, the vivacity, and talents of Sibylle no doubt aided to a great measure to lighten these hours, but more than once Monsieur de Vergnes, who had always declared to engage in any regular conversation with his wife, was surprised to find himself listening with interest and replying with animation. One evening, apropos of a new opera of which Sibylle was study-ing, the count, he went so far as to engage in a discussion with the Countess upon the distinctive peculiarities of Italian and German music. He became heated in the controversy, was somewhat dogmatic as usual, and slightly irritated that the Countess should presume to have an opinion contrary to his own, and should express it with clearness; then all at once he exclaimed:

'Well done! I surrender! You are right—but, the devil, you are growing learned! I don't recognize you any longer. Who has been teaching you all this?'

'Alas! it is the child!' said the Countess, pointing to Sibylle.

Monsieur de Vergnes arose, and walked about the room. He stopped suddenly in front of Sibylle, took both her hands, and said with an accent of emotion:

'You are then God's own child! You deserve a recompense, and I am sure it will one day come.'

He approached Madame de Vergnes, kissed her forehead with tenderness, and left the room with tearful eyes.

Madame de Vergnes, as soon as he was gone, beckoned to Sibylle. She opened her arms to her, weeping, pressed her for a long time to her heart.

This joy, renewed at other times and in other forms, made Sibylle patiently endure the rather artificial country life of Saint Germain. She left it without regret toward the end of autumn, and returned to Paris, where the crisis of her fate was awaiting her.

(To be continued.)

LITERAL TRUTH.—A gentleman riding came to the edge of a morass which he considered unsafe. Seeing a peasant lad, he asked whether the bog was hard at the bottom.—'Oh, yes, quite hard,' replied the youth.—The gentleman rode on, and the horse began to sink.—'You rascal,' shouted he, 'did you not say it was hard at the bottom?'—'No it is,' rejoined the rogue, 'but you are not half-way yet.'

At a party while a young lady was playing with peculiar brilliancy of touch a bystander bachelor exclaimed, 'I'd give the world for those fingers.' 'Perhaps you might get the whole hand by asking,' said the young lady's observant mamma.

A LOT.—A person advertised in one of the papers for a helpmate for life; he wants one who shall be a companion of his heart, and hand, and lot. 'How large is the lot?' asked the candidate for the situation in another paper.

A couple of fellows who were pretty thoroughly soaked with bad whiskey, got into the gutter. After floundering about for a few minutes, one of them said:—'Jim, let's go to another house—this hotel leaks.'

The first time little Billy S. noticed the thunder, he said, 'Mother, they are scouring up in heaven.' His mother said, 'How do you know, my child?' He replied, 'I hear 'em moving the chairs about.'

BETTER HALF.—'Won't you take half of this poor apple?' said a pretty damsel.—'No, I thank you. I would prefer a better half.'—Eliza blushed, and referred the young man to her papa.

A young lady who was rebuked by her mother for kissing her intended, justified the act by quoting the passage, 'whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.'

A wag, seeing a door nearly off its hinges, in which condition it had been some time, observed that when it had fallen and killed some person it would probably be hung.

DECIMALS ON DECK.—Irish Mate: 'How many is ye down ther-re?' Voice from the Hold: 'Three, sor!' Mate: 'Then half iv ye come up here immediately!'

Who wrote the most—Dickens, Warren of Bulwer? Warren wrote 'Now and then,' Bulwer wrote 'Night and Morning,' and Dickens wrote 'All the Year Round.'

The President recognised the diplomatic weakness for 'finesse,' by appointing Partridge Minister to Venuela, and Cogfey Secretary of Legation to Russia.

Wouldn't you call this the calf of a leg? asked Bob, pointing to one of his neither limbs. 'No,' replied Pat, 'I should say it was the leg of a calf.'

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received any where near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

THE RACCOON AND THE PETTYFOGGER.

The raccoon is a resident of the United States of America; he emigrated from this country soon after the discovery by Columbus, without a cent, and nothing but his shaven tail to get a living with.

He is one of them kind of persons a horse hair is worth more than all the rest of him.

He resides among the heavy timber, and cultivates the cornfields and sedate gardens, mostly for sustenance, and understands his business.

His family consists of a wife and three children, who live with him on the inside of a tree.

He can always be found at home during the day, only few visits calls, but his nights are devoted tew looking after his own affairs.

He dresses in soft fur, and his tail, which is round, has rings on it.

These rings are of the same material that the tail is, and are worn upon all occasions.

During the winter he ties himself up into a hard nut and lays down by his fireside.

When spring comes, he opens, and goes out to see how the chickens have wintered.

His life is as free from labor as a new penny, and if it wasn't for the dogs and the rest of mankind, the raccoon would find what everybody else has lost—a heaven upon earth.

But the dogs tree him and the men skin him, and what there is left of him ain't worth a cuss.

He is not a natural vagabond like the hedgehog and the alligator, but have to be civilized and liv among folks; but he has one vice that the smartest missionary on earth kan't redeem, and that is the art of stealing.

He is second only tew the crow in petit larceny, and will steal what he kan't eat, nor hide.

He will tip over a barrel or apple cart just for the fun of mauling the cuss with his feet, and will pull out the plug out of the molasses, not bekause he love sugar enny better than he duz young duck, but just tew see if the molassis has got a good dumb tew it.

I have studdied animal devilry for 18 years, bekause the more devilry in an animal, the more human he is.

I can't find, by searching the passenger list, that Noah had a coon on board, but I am willing tew bet 10 pounds of mutton sausage that master coon, and his wife commanded, he stealing a ride.

I never has a racKoon tew want enny-thing long that he could steal quick.

Enny body, who has ever looked a coon right square in the face will bet you a dollar that he is a dead beat, or under five hundred dollar bonds not tew go into the business for the next ninety days.

I hav had tame coons by the dozen, they are as easy tew tame as a child, if you take them young enuff, but I hant advise enny-body to cultivate coons, they want en much looking after as a blind mule on a tow path, and there aint enny more profit in them than thar is in a stock dividend on the Erie Railroad.

I never was out ov a pet animal since I kan remember, till now, but I hav gone out ov the trade forever; lately I discovered that it was a good deal like making a whissel out ov a hat's tail, ruining a comfortable tail, and reaping a kursed mean whissel.

Raccoons liv tew be 65 years old, if they miss the society ov men and dogs enuff, but they aint but few ov them die ov old age; the northwestern fur company are the grate undertakers of the coon family.

I feel sorry for coons; for with a trifle more brains, they would make respectable pettyfoggers before a justice ov the peace; but even this would not save them from final perdishun.

Natur don't make enny mistakes, after all; when she wants a raccoon, with rings on his tail, she makes him, and when she wants a pettyfogger, she knows how tew make him, without asking a good coon.

Pettyfoggers, no doubt, have a destiny tew fill, and they may enable a justice of the peace, in a cloudy day, tew know a good deal less ov the law than he otherwise would; still, for all this, if I was obliged tew pray for one, or the other, I think now I should say, Give us a little more coon, and a good deal less pettyfogger

If the raccoon would only give his whole attenshun tew politicks, thar ain't but few ov old beat him; he's at home on the stump, and meuny on us, old coons, kan recklekt how, in 1840, with nothing but a hard cider diet, he swept the country, from the north to the south pole, like a cargo ov epsom-peanits.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs me this his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

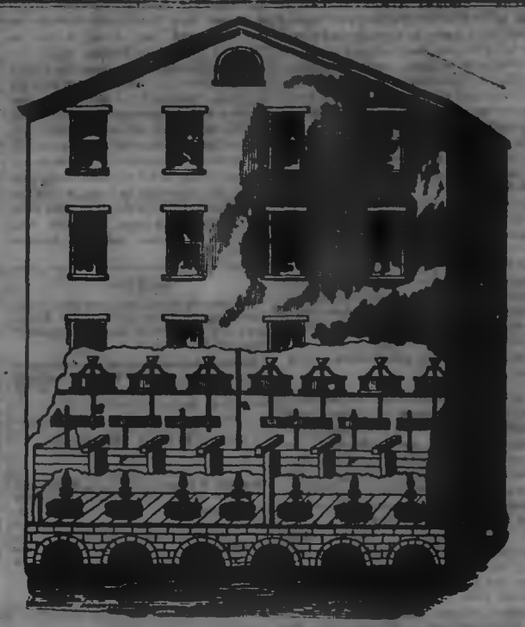
TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Boshonee Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of these long diseases of the throat which improvidence and exposure have united to make so common.

SEXAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy cures now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and proven sure (on the authority of those whose lives (and death they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will feverishly cure colds, co gas, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.



[This cut represents our G. A. Cobb's Mill at Frisco, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawing, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

(Signed,) JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw Mills, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

TO MESSRS. CHAMBERLAIN & SELLS, Cheese P.O County of Leeds, Ontario, Canada.

YARKE, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and used lots of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, nor known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEESE, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years: she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that is her case. It has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr Bell

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, and was true pay before so universally prized as it has been since Dr. Ayer's Cathartic Pills. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it surpasses all they have ever known before, and that it cures many complaints and diseases that others cannot even relieve. Those who have used it in their families know that it protects them against many dangerous disorders, and all know that when it does cause a draught or two, it never fails through any fault of its own to compel the system to operate kindly. We have thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such are only a few of the many which might be obtained, and which are probably known, to some extent, to every one in your neighborhood. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by any one. As a sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and rouse it from its impurities, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dysentery, Headache and Pain in the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Flatulency, Waterbrash, Eruptions of the Skin, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Chest, Limbs, and Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, and all Diseases that require an aperient or purifying medicine.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Jaundice, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, Indigestion, Costiveness or Constipation, Flatulency, Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Kidneys and Loins, they should be persevered in, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Suppressed Secretions they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression from Colds, Exposure should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, this one or two Pills to promote digestion lightens and relieves the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels miserably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this extraordinary remedy enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Invincible cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the accumulation until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or power.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, like unseen and unbidden guests of the organism, and even in its nourishment, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly generated in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it opens its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the universal use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and a powerful assistant to nature, in working a permanent cure, by the use of this AYER'S SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions of visible forms of scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the human female and nervous system.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine, but long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of corruption matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Incipient Consumption, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Nervous, and troubled with Horrors Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the above symptoms of Weakness, will find a prompt relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Poetry.

THE TWO FORTUNES.

BY ALICE GAREY.

"Be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh; for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty: and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags."
Prov xxiii. 20, 21.

I'll tell you two fortunes, my little lad,
For you to accept or refuse;
The one of them good, the other one bad;
Now hear them, and say which you choose.

I see by my gift within reach of your hand,
A fortune right fair to behold—
Acres with a hundred good acres of land,
With harvest field yellow as gold.

I see a great orchard, the fruit is hanging down
With apples of russet and red;
I see droves of cattle, some white and some brown,
But all of them sleek and well fed.

I see doves and swallows about the barn doors,
See the fanning mill whirling so fast,
See men that are threshing the wheat on the floors;
And now the bright picture is past.

And I see, rising dimmily up in the place
Of the beautiful house and the land,
A man with a fire red nose on his face
And a little brown jug in his hand!

Oh! if you beheld him my lad you would wish
That he were less wretched to see;
For his boot-toes, they gape like the mouth of a fish,
And his trousers are out at the knees

In walking he staggers now this way, now that,
And his eyes they stand out like a bug's
He wears an old coat and a battered in hat,
And I think that the fault is the jug's!

For our text says the drunkard shall come to be poor,
And dressiness clothes men with rags;
And he doesn't look much like a man, I am sure,
Who has honest hard cash in his bags.

Now will you choose? to be thrifty and sane,
And to be right side up with your dish;
Or to go with your eyes like the eyes of a hag,
And your shoes like the mouth of a fish!

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

BY OCTAVE FEUILLET.

PART SECOND.

CHAPTER III.

PARIS.

Mademoiselle de Ferias was so much absorbed in her part of Dorcasin Providence" as to lose sight of the delicate personal question which it was the object of her residence at Paris to resolve, with as much advantage to herself as possible. On the contrary, the question occupied her mind extremely, and for various good reasons. In the first place, in the Hotel de Vergnes she was forced to follow a mode of life little in accordance with her tastes, and in intercourse with the liberty of her affections. She saw in marriage an era of relative independence, when she could dispose of her time more to her liking, and could divide it at intervals between Paris and Ferias. Marriage appeared to this serious and disciplined mind as one of the highest laws of moral life, which at the proper time must be obeyed, under penalty of falling without the pale of truth and order. Finally, and above all, the young girl felt in the recesses of her heart all the tender weaknesses of a woman. Neither the distractions of Paris nor the intellectual pleasures she enjoyed could satisfy all the aspirations of "the poor one" as she used to call it, which, under the appearance of calmness its strength enabled it to assume, was yet ardent, thoroughly human, and highly impassioned. She imagined to herself periods of deep melancholy, and all her courage was scarcely able to repress their encroaching chasm. The source of those mysterious tears she had long ago shed in the solitary fountain of Ferias had again opened. Like all quick imaginations of her age, she had formed for herself an image of heroic type, a form which she opposed, with tones of tenderness the flame that burned in her bosom. In her soul she had conceived of a being worthy of these willing sacrifices, and her hand reached afar, her heart, her breath, her life, all leapt toward this sweet ideal.

This unnamed love of woman's youth almost always sublime, has almost always also, a stupid incarnation. The first man upon whom their mothers allow them to look with interest is clothed at once with the utmost locality, in all the splendor of their dreams; hardly is the altar of sacrifice pointed out to their vows by a trusted hand, when their hearts, already prepared, fly blindly to it, settle upon it, and burst into a flame. Those to whom more freedom of choice is left are hardly more discerning or more fortunate. The culmination of their heart romances in the sport of chance, and the hand of their ordinary partner is the waltz, whatever he may be, as effectually enveloped by it with a halo of celestial glory.

Sibylle united to the ardor of youth a quick discernment and a steadiness of judgment which preserved her from the common error that is to be so much bitter disenchantment; but her rare qualities of mind, while they saved her from the danger, seemed to arm her with a clear insight and an almost excessive distrust. She felt, however, that this choice, upon which the happiness and the dignity of her whole life depended, was left exclusively to her own guidance. Monsieur and Madame de Vergnes were indeed engaged in marrying her in this previous search; but their opinion seemed to be based upon such timid and defective motives, that she had mentally resolved to depend entirely upon her own judgment in the first instance, with the privilege of appeal to Mme O'Neil. The Count de Vergnes, who loved much determination in parading before his granddaughter what he called the Noble Sentiments, was the first to cover with ridicule every distinction of this interesting region, and would even reproach Mademoiselle de Ferias for being so difficult to please, and would laugh at the inconsistent pretensions he attributed to her.

'Do you know what you want, my dear?' he said to her. 'You want a gentleman who shall be handsome, rich, noble, a painter, a man of ton, a good horseman, witty, and poor. You won't find him. It is a variety that don't exist.'

'No, indeed' said Sibylle, 'I don't ask for so much. I only want a man whom I can love, that is all.'

'Ta! ta! ta!' replied the Count, 'what a depraved little person you are! What does all that mean? Look back to the creation, my child, look at the creation, observe the modes of simple-hearted nature.

'Why, grandfather?'

'Look at Eve. Do you suppose she made so much trouble? No! not at all! Adam was presented to her, a man, simply the first comer, and she said at once: "He" do!'

Arguments of this sort, which were usual with the Count de Vergnes, and exhausted him exceedingly, had little effect upon the sentiments and the ideas of Mademoiselle de Ferias. The person and the example of her grandfather, on the contrary, rather suggested to her reflections, which added to her perplexities. Moreover, she had not failed to perceive that the confused relations of her grandparents were by no means exceptional, and that they were, in different degrees, regularly established in the custom of polite society. Sibylle's reason revolted and her heart shed within her at the thought of contributing one of those unions whose inevitable consequence seemed to be, at the end of a longer or shorter period, a reciprocal contempt, an amiable separation, and a moral divorce.

In obedience to a characteristic trait of her superior intelligence, Sibylle had a taste for general ideas. She did not refrain in this instance from generalizing her observations, perhaps unreasonably, and she had sought for the singularity of these unedifying marriages a general cause. She thought she had discovered it. Various social habits which she had noticed in the course of her fresh contact with life, some words which had struck her in the rudimentary plan of Madame de Vergnes, and above all, the dear recollections of Ferias, had aided her little by little to construct a theory which was not without some show of reason.

This opinion, strengthened by the sanction of Miss O'Neil, took strong hold of the mind of Mademoiselle de Ferias, and was destined to have a powerful influence over her future. In order to express it with some precision, we shall be obliged to employ language that Sibylle could not have used, but which will render with exactness the substance of her thought.

The union of the Marquis and Marchioness of Ferias, in its close intimacy, full at the same time of gravity and sweetness, and independence complete and perfect, rather than limited, by the bond of time, had impressed upon Sibylle's imagination a sort of ideal type of Christian marriage. If the greater part of the unions which she now every day presented so different a character, was it not because they lacked the only bond which is indissoluble—the bond of religion? She felt in some degree the breath of that materialism which runs in the veins of the present age and with which Parisian society, the model of all French society, seems particularly infected. She saw the institution of matrimony remaining like the dead letter of a law after its spirit has become extinct, people married merely for the sake of conforming to custom and usage, or to have the benefit of a legitimate position: they followed the routine, but without conviction—they married a name, a dowry, a place, sometimes a pair of fine shoulders. Beside so purely human could have no permanence, and these unions were naturally dissolved by the simple attainment of the object which had determined them.

'Instead of being your wife,' Madame de Vergnes had said to her husband, 'I have only been the plaything of a day!'

Sibylle had understood this expression, had remembered it, and thought upon it.—She did not mean for her heart to be the plaything of her husband; she wished to be his beloved and faithful companion in this world and, she hoped, in the next.—Any lesser love would have desolated her heart and revolted her pride. She said to herself that marriage, to bear its perfect fruit, must have its roots not only in the open heart, to which it unites, but also in that religion which had instituted and consecrated it.

A religious sentiment, a common faith, a fraternity of elevated belief and eternal hopes, could alone give to the feeble loves of this world something of the strength and permanence of the love divine.

Such were, in brief, the thoughts of Sibylle; and as she had learned to attentively conform her conduct to what she believed was just and true, she had determined never to marry any man who did not share with conviction, her religious faith. This step, perhaps rash in itself, had the disadvantage of not being very practical, and the poor child soon perceived it.

Although it has been granted to our time to respect, in some illustrious names, the alliance of the highest faculties of the mind with the most fervent religious convictions are so rare as they are eminent and that an extreme emancipation of thought, a spirit of criticism, of doubt, of negation, a disturbance of all moral bases, are the striking characteristics of the age.

Even in the society which surrounded Mademoiselle de Ferias, these characteristics did not escape her notice, and it was plainly to be seen that for the great majority conscientiousness, good breeding, and etiquette were the only motives to a regular exercise of religious duties. In view of this skeptical society, heedlessly following usages, modes, and forms of duty, the original meaning of which seemed to be quite lost sight of, Sibylle was struck with deep astonishment.

'These people,' said she to Miss O'Neil 'do not seem to believe in any thing they do; they seem to move along through life as if in obedience to an impulse of which they have quite forgotten the origin. It makes me think of those mechanical figures which still chime and perform their course in the towers where the stars themselves have for ages been extinguished.'

Nevertheless, she found, within the circle in which she habitually moved, some exemplars of sincere piety, of serious faith, and of admirable Christian virtue; but this requisite of a religious faith, equal to her own although in her eyes the most essential, was not the only one she would be willing to unite her destiny. There resulted from her own supremely other requirements, not so precisely fixed, but none the less imperious and exclusive.

In these conditions and requirements she believed the grossest, and she really did evince, a very liberal spirit, for she showed herself quite indifferent to the advantages of her fortune, and even to those of birth though this last consideration was more painful to her; but she wished her husband to be her equal in education, in taste, and in intelligence. She even wished, though unconsciously, that he should be her superior, and she felt that she could love him only on this condition. But two limitations, which seemed to her so simple, because the great-hearted her own high personal value, contracted in no slight degree the difficulties of the choice she prepared. She could not help perceiving that the greater part of the young men whose habits of piety were established had received under the maternal rule that over-nice and dainty education the reaction from which the Baron of Val Chenaye had taught her to fear. Among those whose youth had been tempered in the quick current of change, the greater part were tainted with a vulgar libertinism.

The best of them seemed puerile. The remarkable nature of her character and of her mind would have inclined her toward those who had passed beyond the limbo of youth; but among this class, which, moreover, had but few representatives in the fashionable world, she perceived that the most serious faces were but masks for vanity and emptiness, and if chance threw in her way any individuals really distinguished for their merits or their talents, they were at once described to her as very free in their thoughts, and often as less so in their lives.

So Sibylle, after having continued her discreet observations during the first half of the winter following the retirement of Saint Germain, began to be discouraged, and to believe, as her grandfather had told her, that she was seeking a variety that did not exist. Perhaps she was right; but she committed an error in the conclusions that her heart would always be controlled by her judgment. A heart like hers does not surrender to reason and argument, however convincing and demonstrative. In such a heart storms arise when they will, and not when they have been decided upon. The deliberations of a correct judgment, and the determination of a noble soul, may doubtless serve to subdue these tempests, but never to excite or to prevent them.

Among the drawing-rooms in which Mademoiselle de Ferias had been introduced under the protection of her grandmother, there was one toward which she felt herself attracted by a secret charm.—It was that of the dowager Duchess de Sauves, who occupied with the Duke de Sauves, her son, and the young duchess, her daughter-in-law, one of the rich hotels of the Faubourg d'Honore.

This house, to which the old duchess admitted, with one curious exception, of which we shall shortly speak, a social group severely limited by her extravagant predilections in matters of race and of opinion, did not seem to present any special resource or interest for the ennui of Sibylle. Nevertheless, she never set foot in it without feeling a confused and agreeable emotion, of which she hardly dared to acknowledge the cause, so absurdly unreasonable it seemed. This strange feeling was connected with one of the earliest recollections of her life, and one that maintained over her imagination a remarkable influence—her fugitive interview in the park of Ferias with a stranger, named Raoul, whose features, language, and person, vague by mingled with the fairy legends of her childhood, had remained in her thought, imbued with a delicious poesy. This name of Raoul was dear and almost sacred to her. The reader will, perhaps, remember with what involuntary trouble she had heard it on the recital of the first love of Clotilde; it was this name, often repeated in the halls of the Hotel de Sauves that filled them for Sibylle with such mysterious attraction.

She rejected, indeed, as unreasonable the idea that the Raoul whose name she heard as often at the house of Madame de Sauves could have any identity with the Prince Otterchant of the park of Ferias; but she could not do this, at least, that he was the same Raoul whose rather fictitious passion and despairing departure for Paris Clotilde had recounted. This was a discovery which Sibylle had made for herself, for her former friend, Clotilde, with whom her relations at Paris were far from intimate, had some reasons of her own for not contributing to it; but Sibylle had readily recognized in the young Duchess de Sauves, née Blanche de Guy-Ferrand, that constant friend whom Clotilde so little loved, and who had figured in her romance as the cousin of her hero. From the point of departure it was easy to conjecture that a certain Count de Chalys, whom the young duchess called "My cousin Raoul," and who had so lately returned from Persia a few months before, must bear a striking resemblance to the happy man who had once obtained the unanimous suffrages of a whole boarding-school of young ladies. Sibylle said to herself that the curiosity and interest which this personage inspired in her for various reasons, would, in all likelihood, vanish as soon as she could see him; but he had no taste for society, and hitherto she had not been fortunate enough to meet him; even at the house of Madame de Sauves, where she knew he often visited.

This change, in the life of Paris by no means extraordinary, nevertheless disturbed Mademoiselle de Ferias. She seemed to feel that between herself and Monsieur de Chalys it was not quite natural, and in her secret impatience she sometimes imagined that invisible hands (those of enchanters, probably) were too constantly laboring to a parade them, one from the other.

She collected, all the more eagerly, from the current of conversation all details relative to the unmade cousin. From these she gathered that Monsieur de Chalys was a man of exemplary conduct, from and much sought after in society—perhaps because he avoided it. But the reserve imposed upon young girls, and the particular timidity which this delicate subject caused in her, prevented Sibylle from satisfying her curiosity by any direct inquiries. In spite of the contemptuous affection which the old Duchess de Sauves manifested for her, she felt herself blushing at the mere thought of interrogating her in relation to the Court Raoul. She would more willingly have tried her fortune with the young duchess, toward whom she felt herself drawn by a lively feeling of sympathy; but this young woman maintained toward Sibylle a singular attitude which in course encouraged her to confidence. She generally evinced toward her a coldness and constraint not very far from aversion, although from time to time, by a contrast which Sibylle could not understand, she appeared to be drawn toward her by the force of some secret and powerful impulse. Even when she seemed to treat her as an utter stranger, the capricious duchess would sometimes fix upon her a stealthy look so profoundly intense, curious and passionate, that Mademoiselle de Ferias was utterly unable to comprehend it.

We proceed to explain to the reader the mysterious conduct of this young woman in introducing to him some new acquaintances.

IV.

THE DUCHESS BLANCHE.

Blanche de Guy-Ferrand, Duchess de Sauves-Blanchefort, known as the Duchess Blanche, was a little person, not handsome, scarcely pretty, but charming. She was quite frail and delicate, with hair of an ashy blonde, and eyes of a greyish blue, whose light lashes were almost invisible. Her rather infantile features seemed to have been modelled by the hand of an over-delicate artist. But what gave her rank among the noted women of Paris was the exquisite art with which she dressed. In fact, her clothes, the arrangement of her hair and her adornments were all combined with such perfect harmony by her own hands, that on seeing her in an evening toilette it was impossible not to imagine she had just burst into bloom in some moonlit fairy garden. She had married five years before the duke Oswald Louis de Vital de Sauves, older than herself by more than twenty years but still a very handsome and very amiable man. The Duke indeed was approaching his fortieth year, and no more thought of marrying than of turning Turk, when he was subjected to a series of desperate assaults on the part of his mother, before which, after no honorable resistance, he was obliged to capitulate, but not without conditions.

'My good mother,' said he to her on this occasion, with that mixture of good humor, of carelessness, of secret sadness which characterized him, 'you know very well, and I know too, that your fears are arguments to which I shall yield sooner or later. The sooner then, the better; but, without reproach be it said, you really ought to admit some consolatory clauses in the articles of capitulation, and I insist on them. I have no objection to make to your political sentiments, which I share, although you sometimes allow yourself to be led by them into passion and prejudice, but the direction you have given to my life I have followed with filial obedience, and it has only left for my satisfaction in this world some tastes and some habits of which it would have been really cruel to deprive me, and which, unfortunately, can with difficulty be reconciled with marriage. Still again, I make no reproaches; you believed you were doing your duty, and perhaps you were right. But the circumstances are grave, and a few words, frankly spoken, will be necessary, whether in the personal happiness of the young duchess, or in the consideration, security, and honor of the aforesaid Duke of Sauves-Blanchefort and other places.'

The marriage had been arranged upon the faith of this treaty. Mademoiselle de Guy Ferrand had permitted herself to be made a Duchess with the easy and rather melancholy carelessness which seemed to be a trait of her character. As a young girl, she had not been noticed; but once in possession of her bridal wardrobe, she had drawn from it a whole arsenal of weapons, and with these had won at once a place among the stars. Her miniature grace made with the ample and rather lordly beauty of her husband a striking contrast, at which he had been the first to smile.

'Well, my son,' said the old duchess, one day, in allusion to happy matrimonial marriage had brought to her daughter-in-how it seems to me you haven't much cause for complaint. In the fairy story, diamonds are changed into filberts, but here on the contrary, the filberts have been changed into diamonds.'

'Exactly! my good mother,' replied the duke in the gallic language, which he affected, and which he pronounced with a rich accent. 'Exactly. Only my wife is not a woman, but a flower—a perfume, not a substance!'

A Brutus in Humble Life.

The New York Evening Post yesterday says:—Albert G. Drecker is the watchman of the Passaic River drawbridge on the New York and Newark Railroad, whose business it is to see that the draw is closed upon the approach of the trains. On Friday afternoon last just before a passenger train was to pass the draw bridge the draw was open and Mr. Drecker began to close it. The train was not yet in sight at the moment, but the watchman knew it was coming and that no time should be lost in putting the bridge in its proper position. While engaged in closing the draw, a little son of Mr. Drecker, 10 years old, fell from the bridge into the deep water below. To save the child's life would be an easy matter, but Mr. Drecker now saw the train thundering along the coast, and knew that rescue of his boy would involve the destruction of the train. What was he to do?

We may well suppose it was a moment of supreme agony. His child was drowning before his eyes, its life could only be purchased at the loss of many other lives that were in his hands. God mercifully spare us from the bitter anguish of such a trial as was forced upon Drecker! He stood by his duty, the bridge was closed, and the train passed safely over it—but the boy was drowned. Little did any passenger in that train dream at what a fearful struggle between a sense of duty and the natural promptings of the human heart the safe passage of bridge had been secured.

Such is the story of Albert G. Drecker. Historians and poets have told us.

'How well Horatius kept the bridge
In the brave days of old,'

but the Jersey railroad servant 'kept the bridge' at a costlier sacrifice than the Roman Captain. And what remain? Drecker is a poor man; his position in life is an humble one, and, while his loss is irreparable, his noble conduct may be rewarded. The railway company owes him a heavy debt; the passengers on that Friday afternoon train should deem it a privilege to contribute to raise a mean nest to the child to fitly commemorate the deed, and the Press through the land should let his name be known everywhere.

A son of Mr. E. Budge, Port Hope, got hold of his father's revolver lately and commenced to pick out the contents of the chambers.—While doing so the pistol went off, and the ball passed through his hand into his body. The little fellow ran to his father and said 'I am burnt,' pointing to his stomach, and on the father making an examination, found that the ball had passed clean through the hand entering the stomach and out through the back.

A few days ago a young man named Dykes, about 18 years of age, died very suddenly in the township of Aldborough. Being at the barn, he shelled out a bowl of wheat, and blew the chaff away. He immediately after complained of dizziness in his head sat down, and was dead in a few seconds.

Mr. McDougall, delivered his farewell address to his constituents at Almonte on Saturday last, previous to his departure for the North West Territory, of which he is appointed Governor.

Prince Arthur was at the opening of the Provincial Exhibition London. There was a very enthusiastic reception intended to him.

The Legislature of Ontario has been called to meet on the 3rd. of November, for the dispatch of business.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

---

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

SETH'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives (and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

FRANCIS HINCKS.

It is now asserted that this celebrated individual has accepted office under the corruption government of J. A. McDonald, as Finance Minister, and that he will seek election in some Upper Canada constituency. It certainly is a down come from being Governor of Barbadoes &c. to become again a ranting politician—fighting for political support, and outbidding his opponents in buying up voters. Mr. Hincks has now $3,333 a year, (£666 sterling) from the Imperial government, as a pension, he can afford to spend some of it to obtain a seat in the Dominion Parliament. It is believed that he will seek election as a liberal Reformer. But this is only another name now-a-days for a Tory. Mr. Hincks in 1854 framed his combination to retain power, so that he introduced John A. McDonald into notice. Since that period he has retained power, using all the means at his command for that purpose. Money, offices, promises, threats, have all in turn been used, and used effectually, to corrupt the body politic so that now, every one whom J. A. can approach, is held as doubtful—Thus through the intrigues of Mr. Hincks, nearly 15 years ago, the country has been cursed by a set of designing leaders, who care nothing for honor, political honesty, or straightforwardness: office and emolument being the objects ever since.

Reformers must know, that such a man coming to them now, is only a wolf in sheep's clothing. He is shrewd enough to know that Coalition in Ontario, is on its last legs, to use a common phrase, and that in few constituencies in this province can he hope to be elected as a Tory. He, therefore, puts on the garb of Reform, under the wing of John A's Reform, and goes up and down the land, begging honor from his former enemies, and trying to deceive his former friends. If Mr. Hincks wishes to do something for the Dominion, let him come nobly out and declare that he will form no combinations or Coalitions with men who require to go a begging for some one to raise their sinking fortunes. Let him plainly tell John A. & Cartier, that he is a Reformer, in principle, and can have nothing to do with binding the chains on the country any longer.—Let him form alliances with Reformers, and then we will know what he is. and be able to decide whether the people of Ontario can support him, or place confidence in him.—Fourteen years of misrule of the vilest sort, by which our debt has been trebbled, our taxes increased at an alarming rate, our country brought to the verge of ruin more than once; our politicians bought and sold like sheep; the whole government become venal; the electors demoralized almost; is enough to cause the country to rise in their might and drive from every office of trust and power, men who have shown themselves incapable in every undertaking, from the building of a Railroad, down to auditing the smallest accounts, or appointing to the pettiest office. Is it believed Mr. Hincks will instil any new blood in the body politic? Not a bit of it. The only wise course for an honest man to pursue is to steer clear of the diseased body, or he will also in turn succumb to the malaria that pervades every office and department at the Capital. There are now to all intents and purposes, three offices vacant. Mr. Howland's place, Mr. McDougall's and that of Mr. Rose. If they cannot purchase weak Reformers, the ship will soon run adrift, and wiser heads and more willing hands, will then have to be called in. Only enemies to the Dominion will take office in the Coalition.

The Toronto Telegraph says in reference to Mr. Hincks:—"Where have Sir John's wits gone wandering to? Sir Francis, playing at "King" so long as he has done, will not be able to subordinate himself to John Macdonald. What then? Why, this; that either Sir John Macdonald or Sir Francis Hincks must go to the wall. Sir John finds it hard enough to manage Mr. Howe alone, will he find it easier work when he has got five or six concentrated essences of Howe in the person of Sir F. Hincks. Under peculiar social circumstances Sir Francis accepted Sir John's embrace." What do these peculiar social circumstances mean? Does the Telegraph intimate that John A. was drunk when he selected Hincks to become finance minister? Nothing more or less, when Sir John A's wits were wandering! What a leader? So it is.

The temperance men of Northumberland and Durham intend trying for the Dunkin Law for the Counties, we wish they may succeed in passing the Law and enforcing it.

The Quebec Branch of the Bank of Montreal, has lost $130,000 by the speculation of the manager, Mr. Harris. He has crossed the lines quietly.

Rinfrestein returned to Ottawa to take his trial, but the case has been over. Bail has been granted. He will in all probability, get off free.

MORE GAS.

Messrs. Robert Romaine, John Carnegie, the younger, Stephen Balmer, of the Town of Peterborough, and Jas. Perry, of the city of Ottawa, it will be seen by the minutes of the last meeting of town council, have petitioned for and obtained a By law creating them into a Gas Company, to be known as the Town of Peterborough Gas Company. Well this is all right. Any number of men may form themselves into a company for any legal purpose they please, and may spend their money as they think fit; nor should any one interfere with them. But when Messrs. Robert Romaine, John Carnegie, the younger Stephen Balmer, and Jas. Perry, come to the council and ask that honorable body to pay them Five Hundred dollars a year, for five years, for gas, with out telling the people or letting them know anything about it until it is burst upon the council. Then we can say it is too good a thing; it concerns the people too much to be allowed to pass through unheard of. They prepared a By-law, bring it to the council all cut and dried, get it introduced, and but for the Mayor would have got it passed, although to do so is illegal, and would render the council liable to indictment for such an illegal act. The following is the famous clause:—

That the Town Council of the said Town of Peterboro doth hereby agree and bind themselves, so soon as the Gas Works hereby authorized are in operation, to enter into a contract with the aforesaid Gas Company for a period of five years, for the supply of Gas, for not less than twenty-five street lamps, paying therefore quarterly, at the rate of twenty dollars per lamp per year.—and which contract in all other respects, conditions and details shall be similar to that of the Town of Port Hope, with the Port Hope Gas Company.

Provided that it shall not be lawful for the Council of the Town of Peterboro, to grant similar powers to any other Company for the space of ten years from the date hereof.

Fortunately this Gas was detected and in consequence the By-law amended so as to be useless until there shall be more light on the subject.

Are the rate payers satisfied that Messrs. Romaine, Carnegie, & Co., shall put their hands into the public Treasury and take therefrom $2,500? If they are, then it is all right, but it is too much of a good thing to keep the matter in a nut shell until at a small meeting of the Council a vote sufficient to carry this little item through is obtained. Already the Town is heavily taxed for improvements. It is also proposed to give a bonus of $25,000 to the Wooden Railway. And just at the heels in comes the Gas magnates for $2,500. They do not even condescend to tell the public how much of that staple commodity they will give for $2,500. They say 25 street lamps, but nothing about the light, a lamp post without light will be a valuable thing to the Town.

These posts too will be placed in the centre of the Town to suit the business people, but the Ratepayers at the extreme borders will have to pay for them, light or no light—that was the intention of the By-law.—Now we all know that the business part of the Town is well enough lighted generally. It is when the Ratepayer gets near the outskirts of the Town that he needs light, but not a word is said about giving it there. By all means let a Gas Company be formed, newspaper men require Gas, and let any citizen that has money to spare, take stock in it, if he wishes, and let our people get Gas into their shops and dwellings if they desire it, but why tax the poor man who will never use Gas to pay for it, for the rich? Let the Gas Company get up stumbhooks, as they did for the Coal Oil Company, let them elect directors, especially some of the Coal Oil Company directors; two of them are in the Gas Company already, and let them spend the money placed at their disposal, but let not the poor man that has not the means to pay his necessary tax, be taxed to pay for Gas, for those who would gas the public on the sly, out of $2,500 if they could.

OBITUARY.

It becomes our painful duty in this issue, to chronicle the decease of George Young, Esq., of North Monaghan, after a somewhat painful illness of nearly three months. Mr. Young was a native of Roxboroughshire, Scotland. He came to this country in the year 1834, when he purchased the farm in North Monaghan on which he resided till his decease. He was a man of great energy and industry, as was evident from the manner in which he discharged all the duties which he was called to perform.

He settled in Monaghan when it was a wilderness; saw it progress step by step, until it is now one of the finest Townships in the Province. He was foremost in discussing all questions that concerned the interests of the people, and did not hesitate to advocate what he believed to be right, although others might hold opposite views on the same questions.

Because of his public spirit and the respect in which he was held in the Municipality, he was elected a member of the Township Council in 1850 and 1851, and again in 1861, and was Township Treasurer during 1863 and 1864. In 1867 he was elected Reeve, which office he held till his decease, and in which he acted in a straightforward and cautious manner, ever evincing a desire to do what was right for the county, but looking for justice for his own municipality, and was very much respected by all the members of the County Council.

During the third day of the last session of the County Council Mr. Young felt so unwell as to almost unfit him for business. He was unable to return next day, his Physician had to be called in, and from this attack he never rallied, although everything that could be done for him was done. Mr. Young was also a friend to common school education, and did much to afford every one in his Township the opportunity of obtaining it. He may have had ideas different from some others on this question, but there can be no doubt but that he was very conscientious in everything he did. In church matters he was always ready with both advice and money. In the family he was warmly affectionate, and in the circle of his acquaintance he was very much respected. His remains were accompanied to their last resting place on Tuesday, by a very large funeral cortege. He leaves an extensive circle of family relations to mourn their bereavement.

ACCIDENT.—We learn that on Tuesday morning, while attending a thrashing machine, at Mr. Berne, 1st con. of Emily, Mr. Robert Little had his foot caught in the machine and severely injured. The ankle was dislocated, and other injuries received in the foot and leg, but it was hoped that the foot can be saved.

DINNER TO D. G. HATTON, ESQ.

An intimation last week, the friends of Mr. Hatton invited him to a banquet in the Union House, on Thursday evening. About fifty gentlemen sat down to the repast which was in the best style of Mr. Turver. The Mayor presided, and near him were the guest of the evening, Mr. Carnegie, P. M. Grover, Esq., and Mr. Fairbairn. Mr. Perry occupied the vice chair; on his right A. Smith, Esq., of the Bank of Toronto, and the left A. W. Kemp, Esq.

Before proceeding to discuss the good things provided, the Mayor read the following addresses of the citizens to Mr. Hatton. It was signed by Judge Dennistoun, and 140 others of the leading lawyers, merchants and citizens of the town:—

ADDRESS.

D. G. HATTON, ESQ.,

DEAR SIR,—We, the undersigned, having heard with regret that you are about to remove from Peterboro, at least for a time, and take up your residence in another country, cannot permit you to leave without testifying to you the regard and esteem with which you are held in Peterboro.

Intimately acquainted as most of us have been with you almost from your boyhood, the record of your life is well known to us. The industry which you have always manifested in your business and professional career, the determination to succeed which you have shown, and the success which has crowned your endeavors, have been highly gratifying to your friends. And in your social relations you have made for yourself friendships which, we trust, absence cannot wholly obliterate or disturb. Your activity also in all matters pertaining to the prosperity and good of our Town has long been felt and duly appreciated, and while we hope the change you are about to make may redound to the advancement of your own aims, we cannot but regret that so useful and active a member of our community should be about to leave us.

We have now only further to say, that on entering on your new sphere you have our best wishes. We have no doubt of your success, and we sincerely trust that a kind Providence will sustain you and yours, and open up a wide field of usefulness and prosperity even greater than what has been your lot in Peterboro.

Mr. Hatton then read the following

REPLY.

MR. MAYOR AND GENTLEMEN:

The double honour which you have this evening done me, in inviting me to be your guest at this excellent banquet, and in presenting me with this address, makes it wholly impossible for me to return adequate thanks in reply. The occasion, on which I have the opportunity of meeting socially so many gentlemen whom I have long known, was altogether unanticipated by me, and I may say it is therefore the more gratifying. In the address you have just read, Mr. Mayor, the language is so commendatory and strong that I must regard it more as the expression of your generous goodness than a fair estimate of my own worth and capability. But it is so pleasant to be well spoken of that I accept and shall treasure the document you have handed me as a very precious memento of my associations in Peterboro'.

It is not without considerable pain that the ties of so many years' growth are so suddenly broken. The memories of the past, this address, and your generous hospitality to-night are surely enough to assure me that friendships long formed, will not, as you say, be obliterated by mere absence. I can only sincerely thank you, Mr. Mayor, and gentlemen, on behalf of my wife and children, as well as myself, for the kind words contained in the address you have presented to me; and let me say that in our new residence we shall always look upon Peterboro' as "home," and will ever take a deep interest in its welfare and prosperity.

D. G. HATTON.

After attending to the temporal wants, the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given by the Mayor, and responded to right heartily by all present.

The Mayor then gave the toast of the evening, "Our Guest." In a very few prefatory remarks he referred to Mr. Hatton being about to leave Peterboro, at least for a while. He very happily remarked that he felt certain all would cordially unite in doing honor to one who had lived so long among them, and who by his industry and perseverance, together with straight forwardness and affability, had made so many friends for himself, as he knew well that all could heartily shake hands with him and wish him God speed in his new sphere of life, whither the duties of hour were calling him. The toast was received amid continued applause.

Mr. Hatton feeling the position in which he was, thanked them sincerely for the manner in which his name had been received by all, and hoped that it would not be thought necessary for him to make a speech a speech. He could only reiterate what he had said, and thank them for the great kindness manifested in the manner they had drank the toast.

The Parliament of the Dominion of Canada was then given, Messrs. Perry and Grover both responding in their usual style.

To the Legislature of Ontario, Mr. Carnegie responded.

To the Mayor and corporation of the town, Mayor Scott returned thanks, and also Messrs Chamberlin and Geo. Elliott.

Mr. Hatton gave the New Dominion, in doing which he said that the toast needed no speech; Canadians loved Canada, and prayed for its prosperity, and wished for its progress and continuance as a colony of Great Britain. He hoped it would continue so until he should return, and that it would remain so until he should be buried under its soil. He believed that Canada would remain connected with England, and would prosper if Canadians did their duty. Some were mean enough to advocate independence, but he believed that British connection was Canada's only safety, and he knew that Canadians were all loyal to Britain.

Mr. Fairbairn responded to this toast in a very felicitous manner. He Mr. F. felt in doing so that he had not the history of a thousand years to fall back upon, but still there was enough. Our commerce, our agriculture, and our manufactures were as progressive as that of any other country, and our people as happy. The past he remarked had been a struggle with difficulties in opening up the country, but all these difficulties had been nobly overcome. There was nothing to fear in the present, and nothing to fear in the future. In our Dominion we have all the elements necessary for a first class empire. The only cause for fear is separation from Great Britain, but he hoped the day was far distant when that would take place. We had, it is true, been protected and nurtured with a father's hand, and he believed that protection was still ready to be extended to us. If, however, that connection must be severed he believed the next best thing was independence. (Applause).

Mr. Carnegie proposed the agricultural, manufacturing, and commercial interests of Canada. To which Mr. Grover responded.

To the legal profession, W. H. Moore responded.

The Press and the Ladies' concluded the programme. The evening was one of the pleasantest spent in Peterboro in a long time, and the whole certainly will bear testimony to the respect in which the guest was held by many friends.

Messrs. Danelson, Beall, and Mitchell enlivened the evening by several songs.

PRESENTATION.

A meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 99 was held in their Lodge-room, Simcoe Street, Peterboro, on Saturday evening Sept. 18th, for the purpose of holding "good-bye" to Bro. D. G. Hatton, County Master, who is about leaving Canada for a few years residence in Baltimore, Maryland.

A number of the members of the Lodge, with a few friends specially invited, having assembled at the hour appointed, Bro. Geo. Johnston, Worshipful Master, took the chair, and explained the purport of the meeting. He said:—that the members of his Lodge on hearing that Bro. Hatton was about leaving Peterboro, for some years, and wishing to show their estimation of him in some more tangible form than mere words, had called upon him as Master of the Lodge, to go round among the Brethren, and find out what could be done in the matter; he and Bro. Hopkins had done so, and they were called together to-night to present Bro. Hatton with the result, in the shape of a short address and a gold watch and chain; he felt great pleasure in stating, that not only every member of his Lodge had contributed cheerfully but some of the former members who are not now in connection, on finding out what they intended doing insisted on contributing as old members of No. 99. And at the request of the regular members present, he would now call upon Bro. William Johnston, one of those old members, to read the address to Bro. Hatton.

Bro. W. Johnston then read the following

ADDRESS.

DAVID G HATTON, ESQ.,

SIR AND BROTHER,—The members of Loyal Diamond Orange Lodge, No. 99, hearing that you were about to leave Peterboro, it was for ever, at least for some years, felt it a duty they owed to themselves, and to the Orange Association, to acknowledge in some part their appreciation of your services, in the ranks of the association in this county.

We discovery regret that your business relations force you away from us; but although we do so, we as sincerely wish that your removal from among us may result in good to you and your family, and may the "Grand Master of All, who rules the Universe," bless and prosper you, worthy Sir and Brother, Mrs. Hatton, and your children.

Receive this small token of our esteem, and as it measures off the hours of each day may it remind you that days, weeks, months and years, for all and each of us, will soon have passed away and be engulphed in the boundless sea of eternity. When that time comes may we all meet together in "The Grand Lodge above," never more to be separated, is the earnest prayer of your Brethren.

In behalf of Loyal Diamond Orange Lodge, No. 99.

GEORGE JOHNSTON, W. Master.
RICHARD LUND, Deputy Master.
Peterboro, Sept. 18, 1869.

Brother Hatton replied as follows:—

BRETHREN,—I cannot express the pleasure I feel in receiving this address which you have just presented to me, and in the receipt of this beautiful gold watch and chain. The address I will treasure for the expressions of brotherly love and goodwill it contains; and the watch and chain I will wear in remembrance (if anything were needed to remind me) of your great generosity and disinterested kindness."

You have been pleased to make reference to my services in connection with the Loyal Orange Institution, and particularly to my membership with Lodge No. 99; and the Order in the county of Peterborough. In regard to this I can only say, I have endeavour'd to do what I conceived to be my duty as an Orangeman, I have desired always and particularly since I had the honour of being County Master of this County, to inculcate a spirit of good fellowship towards all Loyal subjects of our most gracious Queen, without reference to creed. As the principles of our Order teach us to give no offence to any one, and to be slow to take offence at the actions or opinions of others.

The Order in Canada and in this County, is now in a more flourishing condition than ever before, and this I attribute mainly to the wise counsels and moderation of those who are at its head, and to the consideration of our members for the conscientious opinions of those who differ from us religiously.

I sincerely thank you for the prayers and kind wishes for my wife and children, I feel that they and myself have your best wishes. That your prayers for our welfare may be answered, I trust to the Great Grand Master of us all, and I sincerely pray to Him for the individual welfare of my Brethern, for the prosperity of this Lodge, and the Institution in this Dominion.

I thank you sincerely for the good wishes you have expressed in this address, and the gift you have be so pleased to bestow as also for the disinterested kindness, friendship, and support, I have always received from my Brethern in this County, and I can assure you that one of the greatest regrets I have in leaving this county, even for a time, is that it causes a severance of my connection with you. Believe me Brethern.

Yours fraternally,
D. G. HATTON.

After Bro. Hatton's reply, Bro. W. Johnston returned thanks to the Master and brethern of the Lodge, for the honour conferred upon him, in allowing him to be identified with their Lodge on the present occasion, he felt proud of old No. 99 for their action at the present time, and said that is true honoring Bro. Hatton on his departure from them, they had conferred honour upon themselves and their Lodge, he hoped they would long continue to act as true Orangemen, and make their Order respected through coming ages in the Dominion of Canada.

Bro. R. Weir, District Master, being called upon to address the meeting, rose and said, that he would have liked very much that this movement had been made a general one amongst the members of the Order in the town, and not confined to Lodge No. 99, as he and many others would have felt honoured by being allowed to assist in getting up a testimonial to Bro. Hatton, a brother whom they all highly esteemed. At the request of the Worshipful Master he had attended to-night, to show by his presence at least, that he agreed with the members of No. 99, in thus honouring their brother who is about leaving them, and whose departure would leave a blank in the association in this Town and County not easily to be filled.

Several others having given expression to their good wishes for Bro. Hatton, Bro. R. Hamilton proposed that the meeting should be closed by giving three rounds of Scottish fire in honour of the brother who was now about leaving them. All having united in doing so Bro. Hamilton proposed, several of the members who would not have any other opportunity of seeing Bro. Hatton before his departure, then took him a hearty "good-bye" with many warm wishes for his prosperity in his new sphere of labour.

The next meeting of the Teachers Class will be held in the Union School, on the first Saturday of October, at 10.30 A. M.—A full attendance is requested.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening, September 20th. The Mayor presiding. Present—Messrs. Ewing, Kennedy, Stevenson, Robinson, Butherford, Toole.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from A. T. Williams, Superintendent of the P. H. & P. R. R., was read and received.

An opinion C. A. Weller, Esq., on the petition of E. Burnham was read in which Mr. Weller considers it is competent for the Town to open up the street prayed for.

Petitions were read from Mr. Fairweather, asking the council to prevent the running at large of pigs; from Geo. Wheeler, asking leave to open a butcher shop on the corner of George and Murray streets; from Wm. Croft, asking the council to remove a nuisance mostly opposite his dwelling; from Jas. Perry and four others, asking the council to pass a by-law incorporating them as the Peterborough Gas Company.

A report from the street Inspector, up to date, showing the sum of $2213.75 has been expended on the streets and bridges. The report was received.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, Geo. Wheeler was granted a license to open a butcher shop as asked for.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, the by-laws was directed to lay a sole walk in front of Mr. Leonly's new building, on Hunter Street, seven planks wide, using the old as far as possible.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Edmison, a by-law was read a first time authorizing the formation of a Gas Company.

The Finance committee reported in favour of refunding Messrs. Wray & Wards $25 out of the $75 paid by them for an auctioneer's License. The sum to be allowed on their taxes.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That this Municipality give the proper notice of their intention to make application to the Legislature of Ontario for an act to enable a majority of the Commissioners of the Town Trust to decide on all matters pertaining to their duties of the said Board; to exempt any territory included in the contemplated extension of the Town limits, from the present indebtedness of the Municipality, to the Municipal Loan Fund; and also for authority to issue debentures under our consolidation act, to the amount of $35,000; the money to be applied to the erection of two primary schools in the Town, and to grant power to the said Commissioners to sell and dispose of the property in the South end of the Town and for other purposes named.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Company be and are hereby authorized to make application to the Legislature of Ontario for power to enable the Town to aid the said Railway to the extent of $25,000. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That the Clerk be instructed to prepare a By-law to compel all parties keeping powder to remove the same to the new magazine, as soon as it is ready, as the law directs.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, the Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law to form a gas company. Mr. Rutherford in the chair. This was read with amendments.

On motion of Mr Edmison, seconded by Mr. Toole, that the Clerk be instructed to prepare a suitable By-law for the purpose of preventing hogs or pigs from running at large within the Town, and to provide for the punishment by fine or otherwise of the owners of such hogs or pigs as shall be found running at large. And submit such By-law at next meeting of the Council. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, the Street Inspector was instructed to level the old grave-yard, in accordance with the resolution of the County Council, and also to have the fence repaired and the place closed.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—that E. Burnham, Esq., be and he is hereby permitted, in the name of this municipality, to institute and carry on any suit or other legal proceedings necessary having for its object the opening of a certain street, between King and Charlotte Streets, in accordance with by-law No. 42, so long as the said Elias Burnham save harmless, and keep indemnified the Corporation from all costs in respect of such proceedings, and shall carry on the same at his own risk and costs.—Carried.

The council adjourned for one week.

Sunday School Pic-Nic and Excursion.

(To the Editor of the Examiner.)

SIR,—A Pic-Nic in connection with the Union Sunday School, Buckingham, was held on the 16th inst, and was in all respects a pleasing success.

That the people of this place take an interest in the Sunday School, and appreciate the benefits accruing therefrom, I think was evident from the large number of parents and others that were present on the occasion, and from the fact that a number of our business men closed their establishments during the day.

The children to the number of about one hundred assembled at the School House, at an early hour in the forenoon, and in due time repaired, accompanied by their teachers, and full of youthful expectations, to a beautiful grove in the vicinity, where a few pleasant hours were spent in amusements and in participating in a sumptuous 'spread' When they were called together, and executed a number of pieces of well selected music, in a manner that reflected credit on themselves and their musical instructors.

Our respected townsman, Mr. Boyd, having granted the use of his boat for the occasion, all now repaired to the wharf where the Steamer "Novelty", Captain Morle Lane, awaited them; and after a pleasant excursion, enlivened by sweet strains of vocal music by the youthful participants, all arrived again at the wharf, evidently well pleased and highly gratified.

A vote of thanks having been tendered to the owner of the boat and to the Captain for his kindness and generosity in giving a sum of money, collected for him during the trip, for the benefit of the School, all repaired to their homes, feeling that their most sanguine anticipations had been fully realized.

Yours Respectfully,
A PARTICIPANT.

Sewing Machines.—We invite attention to the advertisement of the sewing machine depot. All sizes of machines are kept constantly on hand, and a lady well acquainted with their working is constantly there. Parties wanting machines would do well to call and examine before purchasing at a distance, as it is worthy of attention that all machines from the place warranted, and parties can rely on obtaining a good article, as well as instruction, the want of which is often the cause of poor machines.

Dixon Potatoes Yet.—A correspondent informs us that Mr. Thomas Thompson, lot 26th con. Emily, raised from 1½ of early rose potatoes 120 lbs, one potato weighed 2 lbs. 7 oz., and several others over 24 oz. each. After all, while there is one or two very large ones amongst Mr. Thompson's potatoes, Mr. Sheriff Hall, as given last week, exceeded them in total yield by 10 lbs of potatoes for every 1½ of seed.

Peake Ismen Lady's Magazine, for October, has been received. This is one of the best Magazines of Fashion published. It can be obtained at either Kidds or Mossie's book stores, or direct from the publisher, New York, at $3.50 a year.

John H. Dumble, Esq., of Cobourg, has obtained the contract to build the Whitby and Port Perry Railway.

Those who use Colby's Pills recommend them to their friends.

Horses Saved.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. CERTIFICATE

Otonabee, July 21, 1869.

Mr. A. Mowry, Dear Sir,—In reply to your request desiring a statement as to how I was satisfied with the Separator, that I purchased from you last season, I have much pleasure in saying that it gives me every satisfaction. The draft is very light, and the Machine does its work completely, and is so very easy on the Feeder, and free from dust, in fact it is the best Thresher that I ever put a sheaf of wheat through, and I have used one for 20 years, and have had some of the best machines that could be got. I would advise all those wishing to purchase a good machine to go to Mr. Mowry, Ashburnham. JAMES CAMERON. Werrowed P. O.

New Method of Washing Clothes Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with more whiteness than by the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

BY-LAW No.

A By-law to levy a certain sum of money for making a drain in the Township of North Monaghan

WHEREAS certain Ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan have Petitioned the Municipal Council of said Township of North Monaghan to make a drain along the allowance of Road between Lots No. 12 and 13, in the 11th concession of said Township;

And whereas it is reasonable to comply with the prayer of said Petition;

And whereas by the Municipal Institutions Act and amendments thereto, power is given to Municipal Councils to undertake the work of making drains, and of levying on the lands of parties benefited by said drains for their construction;

The Municipal Council of the Township of North Monaghan hereby enacts as follows:—

That said drain shall be undertaken and completed by the said Council, and that the sums estimated by Theodore B. Clementi, Esq., P.L.S., be assessed against the owners and occupiers of the several lands benefitted by said drain, and the Clerk is hereby instructed to charge said parties in the Collector's Roll the sums so estimated for, and that the Collector do collect and pay over to the Township Treasurer such sums, to reimburse said Council for the outlay in making such drain.

The above is a true copy of a By-Law which will be passed by the Municipal Council of North Monaghan on the 23rd. day of October A. D. 1869.

WILLIAM WOOD.
Township Clerk.

NOTICE!

Any one intending to apply to have the above By-Law, or any part thereof, quashed must make the application for that purpose to one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Law at Toronto during the term, next ensuing the final passing of the By-Law.

And further, that in conformity to above recited acts notice is hereby given that a Court of appeal on the matter of the above By-Law will be held at the Town Hall, on THURSDAY the 30th day of SEPTEMBER inst, at the hour of ten o'clock A. M.

WILLIAM WOOD.
Township Clerk.

A Thrifty Woman.

Drawing up at the gate, she hitched her horse as though she was accustomed to it,—gave a smart ring at our door-bell, and the wife of our landlord was unknown to us. She was an active, but by no means a bustling woman, whom I had never seen before. She had come from a neighbouring town, where her husband was a prosperous farmer and builder, to collect the quarter's rent, and after this matter was adjusted we fell into conversation, such as our peculiar circumstances 'Have you much of a family?' I inquired.

'Eleven children,' she replied.

I opened my eyes in astonishment, expecting to hear the usual answer, in these days 'Three—two boys and girl,' or vice versa.

'Have you never lost any children?' I asked.

'None,' she replied,' and none are married; they are all living at home.'

'What a family to look after!' I exclaimed.

'Oh, I should not mind our own family at all,' she answered, 'only we have always had three or four carpenters, necessary in my husband's business; then we have a farm and a good many cows to see to, and butter to make, and as my husband is always busy in other ways, the oversight of the farm devolves mostly upon me.'

'I hope you are more fortunate than the rest of us, in having good domestics to help you with all this work.'

The good woman at once gave a decisive reply. 'I never keep any.'

'Your children must help you a good deal then?'

'Yes; but they have their lessons to learn. Their elder sister, who has as good an education as money could give her, teaches them entirely at home,' she said. 'We have a room in our house fitted up especially for this purpose. They are more thoroughly taught by her than if they went to school elsewhere, and able to recite their lessons in the early part of the day, they spend fewer hours over their books, which is better for their health, and enables them to give more assistance than they could otherwise do.'

'You must sit up very late at night,' I said.

'We always finish up our work by eight o'clock evenings, unless there is something unusual going on,' she replied, for we are quite a musical family. My daughters are good players, and father, mother, boys and girls, all count upon a good sing, often We are through our work before going to bed, and this causes us to indulge in sitting up rather late, I have sometimes thought, considering we must be up with the lark in the morning.'

'Are you always well?' I asked.

'My health is perfect,' she replied. 'I have a good natural constitution, and I have no time to be nervous or dyspeptic,' and this paragon rose to go.

I followed her to the gate; saw her mount her horse and drive off, while I returned to the house with these reflections, 'Eleven children, boarders, a farm, no servants, all teaching done in the house; and the fine arts! Think of it, O, ye daughters! who have a family of three children, three servants, have headache, dyspepsia, and general debility thrown in. Think of it, ye men of this generation! who often declare that all smart women died with your grandmothers.

I have made inquiries in the next town concerning the remarkable woman of whom I wrote, and find her story is not exaggerated. She is a living example of what perfect method and industry will accomplish, and, as such, should be an example to mothers. She was once a teacher; is well educated, and sensible. She married her husband when he was not worth a cent, and now they live in a fifteen thousand dollar house; own a good farm, and are considered wealthy, and to the thrift and good management of the wife is attributed much of the husband's success. They and their children have the name of being one of the happiest and most united families anywhere about.

Truly, many daughters have done virtuously, but thou hast excelled them all! O wife of our landlord! Long life to thee and thy eleven children!—Ayer paper.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is ready out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd &Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Shoshoosee Remedy, which has so often checked the spread of those fatal diseases of the throat which impoverished and oppressed have existed to make us consumes.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been complied with, but on the contrary all are willing to testify to its merits and virtues.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER was for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach, Phantasie or Asthma, [illegible] to visit actively the human debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diphtheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia by the side, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bee stings, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only thirty-five cents per bottle

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms; Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and, sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and gently administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Look for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared From a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulating vegetable. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, concentrated form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND LOSS PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.

—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using BURT'S EGYPTIAN HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' LIKEWAYS LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received any where near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverence combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Dec 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr F W Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawing, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed.] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; run it after three months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take it back, pay freight both way, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Portable Saw-mills, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c. To Messrs. CHAMBERLIN & FOSS, Conway P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Vause, County of Hastings,
Province of Canada, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on upon my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors and most kinds of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoosee Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoosee Remedy and two boxes of the Pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never conceived to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of desperate hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbours and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoosee Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOCHERTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs Mary Ann Docherty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoosee Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of the medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this unrivalled remedy for pulmonary complaints. For a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its positive character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. Hence, parents should be cautious how they permit coughs, colds and lung troubles, to fix at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the disagreeable affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although pulmonary consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases in which the disease seemed seated, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. In confirmation of this statement over the doctors of the Union and Throat, the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Hoarseness and Public Speaking find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is novice injures any patient. The simplicity and importance of its cures in the most difficult cases, are literally beyond record, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the extraordinary tributes we receive of the radical cures of chronic Ague cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, upon residence in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be preserved by using the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is the most powerful remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

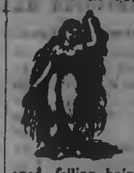
Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

PART SECOND.

CHAPTER IV.—CONTINUED.

She bore him two boys, in conformity with his ducal programme; but he did not show himself less faithful to the other articles of the preliminary agreement. He remained, little by little, his former self; he resided during the summer with his wife at his chateau, generously brought her back every winter to the Hotel de Soubise, and while he devoted one or two weeks of each month to his forests, his stud, and his cattle he allowed the young duchess to enjoy under the guardianship, in no wise tyrannical, of his mother-in-law, the decorums of Paris. He had in some measure the reputation of a good husband, and it is certain there are many worse.

The Duchess Blanche had enjoyed for some years the tranquil pleasures of the married life, which seemed to her to bear a sufficient resemblance to happiness, when one day, on entering the house of Madame de Guy-Ferrand, her mother, who was slightly ill, she was surprised to see, seated at the corner of the fire, her cousin, Raoul de Chalys, who had that morning arrived from Marseilles, after a long residence in the Levant. Monsieur de Chalys, left an orphan in infancy, had been the ward of Monsieur de Guy-Ferrand, the father of Blanche, and after his death had made it a duty to surround his widow with assiduous cares and filial attentions, and intimacy with Blanche had much exceeded the ordinary limits of cousinship. The young woman nevertheless, showed more astonishment than delight at seeing him again after so many years, and received his fraternal embrace with the dignity of a duchess. She asked him some trivial questions, and then became coldly silent, while her mother continued with friendly eagerness the numerous inquiries the arrival of Blanche had interrupted. After a little time, Madame de Guy-Ferrand complained of fatigue and withdrew, begging Raoul to remain with Blanche until her carriage should come for her.

The first minute of this tete-a-tete was passed in a somewhat embarrassing silence. Monsieur de Chalys looked at the young duchess with an air of puzzled curiosity.

'My cousin,' said he at length, 'I have two compliments to pay to you. In the first place you have become a very pretty woman, and, in the second, I know that you are a happy one, and if any thing in this wretched world can give me a sensible pleasure, it is that.'

Blanche raised her eyes toward him; he saw that they were covered with a watery veil; she tried to reply and to smile, but her lips moved without sound, her heart failed her, and she burst into tears. Raoul, surprised and confounded, advanced toward her; she motioned him back, and hastily left the room.

The Count de Chalys filled for a moment in amazement, gazing at the door through which Blanche had disappeared; then joining his hands, he exclaimed:

'Ah! bless my soul! What is the meaning of this?'

He seemed to reflect, not without bitterness, shook his head sadly, and after a pause.

'I don't know what to do,' he said. 'Shall I go away? This is a nice business, truly! It was worth while to go to Persia! Good Lord! Good Lord!'

While he was in this perplexity, the door opened, and the young duchess reentered, her eyes very red, but with a smiling face. She put out her hand.

'It is nothing,' said she, gracefully. 'Excuse me. Do not go yet. Let us talk.'

She threw herself into a chair, and began to press him with rather feverish questions about his travels and his Eastern life. This put them more at their ease, and they were soon laughing together.

'Ah! this is indeed a pleasure!' said Raoul; 'this is like old times when I was your brother. Now I am your grandfather. Ah! how old I feel! Good-night, cousin.'

As he got up to go, Blanche became serious all at once. He shook hands with her.

'Can I see you now and then?' said he.

'Certainly, often I hope,' said the young woman. 'whenever you like.'

The Count de Chalys went directly to the lodgings of a friend, who lived in the Rue Servandoni like the savant he was.—His name was Louis Grandras, and he had the honor of being very well known to Mademoiselle de Penarvan, whose interest he had excited in an extraordinary degree;—Nicolle had been promptly established on a footing of action in the exclusive drawing-room of the Hotel de Soubise. By an exception, which Monsieur Grandras's very free and unconsidered opinions upon all matters made quite inconceivable, the old duchess always treated him with a sort of caressing idolatry she hardly accorded to the most respected names of the old regime. The explanation of this anomaly was quite amazing.

Monsieur Louis Grandras, a man of the people, had practised for some time during his younger years the profession of a physician, and with great success; but, although poor, he had quickly abandoned the lucrative application of science, for the purpose of devoting himself in his laboratory to pure speculation. Endowed with high faculties and an indefatigable order in his work, in a few years he had taken rank among the scientific celebrities of his time, and some remarkable discoveries in chemistry and physics had raised him, almost before the required age, to the honors of the Institute. He was now thirty-five years old, and of a rather severe but striking beauty; his regular features and lofty forehead had the color of and firmness of bronze; his eyes were full of calm and steady fire; his words, sober, tranquil, and accurate speech was in accordance moved with his elegant, haughty, and glacial mien. He was radically a democrat, and an exaggerative materialist, and was so far from concealing as from vaunting his opinions. In short, he was a stranger guest for the table of the Duchess de Soubise, who drew her political as well as her religious opinions from beyond the Alps.

Nevertheless, she was never content when Monsieur Grandras was absent from her table, although he used to make it pay dearly for the good fortune. Profoundly pious, full of intelligence, capable of any self-deception, and even of martyrdom, this singular woman had not one weak sense; she had an extraordinary fear of death, of natural death, common vulgar death, death in her bed. She was subject to some nervous disorders, varying in their symptoms, and taking in turn a form of almost every disease.

Ten years before she had experienced a violent cardiac crisis, and it was feared that the ordinary physicians was absent, and she was obliged to call in Monsieur Grandras, who then lived in her neighborhood.

His art, his reassuring and quieting words and, above all, the powerful influence of his strong personal magnetism, had exercised like a charm the nervous spasms which tormented the old lady. From this moment she felt in him a tender confidence; she had begged him to continue his attendance, and he had the complaisance to remain a physician for her alone. She was grateful to him for it; she was persuaded that he had saved her life a dozen times, and she flattered herself that he would save it again, and perhaps always. The adoration she professed for this tutelary being, joined to the horror which the religious and political doctrines of the young savant inspired, made the relations between the duchess and her physician very like those which existed between Louis XI. and his astrologer.

Louis Grandras felt for her an affection which was generous, and in some sort paternal, but he was deceived by the eccentric and almost scandalous part he was called on to play in the coldly exclusive society of the Hotel de Soubise. He played it, moreover, although he was not a man of fashion, with much reserve and native ease of manner, but even the most restricted expression of his opinions was like the explosion of a bomb in the severely orthodox circle. The poor duchess, a little fairy, full of gentle grace, who had the excellent taste to adopt the simple and rather monastic style of the women of the time of Louis XIV., exerted her genius to induce her other friends to tolerate the strange ways of her saviour. When she kept him to dinner—and she earnestly begged him to stay as often as she could—she caressed him, she sighed to him, and with suppliant look and voice tried to convert him, however little, to the ideas and the manners of her other guests.

'But really, Grandras,' she said one day, 'joking apart, you do believe in a God?'

'Yes, certainly, Madame la Duchesse,' Grandras replied seriously, 'in the good Pan!'

'But, at least, there is one thing to which you do believe,' she resumed after a moment, 'you believe in love?'

'If I believe in love?' replied Grandras, as if mortified at the question; 'certainly, I believe in it. Love is an encounter vibration of certain lobes of the occiput.'

Sometimes it happened that the good duchess lost her patience.

'Ah! my friend!' cried she one day, 'will God's grace ever give me courage to turn you out of doors?'

The celebrity of Louis Grandras, the peculiarity of his character, and the singularity of his presence at the Hotel de Soubise, had not alone attracted the particular attention of Sibylle; it was from his mouth that she most often heard the magical name of Raoul. He spoke of Monsieur de Chalys with grave and profound feeling, never tinged with the irony so familiar to his language. She knew they were close friends, and that during the long absence of Raoul, Monsieur Grandras had been his assiduous and almost his only correspondent. This shade alone tempered for Sibylle's eyes the color of the physiognomy, to her quite new and violent, and almost gained her sympathy to the personage from whom she felt herself separated by the whole breadth of heaven.

The morning of his arrival at Paris, Raoul had hastened to visit Grandras, and had passed with him the greater part of the day. It was then with some little surprise that Grandras, at eleven o'clock in the evening, saw him appear again in the little cloister-like apartment, where he was at work by the light of a student's lamp.

'Brave!' said he; 'this is a pleasant relapse. Has anything happened?'

'Nothing serious,' said Raoul. 'But something worth telling, though,' he added, and sat down. 'Heavens! what an uncomfortable chair! I beg of you, buy an easy-chair for me, even if it's of rotting wicker. Well, my dear fellow, I am such an irresistible beggar that I have hardly been in Paris twelve hours and I have met with an adventure already.'

'Pshaw! what nonsense!' said the young savant. 'Go about your business!'

'I have just come from it, my friend,' replied the count, 'and the question now is whether I ought to return to it. In the first place, I will begin by accusing myself of a want of frankness with you. My last words back to the time of my departure for Persia. I bid you to believe that this journey had no other reason than my curiosity and artistic tastes. This wasn't quite correct; but, although a friendship like ours admits of no secrets, I really thought it superfluous to explain to you some secondary motives, which had a rather ridiculous tint. You know my cousin, the Duchess Blanche?'

'Of course I know her,' said Grandras, 'being in the habit of saving her mother-in-law's life every fortnight.'

'You recollect the exceptional character of my intimacy with her mother and with her; for two or three years I regularly accompanied Madame de Guy-Ferrand in her visit to the convent where Blanche was at school. You see, this child was a little girl that I liked well enough—that was all. Physically, she was scarcely pleasing to me; for the rest nmere doll.—Moreover, the idea of marriage was repugnant to me. But, by some vague instinct, which might be perhaps an observation of equity, I thought I perceived that the little person thought me superb, and that her mother secretly contemplated a marriage between us as an event written in the book of fate. That made me apprehend explanations, complications, tendernesses—in short, to end the story, a few months before Blanche was to leave the convent, I quietly packed my cask and went off to Persia.'

'That was a weakness,' said Grandras. 'What next?'

'One of your first letters announced to me—I was at Ispahan—the marriage of Blanche with the Duke de Soubise. I returned thither to Alep in the Grand Mogul. Nevertheless, from an excess of caution and delicacy, I wished to give this marriage time to consolidate and to take root. I passed a year in Persia, another in Constantinople, a year at Cairo, and a year, I have forgotten where.'

'Exactly—in Greece; I have just come from there. I go this evening, after dinner, to pay a visit to my aunt, Guy-Ferrand, as my heart and my duty directed.—Reception a little cool at first. Then, as she is an excellent woman, and her daughter, at all, a duchess, after a little I find her as warm and affectionate as before. The young duchess comes in. I think I perceive in her salutation, and about in the coolness of welcome, a slight touch of rancor, an irritation, a little emotion, a little confusion—I don't know exactly what.'

'Pshaw!' said Grandras, 'you are absurd. She adores her husband, your cousin, and with good reason, for he is splendid in person, perfectly good to her, and has two scores of children.'

'That is the fact,' said Raoul tranquilly. 'Know, then that Madame de Guy-Ferrand having left me about with the young duchess, it is only three-quarters of an hour ago, I suppose to compliment her on the happiness you describe. She looks into my face for the first time, bursts into tears, and hides herself in the next room.'

'The deuce!' said Grandras.

'She returned to me most after, regained her self-possession, appeared gentle, friendly fraternal, but quite artificially so, and with all the fires of the pit in her eyes. Now, Quid dicet. Thomas?'

'I say that you must not see her again,' said Grandras.

'Pshaw! and how avoid it—living in Paris without any family than hers? It is impossible!'

'Go back to Persia then.'

'I don't go back to Persia.'

'In that case, what counsel do you ask of me?'

'I don't ask you for counsel. I only relate to you an interesting episode of my stupid existence. That is all.'

Monsieur de Chalys stood and walked slowly over the quaint floor of the chamber.

'No one is less apt than I am in matters of this sort,' said Grandras; 'but a child could not be mistaken in the consequence of the adventure, your point of departure being given. If you yield to the current and continue your visits to the young duchess, who is the wife of an honest man, your relative, and almost your sister, you will commit, knowingly, a very bad action, for which I shall refuse you my approbation and my esteem. Dixi!'

'Instead!' said Raoul, suddenly stopping. 'Really!—a bad action! And what is a bad action? Where is your criterium? And if I don't think it bad? If the young woman seems to me singularly beautiful, if I feel myself agreeably attracted to her by one of the smartest laws of nature, what second law, as you understand it, should prevent my yielding to the first?'

'Homer!' said Grandras, dryly.

'Homer!' said Raoul, raising his voice. 'Let us enter there, my learned friend (and he pointed to the door of the laboratory). You will show me at the bottom of your crucibles the elements which make up all the substances of nature the necessary forces in virtue of which they germinate or crystallize within the bosom of their blind mother. You will make me touch with my finger, on your globes, or in your logarithms, each one of the springs which suspend the planets in the void, and regulate through all eternity their fatal march; but I defy you to show me in any of your alembics, or in any of your magic books, a single one of the elements of that force which you want me to obey, and which you call honor. Why should I obey a fiction? Be logical!'

'It is you who are not logical,' replied Grandras. 'If the position of a man really emancipated, and completely free, could be brought into discredit, it would be by you. What reproach is made against those who, like us, have shaken off the yoke of all the mythologies of the misery of mankind, and who dream, for the whole world, of a future of complete and equal emancipation! They are reproached with suppressing the principles which are necessary to the cohesion of every social group, and of imagining upon the earth a pretended society of philosophers, which would be a society of brutes! And you—I am sorry for it—you justify their objection. Because God is a pure hypothesis, you conclude that virtue and honor are baseless fictions. But that is stupid. I, am I not an honest man?—Find a fault in my life. And why am I honest? From pride, in the first place, possibly, and to show to all those worshippers of mouldy gods that one can believe in nothing, and yet be better than they, yes, from pride, doubtless, but also, and above all, from reason, whatever you may say, because I reasonate in the moral world, as in the world of matter, necessary laws; because integrity of morals, which is respect for one's self, good faith, which is respect for one's fellow-creatures, justice, probity, honor, are wheels indispensable to the functions of a good social machine. Yes, I recognize these necessary laws, and I observe them. What the plant and the star do from instinct and from necessity, I do from reason. That is my superiority, that is my dignity—I am a man!'

'You are very proud, my poor friend,' said Raoul 'you are very proud of your temperament! You live, I see, with the austerity of a Trappist; but why? Because the pale fluid which runs in your veins has its source in some glacier of the Alps. You have the happiness to be no prose on the moon, but with no greater merit than has that luminary, because her fires are extinguished.'

'One is pure when one wishes to be,' replied the young savant with energy. 'One is what one will. You are a woman!'

The Count Raoul shrugged his shoulders, laughed a sweet and musical laugh, and continued his promenade in silence.

'Say what you please, Louis,' he began again. 'From the moment when I no longer believe in God, the Source of all justice, the Model of all virtue, the Sanction of every moral law, I do not find in myself any sufficient reason for conquering my tastes, my inclinations, my passions—bah! not even my simple appetites. And, what is more, I experience in satisfying them in a savage way, a sort of wicked joy, a sort of bitter pleasure. It seems to me that I would like so be struck by lightning a little.'

'That is it,' said Grandras, laughing. 'Come, avow the truth: you are not far from hoping for some revolution, some miracle of that kind. Do you want to hear the truth Raoul? You are not an unbeliever, you are a rebel. You do not, like me, carry negation in your brain, but revolt. Now, a rebel implies a master, and you, who talk about logic, you pass your life in arranging yourself upon a God in whom you do not believe!'

'It is true,' said Raoul, with animation. 'I do not possess your serene and tranquil incredulity. Mine is passionate, is disconsolate. I am a rebel, you have said it, and my broken chain makes my wrists bleed.—I am in despair that I can no longer find in heaven the God of my childhood. I seek him there sometimes, my eyes, filled with tears. He is not there. He absconds himself behind the clouds of the age, and I hate him for it, and I could long that he should show himself to me but for a moment, were it to launch upon me his thunderbolts!'

'Artist!' said Grandras gently, and extended his hand.

Raoul seized his hand and pressed it in his own.

'Neither artist nor woman,' said he, sad, unfortunately, as radically unbelieving as yourself. But I am a man who has blood in his veins and passions in his heart. And, may you never know, my poor Louis, what chimerical obstacles and what feeble consolations are the strongest armaments of the reason to the fury of the senses and the tempests of the soul!'

'Amen!' said Grandras.

'Let us talk of something else,' said Raoul, seating himself suddenly. 'I have had to-day another surprise. I recognized a little while ago, in the Champs Elysees, in a brilliant turnout, very much embarrassed, that beautiful creature I told you of long ago, who was at the convent with my cousin, and whose portrait I sketched on the wing, and who promised—'

'What is her name—Clotilde?'

The young savant rose suddenly and leaned against the chimney.

'Clotilde, Dunesmis, you mean,' said he coldly. 'She is now the baroness of Val-Chenay, and, as I hear, very rich, very elegant, and very much sought after.'

'How is that? She was very poor. Who is the husband then?'

'A stiff, blonde little man, who lives chiefly on the dust of the race-course—not much of a man. She dug him up in the previous run away with him from his mother, and put him in her pocket, so they say.'

'That doesn't surprise me,' said Raoul. 'Do they talk about her?'

'Not yet, as far as I know.'

'That does surprise me. Does she see my cousin?'

'Certainly. I meet her often at Madame de Soubise. She makes it a point of honor to assemble in her drawing-room some of the curiosities of the day, and had done me the honor to add me to her collection. She invites me to her Mondays. Do you go?'

'Oh! once in two months; you can imagine how pleasant it is for me there.'

The clock of the church of Saint Sulpice struck one. Monsieur de Chalys rose.

'I shall meet her probably at Blanche's,' said he, lighting his cigar at the flame of the lamp; 'I at will make a diversion, perhaps. So' said he, taking Grandras's head, 'you are as happy as ever.'

'Perfectly happy.'

'Not as I. Good-night.'

And he went out.

The Count Raoul de Chalys had been left in early youth master of a considerable fortune. Nevertheless, from an ardent thirst for knowledge as well as from a sense of duty, he had devoted much time and labor to his late lectual education.

Neglectful of no branch of human knowledge, his curiosity had led him to engage a scientific studies, for which he had neither taste nor aptitude.

His desire to complete his education in this direction had first brought him into intimate relations with Grandras, whose great talents, pure life, and energetic character had captivated him. But Grandras exercised no controling influence over him, for these two men, differing so greatly in their organization and their development, both possessed a lofty pride that did not admit of any despotism of one over the other, though quite compatible with a firm friendship. To the icy atmosphere which surrounded Louis Grandras, the ardent soul and restless mind of Raoul brought, as the sun to the polar regions, a warmth and a life which surprised and gently excited the young savant; and Raoul, on the other hand, was glad to gather from the lips of his friend clear and precise formulas for his uneasy skepticism.

With a general taste for art, Raoul, at an early period, had perceived in himself a special fondness and aptness for painting. He had cultivated this talent assiduously, and after ten years of patient study, a few striking and excellent works had raised him at once to a place among the masters of the art. The day after his arrival he had shut himself up in his studio with the design of transferring to canvas some pages of his Eastern album. To this design was added a necessary good resolution of stifling by constant labor the temptations of perversity and coxcomity which he felt were attracting him to the Hotel de Soubise. Nevertheless, although not wanting in strength of will, Monsieur de Chalys had not so de idedly determined that there was a necessity for its exercise as to prevent him from accepting no invitation to dine at Madame de Guy-Ferrand's a few days later. He, he went to the dinner, quite satisfied that he had shown so much self-denial, and glad of a sufficient excuse for showing less. He found there the young duchess, and was a little piqued at her perfectly easy and collected manners. He said to himself that his apprehensions had been senseless, and the next day called upon the dowager. He was most cordial, though while he was relating some incidents of his travels, his eyouth Blanche reflecting to herself a passage behind her fan, he began to be seriously irritated, but at this moment the young baroness of Val-Chenay, nee Clotilde Dunesmis, was introduced into the drawing-room, and gave quite another direction to his thoughts. Clotilde did not address him one look or tone, but seemed to ignore him absolutely. This vexed him all the more, as he was quite dazzled by the splendor of her fully developed beauty. But toward the end of her visit, which was short, the young baroness, suddenly addressing a sleepy old man who happened to be present, half concealed by the window of a curtain, and whom no one had taken the trouble to notice, exclaimed:

'Monsieur le Vicomte, why do I never see you at my Monday evenings? What have I done to you? It would be so good to you if you would come.'

The old man looked at her astounded, and bowed vaguely, like an awkward mummy; when the baroness, pretending to perceive Raoul for the first time, and assuming the manner of a person who has just become aware of some awkwardness of which he has been guilty, said hesitatingly:

'Really, I should be very happy, Monsieur, I receive Mondays. A Monsieur de Chalys, I think?'

'Yes, Madame.'

'Then, Monsieur, I need not say that the friend and relative of Madame de Soubise will always be welcome at my house.'

'Madame is very kind,' said Raoul, bowing low, and added to himself, 'and as clever as ever!'

While Clotilde, with this left-handed blow, swept into her net her old admirer, the eyes of the little duchess were flashing. But she conducted Clotilde as far as the antechamber, and embraced her tenderly, according to the custom of young women.

'Apropos,' said she, 'I think he has grown dreadfully old, my Persian; don't you?'

'Dreadfully, my dear,' said Clotilde.

'I could not imagine at first who he was.'

Nevertheless, when Raoul, who had thought it his duty to accept the invitation of Madame de Val-Chenay entered her drawing-room the next Monday evening, the first person he saw was the Duchess Blanche, who on this occasion especially seemed to have been attended at her toilet by the god-mother of Cinderella. For as near he kept a position between these two charming women, who during the whole time were engaged in doubting at each other with infinite grace, over his head, all the oceans of their quivers; and when he retired it was with the sweet conviction that he had become the object of a regular tourney, and would be called upon some day to award the crown.

It is not very easy to define the qualities which make a man pleasing to women. It would, perhaps, be prudent to allow each one of our fair readers to imagine for herself the features and the voice of our hero, and the color of his eyes, for each of them has her own ideal—in the person of her husband, it is to be hoped—and it might be unwise as well as indiscreet to disturb their illusions. But we will venture to say that Raoul de Chalys was of a tall, lithe, and well-made figure, indicating, notwithstanding his habitual attitude of careless indolence, the spring and vigorous elasticity of the feline races, and giving him to an uncommon degree what is called an air of distinction. His fine and silky hair, of a chestnut color, but veined with darker tints, was already quite thin above his temples. His forehead was large, serious, and remarkably clear. But the vertical furrows between his eyebrows showed habitual and severe thought, and an accustomed austerity of the will. The steepness of the features accompanied and subdued by the sweet, gentle and somewhat sad expression of his eyes, which were veiled by long feminine eyelashes. No one could meet Monsieur de Chalys in a drawing-room without desiring to learn his name, and this name itself had a certain prestige, as it represented the rare alliance of a great talent with a high social position. But the greatest merit of the count in the eyes of the ladies was that he seemed always ready to fall in love with them, and in fact did so, for he used to say: 'There is no woman, however plain, who has not in her person, if one only seeks for it, something which is captivating.' His air of indifference and his cold tone became animated and impassioned whenever he talked with them. He inspired them with both trouble and confidence. They felt that he loved them, and they loved him.

Notwithstanding these dangerous gifts, whose power he had recognized at his first entrance into society, the Count de Chalys was the Book Concern

A discovery has been made, which will greatly help the lay representation movement in the E. Methodist Church of the United States, inasmuch as to show the scandalous debt that has existed for years, under the present regime in the management of the great Methodist Book Concern. The publishing and bookselling business, carried on under the above name, is one of the most extensive in the States, having amounted in 1868 to $694,000, and showing a profit of $104,000 in that year alone. Now it appears that a new book-agent, Rev. Dr. Lanahan, was appointed at last Conference, and he has discovered that his predecessor, the Rev. James Porter, had so arranged matters, that the supplies for this immense business, such as paper, ink, muslin, leather, and so on, were not procured by advertising for tenders, nor even direct from the parties who sell these things, but through two brokers, who were both sons of the Rev. James Porter; and that to these sons a commission or brokerage, one paper says, of seven per cent., was allowed on said supplies. There must be some mistake, we think, in this figure; but all accounts agree that the said two sons of the agent have been receiving each, at least, $10,000 a year for six, or, perhaps, ten years back, for doing what the book-agents were employed and paid to do. The body has then, it is believed, lost $200,000; and what is perhaps, even worse, it has lost confidence in a number of men of high character, besides the three mentioned, all of whom must, it is believed, have been in the "ring." The manager of the printing department and the manager of the bindery have both been dismissed, and investigations are still going on. The management of this great interest was committed, as already stated, to the Rev. Jas. Porter, and he was superintended by a committee of fifteen preachers, who met annually, but whose investigations do not appear to have been very efficient, some of them probably having been tired to business.—Montreal Witness.

EXECUTION OF POTTRAS.—The convict Pottras, suffered the extreme penalty of the law on Tuesday afternoon, at Malbaie, for the murder of a man named Ouellet, in the district of the Montis mines. The trial took place in early part of this summer, and the execution was fixed for the month of July; but the government granted the accused a temporary reprieve, owing, as it was at the time currently rumored to the fact that his Excellency Sir John Young intended to visit that section of the country. The ceremonies attending the execution were conducted by two men from Montreal, the Sheriff of Malbaie being unable to find any person within the limits of its district who would—even upon receipt of a large remuneration—undertake the duties of the odious office of public executioner. Pottras, it is said, up the last moment refused to accept the consolations of his religion, and would not receive the visits of any clergyman, proclaiming his innocence of the murder for which he suffered. When, however, he was brought to face the reality of his terrible position on the scaffold he became penitent of his sins, and confessed himself to be the murderer of the unfortunate Ouellet. The execution was conducted in an orderly and peaceable manner; the resident farmers for many miles of the surrounding country were in attendence.—Quebec Chronicle.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.—The Kingston News makes the following serious charge against the Government officials at Ottawa: "It grieves us to hear that clerks in certain departments at Ottawa have been in the habit of levying contributions on people having business with them, and, under the excuse of 'extra work,' have unblushingly put forward their systematized demands. Report ascribes to Redfern the receipt of heavy douceurs from a certain financial institution of Upper Canada. Promotions in another department are said to be dependent on cheques or drafts drawn in favor of a superior officer, who thereupon recommends his dupe to the consideration of Ministers. This is the way, no doubt, that the Government clerks on small salaries at the capital are enabled to live in a style above their legitimate incomes. Ministers, we believe, are ignorant, or have been too long ignorant of these irregularities."

TO KEEP POTATOES FROM ROTTING.—The Germantown Telegraph is authority for the following, which may be worth something to farmers whose potatoes already show signs of rotting badly:—

The surest protection against rot in the potato, after being harvested, there is no question, we think, is air-slaked lime.

Let the lime be sprinkled over the bottom of the bin before filling, and repeat the application at each foot of potatoes as the bin is filled up. The quantity is what a farmer would call a good sprinkling.—Potatoes should be excluded from the light. a dry spot should be secured, which can be thoroughly drained, and then pursue the same course with the lime as before. A vent must of course be left in the top for the escape of the exhaled air.

THE BYRON SCANDAL.—When Mrs. Stowe says that 'the whole history in its reality has long been perfectly understood in many circles in England,' she ought to have added what always followed the fatal whisper in these circles—viz., that Amelia Darcy, Baroness Capper, before she married Captain Byron, was divorced wife of the Marquis of Carmarthen; that her gallantries were notorious; and that owing to the state of his pecuniary affairs, the obsequies of her new husband were frequent and protracted. Under these circumstances her daughter Augusta and the great poet were perhaps right in considering that there was no blood relationship between them.

MONTREAL PAPAL ZOUAVES.—On Thursday next, one hundred recruits will leave Montreal, under charge of the Abbe Mercier, for Rome. Of this number, says the Herald, ten are cadets of the Military School! Le sérieux de la Benedictions will be celebrated on Thursday next at half past three o'clock at the Bishop's Palace. Preceded by the Friars and the Montreal College bands the Zouaves will march to the Bonaventure station, whence they will proceed by New York at half past four o'clock by the Vermont Central Railway.

Prince Arthur has been invited to open the International Industrial Exhibition at Buffalo on the 5th October. The invitation was sent to him yesterday, through the Acting British Consul. Of course he cannot accept. He was expected in Buffalo yesterday, along with the Governor General, but the Buffaloians were disappointed. He has had to decline an invitation to the St. Louis Fair, and to join a Buffalo hunt, although General Sheridan offered him a cavalry escort.—Spectator.

A telegram from Ottawa to the Witness on the 22nd, says Sir Francis Hincks has accepted the office of Finance Minister.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1869.

The Mayor of Cornwall has become somewhat notorious for his resistance of the officers of the power that be. He refused to deliver up his children to their mother as directed by the court. Mrs. Allen then obtained a further order and placed it in the hands of the Sheriff for execution. Master Edward Allen, a youth of 15 years, in the absence of the father, presented a revolver to the breast of his mother, and threatened to shoot her or the Sheriff if either attempted to remove the children. Mr. Allen, who, it was believed, was on the other side of the lines, almost instantly appeared on the scene, rushed past the Sheriff, seized the children, and dragging them from all, got them into a buggy that was in waiting, and in a minute or two was on board of a boat for the United States.

The Roman Catholics of Toronto are building a very fine church. A grand drawing of prizes in aid of the building fund is announced. There is a prize from the Pope, and one from Louis Napoleon, Emperor of the French, besides numerous others. The Freeman says:—"The expense of building such a structure is manifestly beyond the reach of St. Patrick's congregation, and it has, therefore, wisely been decided to organise on a large scale this drawing of prizes, and appeal, not only to the city at large, but also to the diocese and the whole country. Protestants, we know, will help with their wonted liberality, but the appeal is especially to Catholics and Irish Catholics."

For reasons, we presume, best known to the New York brokers, there was considerable excitement in the gold market last week. There was an advance of from one to five per cent on Friday last. The "Bull" clique are said to have made $11,000,000 out of their operations. This is the way the gold speculators are managed: they scent a report that Vanderbilt is dead; Erie stock falls; gold rises up to 162; the "bulls" and "bears," by means of various rumors, succeed in advancing quotations. When gold rose to 162 it very soon declined to about 133, and closed there, thus ruining many for the gain of a few.

SIR FRANCIS HINCKS.—The Cornwall Freeholder says of Sir F.:—"This is not the first time Sir Francis has suprised us, he surprised many of us by getting a governorship, prior to which he kept us considerably on hot water, and having been relieved of this he will probably keep us in hot water for some time to come. If a gentleman of his accredited disposition will humbly and faithfully play second fiddle to Sir John A. McDonald, or if he becomes obsequious, Sir John should meekly submit to the impetuousness and ambition of Sir Francis. Will that not be a millennial scene?"

Father Hyacinthe, Paris, of the Catholic Church, a very noted Parisian preacher, has by letter protested against some of the dogmas and practices of that Church, and appeals to the approaching Ecumenical Council to effect a Reform. This letter has produced the censure of his superiors, and he has withdrawn from his Convent to await the decision of the Council. Stirring events will transpire in France as soon as Napoleon the third is removed from regulating her affairs.

By the absconding and mismanagement of Harris, agent at Quebec, the Bank of Montreal loses $177,000. The City Bank loses $40,000; the Bank National $23,000. Mr. Ahearn, of the City Bank, has also absconded on account of these defalcations. City Bank stock fell very considerably, and Montreal Bank stock fell 9 per cent.

HORSE RACING FOR CHARITABLE PURPOSES.—It is understood that Mr. Bonner, owner of the celebrated horse "Dexter," has consented to trot the horse to-day, against "Lady Thorn." The proceeds to be for the benefit of the Avondale sufferers. $5,000 spectators are expected to witness the race.

Kennedy the Scottish Vocalist has sailed for Scotland. He intends visiting Australia. The gold is more than the mere stamp, in that far off country, and will no doubt be freely offered to this famous rendever of Scottish Song.

Prince Arthur and the Governor General are to visit Hamilton. Great preparations are being made to receive them. A Grand Ball is to be given. Tickets are put at $5 for gentlemen, ladies $2,50.

The Ledger keeper of the Hamilton branch of the Montreal Bank, absconded on Friday, taking with him about $50,000, obtained by certified cheques.

Toronto has the Prince and Governor General and quite this week. Everything is being done to make the occasion of the visit a success.

What's a butterfly? at best
He's but a caterpillar dressed.

But to will discuss this [illegible] order of animal-ents.

On Monday evening the Council met and to our surprise passed the most illegal by-law that has ever been pushed through the hands of the most direct set of partizans, only Mr. Clarke and Mr. O'Beirne dissenting. The Mayor was completely silent on the occasion; not a word of warning; not a vote but two was given against this most flagrant disregard of the duties of office. The only redeeming feature in excuse that can be offered is, that they knew it was illegal and consequently would be of no effect whatever. Of course they might as well show themselves gentlemen.

The Local Member for the West Riding was present during the whole farce, and encouraged the illegal proceedings. His argument was, pass the by-law legal or illegal, right or wrong. It requires this by-law to "expose us into a company." Such rot! Any number of men can form themselves into a company without the leave of the Council. They might require a by-law to enable them to disturb the streets, &c., to place their pipes, but to ask a Council to erect them into a gas company is an indication of mental imbecility, such as we expected. But then Port Hope by-law says just the same thing. Of course our infantile legislator requires a copy cat, before he dares make a "pothook" on paper.

Some whose feeling gets the better of their judgement accuse us of opposition to the formation of a gas company. We can only say that such is not the case; but we are opposed to violating the Statutes for any company, and we are decidedly opposed to granting monopolies. The 220tieth section of the Municipal Institutions Act of Upper Canada, or Ontario says: "No Council shall have the exclusive right of exercising within the Municipality, any trade or calling, or to impose a special tax on any person exercising the same, or to require a license to be taken for exercising the same, unless authorised by Statute so to do." The case of granting exclusive privileges in a Ferry only, being in the power of a Council by the 121 clause.

Mr. Harrison, in a note in the Municipal Manual says: Monopolies are odious to the law. A monopoly is when the sale of any merchandise or commodity is restrained to one or to a certain number, and has three inseparable consequences—the increase of the price, the badness of the wares, the impoverishment of others. By Statute, all monopolies and all commissions grants licenses, &c., to any person, &c., for any sale, buying, selling, making, working, using, of anything &c., are void." And any one grieved may have an action on the Statute and recover double costs. So monopolies are contrary to Magna Charta. The first part of this section is merely a declaration of dominion law. No Municipal Council has a right to grant a monopoly unless authorised or required by Statute so to do.

So much then for monopolies. This is then met by saying we have a final vote for our gas. Have we anything fixed against the "badness," or against many other contingencies that may arise. But independent of this fixed rate or anything else, why pass a by-law openly opposed to the Statute.—Simply Mr. Carnegie expects to get this illegal by-law legalised. That is he intends for his own use and benefit, being a stock holder, to use his position in the Legislature to the detriment of the ratepayers of the Town.

If these men were straightforward they would ask the Council to submit the by-law to the ratepayers instead of trusting to their influence in parliament to get their illegal acts made legal. What a bright example of a legislator, and truly what sort of a Council have we that will be a party to such work. If they want gas, and certainly we do, if we can get it at a moderate rate, let them proceed in a legal manner to grant aid to the company. By our timely interference we have been the means of having the posts fixed at twenty instead of twenty five, thus saving $100 a year for five years. There was an insincere show made to have the number fixed at fifteen, and certainly this number would have answered all the ends intended, viz., to light George street and to the churches. The north, east, west and south may remain in outer darkness. Nearly all the Councillors reside within the circle of George street and the churches; but the ratepayers in the limits will be asked to pay for what they are not to use only when on George street or going to church.

There is one consolation, the whole is illegal, and will remain so unless our legislator, bless us, gets the statute amended. The ratepayers need not pay a gas tax unless it be voted yearly by resolution of the Council. We trust the electors to remember the commencement of a family compact in Peterboro, and to watch the prostitution of position and influence to secure the most selfish ends, as well as an odious monopoly to himself and his friends.

But it still not end here; this is only the small end of the wedge entered; who knows but next year something more will be sought for in the same illegal manner, and this time not referred to as precedent, just as Port Hope is referred to now. We have heard that gas is a terror to marauders. Experience tells us that all burglaries are committed between 12 o'clock and daylight. The terms of our gas company are to supply gas till 12 o'clock and then put it out. What a defence lamp posts will prove to our town. We are asked to subscribe for gas to save us from plunderers, while during the very seasonable hours for plundering we are left without light. The truth is it is not light that is cared for but gain,—profits wrung unjustly and illegally out of the poor ratepayer who lives at the extremities of the town limit.

CHEESE FACTORIES.

[illegible] In Cayuga County alone over 2,000,000 lbs of cheese will be made this year. This at 15 cents per lb will be $300,000.

This is made in 25 factories, which is about $12,000 each on the average.

They employ about 250 men and 100 women each.

The average per cow last year was, 435 lbs.

This at 14 cts per lb will yield about $60 per head, net. The price for making at the factory, is 2 cts per lb. and everything found.

In one factory up to the 6th of August of the present year, there were made 4,500 lbs cheese; 1,200 pine apple cheese; and 600 young American cheese. The owner of this factory thinks good native does best for Dairy purposes.

The best milk stands from [illegible] Corn fodder produced most, and best quality of milk.

It is [illegible] that milk at 100 cents to enable the maker to do the work for 2 cts per lb. A fair quantity of milk requires an increase of cost per lb.

The same paper says there are more dollars worth of butter shipped from the County than there is of cheese. And then the Dairy business overtops all others in the aggregate.

Let our own Farmers think of it—For cheese $300,000—for butter over $300,000 all from one County.

Another feature in the Cayuga Cheese Trade is the making of a large number of 6lb cheese. These are suitable for family use, and will be sure to find a ready home sale.

The rules followed at the Factory referred to are:—

Refuse all milk not thoroughly strained.
Use no sour or rusty cans.
Rennet must be perfect, any tainted to taste or smell, are thrown away.
No foul smell is allowed near the factory.
A Mog pen is not allowed near it.

Mr. Joseph Walton of Smith, last year made about 20,000 lbs of cheese. These realized 12½ cents, Canadian Currency, or about $2,500, which is a nice little item for this one article of produce. How many cheese factories might be established in this County? and no doubt with satisfactory results to those engaging in the work.

Government Incapacity.

Mr. Thomas White, returned to tell those who attended the dinner given to him on his return from Great Britain, as emigration agent, that the Dominion Government have really no policy on the emigration question. They have men who have charge of the department who either unfit for their position or unwilling that British emigrants should be induced to Canada. It may be asked what are the members of the Dominion Government fit for? Since their return to office on trial they have not earned for themselves the respect of either party. They have exhibited the same reckless expenditure in all they undertake. They are as unwilling to do anything for the benefit of the country as they were before confederation. The only policy they seem to understand is love of office and its emoluments. They are never at the seat of government long enough to fix on any given line of policy, and how could Mr. White expect that immigration would be attended to by them; even the conservative press are reconciling themselves to the Hincks appointment, hoping that thereby the country may get rid of the administration of Sutherland's Johnsonian management, which has oppressed the country so long.

THE EXHIBITION.—The Provincial Exhibition of 1869 has terminated, and was in every respect a decided success, surpassing that of other years. The number of entries have been larger than that of former shows. The total number of tickets sold during the exhibition was 20,000, about 5,000 more than at any former exhibition. There can be no doubt but that the visit of Sir John Young and Prince Arthur tended materially to increase the number of visitors; about 26,000 tickets were sold on the day of this visit, and not less than 35,000 persons [illegible] from [illegible] Corporation officers received the Prince and suite very handsomely, doing all in their power to render the visit pleasant, at the same time affording an opportunity to Young Canada of seeing the son of their Queen. The Toronto Telegraph, however, does not speak in very flattering terms of the patronage of the citizens of the ambitious city. The following list comprises the entries for 1869:—

TEMPERANCE.—The [illegible] J. B. Epworth,

[illegible] the Temperance cause in the [illegible] of Toronto, on Monday last. [illegible] Peterboro on Monday [illegible] hall being well filled, and [illegible] were well pleased with the lecture. A collection then taken up in aid of the objects of the Union. After [illegible] a committee was named to consider the advisability of forming a branch [illegible] Alle Upton [illegible] this [illegible]. We understand that Mr. Aylesworth intends soon visiting Peterboro again, when we hope he may be induced to [illegible] time in [illegible] County. He is a very earnest, eloquent, and practical speaker. The friends of Temperance should do well to avail themselves of his services, and aid him [illegible] visit.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Young Men's Christian Association intend resuming the public monthly meetings which proved such an attractive last season. The first of the series will be held in the Good Templar's Hall, on Monday evening [illegible] generally will show their appreciation of the efforts of the Association, by turning out in [illegible] large numbers on that occasion. The meeting promises to be an exceedingly interesting one. The programme will consist of reports from the delegates to the Conventions at Portland and Hamilton, and a discussion on the subject of Amusement, in which several of the members of the Association are to take part. There will of course be no charge for admission.

MASONIC.—The Freemasons of Rochester visited Port Hope by invitation on Tuesday, and were entertained by the Masons of the District at a grand banquet in the Drill Shed, to which a great number sat down.—Yesterday a number of them visited our town, and were the recipients of lunch from the Peterboro Brethren, at the Queen House. Capt. Sutherland occupied the chair, and C. [illegible] the vice. The [illegible] was very short, as [illegible] house only the usual complimentary toasts were given. The guests were accompanied to the cars, and left on the same day, after a visit of two or three hours.

THE STEAMER OGEMAH.—We invite attention to the new arrangements of the Ogemah which will omit further notice, leave Bridgenorth at 10 o'clock on Monday and alternate days, for Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls, and Lindsay. And will leave Lindsay every Tuesday and alternate days, on the arrival of the train from Port Hope. The new arrangements will be found very suitable for travellers, especially the going to Bobcaygeon on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 4 o'clock, and returning next morning.

Joseph Mackrat, a Mud Lake Indian, was sent to jail yesterday, for 20 days, for being drunk, and indecent exposure. When sobered where he got his whiskey, said at Dunbar's; and could not tell how he got to town; didn't know he was in town till he found himself in the lock-up.

It is very hard that men will be found violating the law, by giving Indians intoxicating liquors.

THE WEATHER.—The change from hot to cold has taken the people generally by surprise. The mercury on the day the snow came, followed by chilly nights, could scarcely but affect the general health of the community, as too many use no precaution in heavy clothing in their evening walks after the heat of the day. The change to steady cool weather will be more agreeable, and certainly more healthy.

The numerous readers of the Examiner throughout the [illegible] Community, will be pleased to notice from an advertisement in our issue of to-day, that their old friend Capt. D. Sutherland is again in the grain market, and from his known probity in all business matters, no doubt the farmers of this County who have grain to dispose of to give him a call.

POTATOES ROTTING.—Rumors reach us from various quarters that the rot is beginning to show itself. The quality of the soil and of the potatoe have something to do with the rot. We can hardly believe that the rot will be general, only among some kinds of potatoe, and perhaps to heavy, clayey, badly drained soils.

TYPHOID FEVER.—There have been two or three cases of typhoid or low fever in town. One case at least has proved fatal, the others appear to be recovering.

SHEEP AND HORSEMAN ASSOCIATION.—Show will be held at Bridgenorth, on the 5th of October.

Tickets to the ball at Toronto, in honor of Prince Arthur, are fixed at $6 for a gentleman, and $3 for a lady. Tickets to the dejeuner are to be $3.

The Mohawk Chiefs are to be present at the reception of Prince Arthur in Brantford, in their war costume, and give a dance.

Brantford is to spend $400 expended on an invitation to the Prince and suite, and it has been accepted.

The Peterboro Publishers received the dispatch of Lectures on the 3rd of November.

Mr. McDougall was expected to leave for the Red River Territory on Tuesday.

GOOD HEALTH.—The October number of this periodical has been received. The contents are varied and interesting, giving a great deal of information on subjects connected with health. It can be obtained at the book stores or from the publisher, Alexander Moore, No. 21, Franklin street, Boston, and is published $1.50 a year.

TELEGRAPH HOUSE.—The excellent paper is regularly before us, and contains very much that is useful and entertaining, on agriculture, horticulture, cooking and household management. Every family should read it. It is published weekly and is only $1.00 a year.

THE ONTARIO FARMER is also before us. The contents of the September number are: Editorial; The Farm; The Live Stock; The Garden; Our Country; Arts and Manufactures; Hearth and Home; Poetry and Music. It is published by Mr. F. W. Clark, Toronto, and costs $1.00 a year.

THE CANADA FARMER, for September, has come to hand. This is an excellent monthly and should be read by all Canadian Farmers and Horticulturists. It costs only $1.00 a year.

Those who use Colley's Pills recommend them to their friends.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday, 27th inst.—The [illegible] present. Councillors English, Hole, Doherty, Simmons, Chanter, Kennedy, Dickson, Rutherford, Stevenson and O'Beirne.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

[illegible] vesting pigs, horses and young cattle from running at large; which by-law appeared in accordance with a resolution at the Council.

He stated that the by-law for exempting parties having gunpowder on their premises to remove the same to the new magazine, was not finished, that he had written for a copy of a similar by-law to Toronto, but had not yet received it.

On motion of Mr Stevenson, the Council [illegible] of the Whereas the second appearing of the by-law for signing the Peterborough Gas Company into a corporation. Mr. Rutherford in the chair. The By-law was considered in the second section, so as to provide for sufficient guarantee that the company will pay any damages or costs caused by their neglect. The 4th clause was amended fixing the rate of gas per 1,000 feet at $4 if paid when demanded, after 14 days $5 per 1,000 feet. In the 5th clause 20 lamps was substituted for 25 as before intended.

The By-law as amended was then read a third time and passed.

The Street Inspector submitted a report of expenses of the powder magazine, showing the amount thereof to be $136.75. The report was received.

The By-law to prohibit pigs, &c. from running at large was then read a second time and passed.

Mr. Jas. McFarlane was appointed Pound Keeper and the Street Inspector appraiser of damages.

By this By-law horses, cows, pigs and steers are prohibited from running at large. The costs connected with these animals when taken up are:

For impounding a horse, $1.00; feed per day, 25 cents.

Oxen each, 25 cents; feed per day, 25 cents.

Cows each, 20 cents; feed per day, 15 cents.

Steers and young cattle each, 40 cents; feed per day, 12½ cents.

Pigs each, 50 cents; feed per day, 10 cents.

Sheep each, 5 cents; feed per day, 5 cents.

For Advertising 50 cents. For appraising damages, 50 cents.

The clerk was instructed to notify the Railway authorities to at once make the necessary repairs on Bethune street, to avoid Legislation.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

How to Prevent Typhoid Fever From Spreading.

In the following will be found condensed, the rules which experience has shown to be effectual in preventing the spread of the fatal typhoid or enteric fever. The value of these rules will be recognized by all; and, in the following form, it will be found convenient to issue them as a placard in any districts where the fever may have become epidemic though previous neglect of sanitary precautions.

How to prevent Typhoid Fever (otherwise called Gastric Fever, or Low Fever) from spreading.—The means by which typhoid fever may be prevented from spreading are very simple, very sure and their cost next to nothing. They are founded on the discovery that the poison by which this fever spreads is almost entirely contained in the discharges from the bowels. These discharges include:—1.—The air of the sick-room; 2.—The bed and body linen of the patient; 3.—The privy and the cesspool, or the drains proceeding from them. From the privy or drain, the poison often soaks into the well, and infects the drinking-water. This last, when it happens, is certainly the worst of fever-poisoning the most deadly. In these various ways, the infection proceeding from the bowel discharges often spreads the fever far and wide. The one great thing to aim at, therefore, is to disinfect these discharges as their very escape from the body, and before they are carried from the sick-room. This may be perfectly done by the use of disinfectants. One of the best is made of green copperas. This substance, which is used by all shoemakers, is very cheap, and may be had everywhere. A pound and a half of green copperas to a gallon of water is the proper strength. A teacupful of this liquid, put into the night pan every time bellow is used by the patient, renders the bowel discharge perfectly harmless. Put this into the bed and body linen, and bedding generally; chloride of lime or McDougall's powder is more convenient. These powders should be sprinkled, by means of a common dredger, on soiled spots on the linen, and also on the room, to purify the air. All articles of bed and body linen should be plunged, immediately on their removal from the bed, into a bucket of water containing a tablespoonful of chloride of lime or McDougall's powder, and should be boiled before being washed. The privy, or closet, and all drains communicating with it, should be flushed twice daily with the green copperas liquid or carbolic acid, diluted with water.

In the event of death, the body should be placed as soon as possible in a coffer sprinkled with all infectants. Early burial is, on all accounts, desirable. In towns and villages where the fever is already prevalent, the last rule should be put in force for all houses, whether there be fever in them or not, and for all public drains. As the hands of those attending on the sick often become unavoidably soiled by the discharges from the bowels, they should be frequently washed. The sick-room should be kept well ventilated day and night. The greatest possible care should be taken with regard to the drinking-water. Where there is the slightest risk of its having become tainted with fever-poison, water should be got from a pump remote, or should at least be boiled before being drunk. Immediately after the illness is over, whether ending in death or recovery, the dresses worn by the nurses should be washed or destroyed, and the bed and room occupied by the sick should be thoroughly disinfected. These are grave rules. Where they are neglected, the fever may become a deadly scourge. Where they are strictly carried out, it seldom spreads beyond the person first attacked.

V.B.

N. B.—A yard of thin wide-width gutta percha placed under the blanket, under the breech of the patient, by effectually preventing the discharges from soaking into the bed, is a great additional safeguard.—The British Medical Journal.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.—The Havana press[illegible] the situation, asserts that the majority of the Cubans are loyal. They rely in proof of the solidarity of the Cuban interest in New York to obtain English and American filibusters to fight the battles of the rebellion, the rebel officers here being unable to obtain recruits among the natives. The Spanish element in the island is unanimously of opinion that the Washington government has no right to interfere in Cuban affairs, and that insurrections never admit of moderation.

A despatch from London (Ont.) states that extensive frauds have been discovered in the sale of tickets of admission to the Exhibition. Over three-and tickets are said to have been fraudulently disposed of.

O'Hara's Theatrical Company, of Boston, have been amusing the theatre-going public of Peterborough since Monday last. The programme for this evening will consist of "Jack Sheppard and his Dog,"—introducing, for the first time here, the trained dog "Sandy,"—concluding with the farce entitled "In and Out of Place," in which Mr. Frank O'Hara will represent seven different characters.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skilful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Ear Eden Infirmary. Remember he will be at Colborn Hotel, from Monday the 18th, October till the evening of Saturday, 23th Oct He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and miserable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession.—Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skilled in the treatment of consumption as well as other diseases, and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

The Saturday Review in an article on Emigration explains the great preponderance of Irish in the emigration that has taken place place from Great Britain of late years. A Englishman, the Saturday theorizes, emigrates to find new friends and new ties in the country of his adoption; an Irishman must needs have all his relatives and kindred about him in the new home. A few Irish emigrants doing well in America are enabled to send home enough money to bring out not all their belongings, hence the small colonies of Irish people that emigrate to every single England man. A celebrated wit once said in answer to a woman's complaint that her husband had failed to send her money to joint him in America. But, has not doing so was a proof of unremitting kindness. The husband, by the Saturday Review's reasoning, must have been an Englishman. The Review points out that the Irish emigration has largely decreased since 1863, and that the next great emigrating wave will probably be composed of Englishmen because various societies in England, such as The Oddfellows, Foresters, Trades Unions, &c., are likely to set on foot a National Emigrants needed in Canada; men and women who will turn their backs on the towns and create thriving villages in the back country.

The American journals, following in the wake of "Harper's Magazine," are abusing the Prince of Wales, and associating Prince Arthur as bad as his brother. Now, these journals ought to know that there is not one word of truth in all their statements of the alleged misconduct they attribute to the two Princes. A complete denial has been given to the shameful stories circulated about the Prince of Wales, and nothing could be more blameless than the conduct of Prince Arthur, which at all events, since he arrived in this country, has been above reproach. The Buffalo Courier, we perceive, puts down his age at 22; having been born on the 1st May, 1850, he is consequently not yet 20 years of age.—Spectator.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"The Province of Ontario, we venture to affirm, is not prepared to entrust the Banking interests of the country in the hands of the Federal Cabinet, who, from his long absence from Canada, must be regarded as a comparative stranger among us, and who on various grounds, is unfitted to occupy the position. If, then, Sir John A. Macdonald entertains the thought of proposing to Sir Francis, it would be safer to abandon the thought, for we cannot afford, in the view of working out the destiny of Confederation, to have the Province of Ontario agitated to its centre by an unpopular appointment, while the Province of Nova Scotia is only being reconciled to its position. Canada requires only political peace and economical government to become a most prosperous country.

There is some barking out on the Intercolonial. Le Pays says that Mr. Whitehead, of the firm of Grant, Elliot & Co., contractors for the section of the Intercolonial Railroad near Amherst, has had much trouble with sub-contractors since the commencement of the works. The latter, knowing nothing of the work of railway construction, entered into contracts which they could not carry out, and, after some months' work, have flung up the contracts, one or the other, returning their tends to Mr. Whitehead for payment.

Senator Sumner made a speech at Worcester, on the 22nd, in which he said he would leave England to off-set such reparations for the Alabama claims as she cannot properly pay, and it would be for the United States to decide what reparations she would require. Respecting the annexation of Canada, he believed the day was dawning when we should see the whole land joined under the government of the United States.

The Globe says:—Prince Arthur seems to have danced with an unusual number of married in preference to single ladies at the ball in London. This would tend to show that he is a young gentleman of mature tastes. If we remember rightly his august brother leaned rather to the other preference, choosing the budding flower rather than the full blown rose. Chacun a son goût.

Archbishop Cullen in reply to a deputation praying an order from the clergy of Wexford to refrain from attending Fenian demonstrations and not by interfering with the legitimate rights of any class, undermine the influence held by the Church, of their labour in undistributed tranquility.

Great dissatisfaction is said to prevail in Quebec, on account of the invitations to the French Canadians, to meet Hall in honor of the Prince, being largely in excess of any other nationality.

New Hampshire has the champion egg eater of the country. His name is Milton Page, and he disposed of ninety-four uncommonly large eggs in thirty minutes.

Dr. Marion Sims, the surgeon to the Empress Eugenie, is in New York.

Accident.—At Clifton, on Friday, a dreadful accident, attended with fatal results occurred. A span of horses and carriage, which were owned by Mr. Lowe, and driven by a man named Welch, went over the bank on the road to the ferry near the Clifton House. Several persons were in the carriage at the time of the accident, and one of them—Miss Mahola Smith—was killed.—Mr. J. J. Tillinghast jumped out of the carriage and escaped unhurt. His wife had an arm broken in two places, and she was otherwise seriously injured. Miss C. C. Fisher was slightly hurt. Marcus Ballow was badly injured. The party belong to Providence, Rhode Island, and were here on a pleasure trip.

Robbery.—On the night of Friday last the residence of Mr. John Hickson Manvers was entered, and the sum of $99 abstracted from a chest. He had been at Lindsay on that day and had cost $10, otherwise the thief would have had a larger haul. No trace of the robbers. Farmers secure your dwellings.

What the Pope is Doing.

(From the New York Times)

The Pope himself is personally attending to nearly all matters of detail connected with the coming Œcumenical Council.—He made a nice hit in the decorum which had passed the workmen engaged in making seats for the dignitaries who will attend the Council. They could not decide how large the steps should be, and the Pope leaning for the difficulty, sent them word to get hold of the biggest Cardinal in Rome, measure him, and make all the steps according to his measurement. The Pope himself has also settled the knotty question of the x day of precedence at the Council.

The first place, as a matter of course, is awarded to the Cardinals of the supreme Senate of the Church. The Literary is then divided into five categories, which take rank in succession, namely: 1, the Patriarchs; 2, the Primates; 3 Archbishops; 4, the Bishops of Dioceses; and 5, the Ll hapa in partibus.

The members of each class will have precedence, not according to the rank of their See in the Episcopate, but according to the date of their consecration, so that the latest consecrated prelate will take the lowest place in his class. We learn also from the Pall Mall Gazette that the pope has approved of the design submitted to him by his architect, for the monument commemorative of the Council. This will consist simply of the column of African marble from the emperium raised on a hexagonal base, which will be enriched on five of its faces with bass reliefs, representing the five parts of the world, while the sixth face will bear the arms of Pius IX, and the date of the opening and close of the Council. The column will be surmounted by a statue of Pius IX, pronouncing the benediction urbi et orbi. A short time ago the Holy Father inspected the structures erecting for the Council in St. Peter's, and evinced the greatest interest in every detail.

France.—The religious journals express grief at the letter of Pere Hyacinthe. The Monde says the letter justifies the fears which have long been entertained in regard to him. No such language has been heard in any French churches since the middle ages.

The Patrie declares that the independent language and courageous tone of his sermons, attracted much attention, and have drawn on the preacher the condemnation of the papacy and of his superiors.

Pere Hyacinthe has left his convent and gone to the home of his parents, where he will await the decision of the Council.

Paris, Sept. 27.—Reports from Rome state that the case of Pere Hyacinthe will be submitted to the Council of Investigation, which will probably result in excommunication.

Paris, Sept. 28.—It is said to-day that Father Hyacinthe will be defended in the Council by the Bishops of Avignon, Rheims, Chalons and Bayeux.

The Rumoured Annexation of Baden to Prussia.—The Gaulois asserts that France has sent a note to Prussia and Baden declaring that she will regard the annexation of the Grand Duchy of Baden by Prussia as a casus belli.

Spain.—The meeting of the Republican Club have been suspended by the authorities, because a resolution was adopted condemning the monarchy.

Since the return of General Prim to Madrid, the language of the American Minister has been more conciliatory.

Lisbon, Sept. 28.—The King of Portugal has publicly contradicted the rumour of his candidature for the Throne of Spain. He says he was born a native of Portugal, and will die a native.

Situation in France.—The Times in an article on the situation in France says:—The coincidence of the Emperor's sickness, and the reconstruction of the Government, is a serious misfortune. The energies of the Emperor cannot be well spared at such a crisis. The reforms came unfortunately while the Emperor was incapacitated, and at a time when he was most required. The speculations of the people on the uncertainties and opportunities of the future are so encouraged as to augment public disquietude. If the crisis had occurred ten years ago. The Emperor could have brought to work the energies he carried into the Italian campaign. If the experiment had then succeeded France would now possess a generation of statesmen with some parliamentary experience. The only question is; was the prospect of success so clear then as to justify precipating instead of postponing the trial? The present peril—serious in any case—is aggravated by the Emperor's enfeebled health. But peril of some kind has been the prospect of the Government for the past two generations.

Counterfeit Bills.—The Barrie Advance says:—"We were shown yesterday a one dollar bill of the Royal Canadian change ed into a ten, and so skilfully done that it was accepted by one of the banks, and was not detected for two or three days. The numbers around the margin had been carefully obliterated, and the figure ten pasted over the one. In taking bills of large denominations the public will do well to look especially to the figures on the margin."

Rev. Father Bergeolin, Catholic priest at New Ulm, Minn., has used two of his parishioners for libel; damages, $20,000.

Prince Napoleon has traded with Queen Isabella, transferring his estate on Lake Geneva, for a castle in Spain.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

The Sarsaparilla Diggers of Yucatan.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr J. C Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble lab rers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay All Pain and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and Can Say in Confidence and Truth of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—Never Has it Failed in a Single Instance to Effect a Cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, and Pledge our Reputation for the fulfilment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

Kaboo, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness at the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

Mary Ann Doughty.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Price of Remedy in large pint $1.00.

Shaw's Wafers.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

Horses Saved.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. New Method of Washing Clothes Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, or the action of fire, are driven up through the clothes, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the usual labor. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

BY-LAW No.

A By law to levy a certain sum of money for making a drain in the Township of North Monaghan

WHEREAS certain Ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan have Petitioned the Municipal Council of said Township of North Monaghan to make a drain along the allowance of Road between Lots No. 12 and 13, in the 11th concession of said Township;

And whereas it is reasonable to comply with the prayer of said Petition;

And whereas by the Municipal Institutions Act and amendments thereto, power is given to Municipal Councils to underwrite the work of making drains, and of levying on the lands of parties benefitted by said drains for their construction;

The Municipal Council of the Township of North Monaghan hereby enacts as follows:—

That said drain shall be undertaken and completed by the said Council, and that the same estimated by Theodore B. Clementi, Esq., P. L. S., be assessed against the owners and occupiers of the several lands benefitted by said drain, and the Clerk is hereby instructed to charge said parties in the Collector's Roll the sums so estimated for, and that the Collector do collect and pay over to the Township Treasurer such sums, to reimburse said Council for the outlay in making such drain.

The above is a true copy of a By-Law which will be passed by the Municipal Council of North Monaghan on the 23rd. day of October A. D. 1869.

WILLIAM WOOD,

Township Clerk.

NOTICE!

Any one intending to apply to have the above By-Law, or any part thereof, quashed must make the application for that purpose to one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Law at Toronto during the term, next ensuing the final passing of the By-Law.

And further, that in conformity to above recited acts notice is hereby given that a Court of appeal on the matter of the above By-law will be held at the Town Hall, on THURSDAY the 30th day of SEPTEMBER inst, at the hour of ten o'clock A. M.

Canadian Dominion Directory For 1870-71.

THE SUBSCRIBER proposes to issue in SEPTEMBER, 1870, if sufficient support by SUBSCRIPTIONS and ADVERTISEMENT can be obtained to cover the cost of Publication, a CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY, comprising the Provinces of ONTARIO, QUEBEC, NOVA SCOTIA, and NEWFOUNDLAND and PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND. The Directory will contain the names of Professional and Business Men, and of the principal Inhabitants in the Cities, Towns and Villages, together with a large amount of general Information, including Alphabetical Directories of Post Offices and Postmasters, Banks, Governmental Departments and Employes, Members of Parliament, Law Courts, Educational Departments Custom Houses and Officers of Customs, Ports of Entry, Tariffs of Customs, List of Patents of Inventions, Canals, Railways, Railway and Steamboat Routes, Benevolent and Religious Societies, Clergy of all Denominations, Registries with their Divisions, Newspapers and Periodicals, &c., &c; also, Statements of Imports and Exports' Revenue, Expenditure, Trade, Population, &c., &c.,

To be Corrected to August, 1870.

The Canada Directory for 1857-58, published by the Subscriber, contained the names of the Principal Inhabitants in 1,350 Cities, Towns and Villages in Upper and Lower Canada.—The CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY for 1870-71 will contain a short description of at least 3,500 Cities, Towns and Villages in the Dominion of Canada, and the Provinces of Newf fashion. She dished at once that her friend Blanche, already her rival in the race of fashionable elegance, meant to monopolize Raoul, and this was an additional reason for abandoning herself with heart and soul to this languishing passion.

The Duchess Blanche, of a gentler and more scrupulous nature, would perhaps have vanquished the feelings, more innocent, but now culpable, which the imprudence of her husband and the return of her former lord awakened, had they not been exasperated by the attempt of a stranger upon the affection of the man who had been the cherished dream of her youth. And then the young woman was being drawn along the dangerous path, as much by hate as love.

Moreover de Chalys more than once regretted that he had allowed himself to be engaged in this delicate contest, for it proved him many serious moments. He hesitated, much too calm for his justification, hesitated in its decisive between the two young combatants; but it finished, somewhat from generosity, and more from selfishness, in favor of Blanche, for her disposition, less turbulent and excitable than Clotilde's, seemed to be less threatening to the repose and independence of his life.

The young duchess could not mistake the character of the assiduities of her cousin, which each day became more tender and more decided, but she was not the happier for it. As the advantage she was gaining over Clotilde became more clearly defined, her religious scruples became more difficult to silence, and her conscience more reproachful; more bitterness was mingled with her passion and more secret tears with her struggles.

She hesitated in her course, and at times endeavored to retrace the steps she had taken in this enticing and flower-strewn path, whose fatal issue she saw and shuddered at, but some offensive demonstration, some furious aggression of Clotilde would again thrust her back into a blind and desperate self abandonment.

The duchess, as the reader will have already guessed, was hardly less jealous of Mademoiselle de Ferns. One day, at her mother's house, while looking over some old albums of Raoul's, she was particularly struck by three sketches to which the count had annexed a descriptive commentary. In the first of these sketches, under the shadow of thick foliage, and at the foot of a rock festooned with forest-vines, a little girl, of striking beauty, was standing in a resolute and queenly attitude, holding a wand in her hand like a magic sceptre. Beneath the sketch was written: 'Near the Cliffs of——, Normandy. 10th Aug. 184—. Mademoiselle Sibylle.' On the next page the same child showed a greater maturity. It was entitled, 'Mademoiselle Sibylle, five years later.' The last sketch, finished with more care, bore the legend, 'Mademoiselle Sibylle at eighteen—as I imagine,' and was a minutely detailed drawing of a young woman whose forehead, expression, and entire physiognomy, the successive developments of which had been foreseen by the artist with wonderful accuracy, were almost exactly those of Mademoiselle de Ferns. The same scene at once to the hope of the young duchess, but a sudden reflection kept her from uttering it, and turning to her cousin, she asked for an explanation of the sketches.

'I don't know who it is,' said Raoul; 'a child that I caught a glimpse of a long time ago, and who must be a lovely creature if she is living now.' And he related to Blanche the story of his meeting with Sibylle at the Fairy's Rock, and the conversation they had held together.

'The name of the little village and of the adjoining chateau I have forgotten,' added he, 'or rather I never knew it, for I never knew it for I was only passing through the country; but a hundred times since I have been tempted to return there, but the daily occupations of my life, the absurdity of the whole matter, the fear of disappointment have prevented. It is strange that of all the recollections of my travels—and there are many of them—this is the most persistent and the most pleasing. There was really something extraordinary, almost supernatural about this child.'

He continued for some time in the same strain, became quite animated, and only ceased when he noticed that clouds were beginning to gather over the countenance of his cousin.

From that day the young duchess exercised all the ingenuity of which she was capable, and exhausted all the arts and refinements of diplomacy, to keep Mademoiselle de Ferns from the sight of her enthusiastic cousin. She only invited Raoul to the Hotel de Soares when she was quite certain that Sibylle would not be present, and always preferred to meet him at the house of Madame de Guy-Ferrand, with whom Sibylle was unacquainted.

Clotilde, on her side, although ignorant of the secret which chance had revealed to her friend Blanche, had yet sufficient fear of the impression which the grace and beauty of Sibylle would be certain to produce, to make her desirous of preventing any meeting between her and Raoul.

And as Monsieur de Chalys was never seen outside of his studio and his club, except at the Hotel de Soares, and in the drawing rooms of the young baroness, it seemed probable that Mademoiselle and her painter would never meet in this world; but a most unexpected event at last broke the charm which kept them asunder.

(To be continued.)

A Long Nurse.—During the war a 'contraband' came into the Federal lines in North Carolina and was marched up to the officer of the day to give an account of himself, whereupon the following colloquy ensued:

'What's your name?'

'My name's Sam.'

'Sam what?'

'No, sir; not Sam Watt; I'a just Sam.'

'What's your other name?'

'I hasn't got no other name, nah; I'se Sam, dat's all.'

'What's your master's name?'

'I've got no master now; massa runned away; yah, yah! I'se free nigger now.'

'Now what's your father's and mother's name?'

'I've got none, nah; nebber had none.—I'se just Sam—ain't nobody else.'

'Haven't you any brothers and sisters?'

'No nah! Nebber had none. No brothers, no sister, no father, no mudder, no nuss; nothin but Sam. When you see Sam you see all dere is of me.'

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years never failing in a single instance to give immediate relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction when the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superceding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an efficient and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bites, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, convulsed extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stones, and sometimes constitutive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, fainting, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, weariness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HARTSHAL CONSTIPATION CURES. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL. —Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HERV'S EXPRESS HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitations of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near so high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, where I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 28th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made by us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gears, Sand-cutting and Self-setting Circular Saw Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & PERRY, Cobourg, County of Northumberland, Province of Ontario, Canada.

YARKA, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 8th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness in my spine, which gradually during the spring of 1867, rendered me my knees, and ankles so my limbs, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about three years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I employed medical advice, was playing, at different times, three doctors, and used—bars of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Mandrake Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Mandrake Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but directly after the medicine as a sort of desperate hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one allowed as I was, I have only to say try the Mandrake Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOHERTY.

Sworn to before me at Hydon, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WAGE, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doherty for the last fifteen years, she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her sentiments to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was deemed hopeless; and I know that since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Mandrake Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of the medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They were publicly known to the people of this section of the country, that the public naturally looked to them for the first announcement of the remedy, that the public naturally looked to them for a statement of its virtues or its cures.

For these reasons, and because of the most disinterested motives, the undersigned, citizens of this town, without solicitation, and without the knowledge of the proprietor, have consented to give this certificate, that the public may have the benefit of their knowledge of the facts. We do not deem it necessary to recount the many cures of this remedy which have been performed in this town and vicinity. Many of them are publicly known, and all can be ascertained by inquiry of any druggist. Some of the most remarkable cures on record in this country have been made by this medicine. Consumption, which seems to baffle every other remedy, yields to it. Even those cases which have been pronounced incurable by the most eminent physicians, and which have been abandoned by them as hopeless, have been cured by this remedy, when it seemed impossible that anything could reach the case. Astonishing cures of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Tumors, Humors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Female Complaints, Kidney Complaints, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Piles, Worms, Heart Disease, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, and the various diseases arising from impure blood, are performed by it. Indeed, the public have so full evidence of the wonderful virtues of this remedy in all diseases of the blood, that we deem it unnecessary to publish them in detail.

Sensible of its power and its benevolent mission, we feel it a duty we owe to the afflicted to let it be known where its virtues are exerted, that the sick may not suffer through ignorance of the means of cure. Hence we have appended our names to this paper, and request you to publish it, that all may know that we are willing to certify to the facts stated herein. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a concentration of the best alterative and purifying and invigorating vegetable remedies. Alterative and purifying and invigorating vegetable remedies. Poetry.

THE OLD MAN DREAMS.

O dearest visions, that once
Oh, for one hour of youthful joy!
Give back my youth all to me!
I'd rather laugh a bright-haired boy,
Than reign a king in misery!
Away, misgiving, dark distress!
Off with the wrinkled spoils of age,
Away with the hoar-frosty locks,
Your sad, life-weary pilgrim sees,
And death his trophies doffs!

Once more let my life-blood stream
From boyhood's fount of flame;
Give me one giddy, reeling draught
Of this all love and dream!

All, melody-making, and
All, the breath-like thought
Of the fragrant thing that grew
Into the heart's glad core!

"But is there nothing in the earth
To find this thirsty day
While the earth renews berry bush
To find the wished for day?"

Ah, tiniest soul of womankind,
Without thee what were life?
One bliss I cannot leave behind,
I'll take—my—sweetheart—wife!

The angel took a serpent's pen,
And wrote in rainbow dew,
The words the maiden blushed o'er,
And sighed as sighed the true!

Then folded the celestial page,
Sealed it with a holy kiss—
Whispered, "Choose, mortal, choose!"
And gave—love's—bliss!

Why, you for matrimony would mould
My fond paternal page;
I could not bear to leave them all—
I'll take—my—self—and—boys!

The smiling angel dropped his pen,—
"Why, this will never do;
The name could be but one again,
